Dir. Sharyn O'Hare opts against OPA board reelection bid

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) After three years in office that featured significant changes in the community's political landscape, Ocean Pines Association Director Sharyn O'Hare will not be running for reelection to the board of directors.

At least partially responsible for her decision is what she sees as an increasingly confrontational board of directors bent on trying to run the community on a day-to-day basis.

O'Hare, 67, moved to Ocean Pines in 1975 and began practicing real estate four years later. Both of her children were born in the community.

Her inadvertent journey into politics began with her involvement in the community's 35th anniversary celebration in 2003. After organizers raised more money than they needed, the excess dollars were put toward the Worcester County Veteran's Memorial, established in 2005.

O'Hare co-chaired the effort, along with the late Roseanne Bridgman.

"I did that for the community and it was just a labor of love," she said. "My father was a World War II vet and it was just one of those things that needed to be done."

"Through [veteran's memorial] events, I started meeting a lot of people and knew a lot of people from having lived here and sold real estate for so long, and people starting asking me to run for the board," O'Hare continued.

"I always said, 'No, no, no' because I didn't have the time. Finally Tom Terry, who was on the board at the time, and Dan Stachurski did a one-two punch type thing. I was at the Lion's Club and I was cornered. I said, 'Okay, all right. I'll run, just leave me alone!'"

Despite experience as co-chair and eventually president of the veteran's memorial, as well as her tenure as president of the Worcester County Commission for Women, O'Hare said she never set her sight on politics.

"I didn't know how to run a campaign, so I said I would do it if I had help, and I had some great people who stepped up to be my campaign team

DG heading to zoning appeals board

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) The clash over a potential Dollar General store on Old Ocean City Road near Healthway Drive in Berlin is headed back to the town's board of zoning appeals after a Worcester County Circuit Court judge decided on behalf of the developer last Thursday.

According to court documents, Attorney B. Randall Coates, representing Oxford Chase Development Inc., argued that the site plan rejection by Berlin's planning commission in March was without merit, and that the town's board of appeals should hear the matter.

Oxford Chase on Dec. 12 formally requested a building permit from the town for the construction of retail store in a commercial zone.

The Berlin planning commission on March 11 unanimously recommended that Planning Director Dave Engelhart deny the zoning certificate because of traffic problems its members argued would be caused by granting the property access to Route 346.

Engelhart did just that, citing a town code section involving highway corridor guidelines in a letter to the developer.

According to Engelhart, the planning commission, "specifically cited pedestrian and vehicular safety issues, traffic congestion, and access concerns for other properties in the surrounding area along Maryland Route 346."

"It is my decision to concur with this recommendation and deny the issuance of a zoning certificate for this proposed use as currently presented in your application," Engelhart wrote.

On the same day that Engelhart issued his denial, however, Coates called on the Board of Zoning Appeals to hear the case. "The denial is an erroneous decision or determination made by an administrative official," Coates wrote.

Town Attorney David Gaskill, however, countered in a letter to Coates that the appeals board would not be the proper venue and based his argument on Coates' reference to Engelhart as an "administrative official."

Coates, meanwhile, cited a portion of town code that specifically refers to the planning director as an administrative official. The section reads, "It shall be the duty of the planning director to serve as secretary and administrative officer for the board of appeals."

Circuit Court Judge Thomas C. Groton III apparently sided with Coates and ended the debate over semantics last Thursday by ordering that the case go before the zoning appeals board.

The hearing is expected to take place in May.

Ocean Pines Director Sharyn O'Hare announced her intention to not run for reelection to the OPA board. O'Hare was elected to the board in 2013, serving one three-year term.

O'Hare: 'positive energy' abounded in Pines in 2013 and help me run," she said. "I started having coffees and got to meet a lot of people and came up with a campaign theme and worked from that. I kind of considered it an honor to be running. And then I was elected and I went, 'Oh my God, now what?'"

O'Hare took office in 2013. It was a time, she recalls, when good feelings ran rampant throughout the community.

"The new yacht club got passed that same timeframe, so there was a lot of positive energy going around in Ocean Pines," she said. "I'm a very positive person. I don't have time for negative vibes and negative feelings."

The learning curve, O'Hare said, was sharp during her first year on the board.

"I never served on any committees in Ocean Pines, but I had worked on a lot of things," she said. "But I didn't know the financial aspect. That was a huge learning curve. Probably the hardest one."

"The first year you're on the board you have to find out what the nuances are and what the needs are," O'Hare continued. "It's not just about the visible stuff. I went to meetings about the sewer department and county wastewater thinking this is not an exciting thing to do, but it was rather interesting when I got there. The things behind the scenes are not as fun as something like the yacht club, but they're just as important."

Her second year on the board, when she served as vice president, was the "best and most valuable," O'Hare said.

O'Hare: 'anger expressed by board members unacceptable'

"I worked with the general manager and the president very closely, as well as the other board members, trying to make things happen in a positive mode in Ocean Pines," she said. "I think things were going very well. Every week we were in [General Manager] Bob's [Thompson] office having meetings to understand what was going on, where the issues were, what could we do, who do we need to pull in, those kinds of things to help make the place better."

Looking to take some of the burden away from Thompson, O'Hare volunteered to chair the groundbreaking and ribbon-cutting at the new yacht club.

"I said, 'Let me do some of those little things to take them off your plate,' because you have to do it. It's for the community," she said. "And we did. Bob took things, Tom took things, I took things, other board members took things that they had their expertise in and we all tried to work together."

"We certainly didn't agree on everything and that's okay," O'Hare continued. "I don't think all board members should agree on everything. I don't think that's healthy. I think what is healthy is that you bring your thought process and your expertise to the board level, and then you make things better by what you contribute. What is unhealthy, I think, is what is going on now."

During her third year in office, O'Hare said the tone of the board took a darker turn.

"Everything changed after last year's election," she said. "The two members that lost, both of them existing board members, they were not confrontational. They didn't speak a lot, especially Jeff [Knepper]. Jeff was an attorney and he's a very good listener. When Jeff spoke, he had something very valuable to say, and I think people would listen."

O'Hare also lamented the defeat of incumbent Terri Mohr and said women bring a different approach to the board.

"We're not an in-your-face type," she said. "It's not a natural thing, at least for me. I can't speak for all women. I'm a compromiser, and I think women tend to be to solve problems. We don't have to man up and beat on our chest. We don't do that."

"I think women have an ability to bring unity, or try to, or compromise," O'Hare continued. "There have been many times in the board this year when I've asked for compromises and it's been shot down every single time I've tried. That's disheartening. I think there are some people on that board that don't understand what compromise means."

One instance of compromise the current board did accomplish, and O'Hare praised, was the passing of the fiscal year 2016 budget.

"Pat [Renaud] and Tom [Terry], they both crafted a budget that I think met both sides' needs," she said. "That was very positive, and that passed 4-3 because there was a compromise between both sides. I think it should have been unanimous, personally. Both sides gave."

The budget process had been a contentious one, reaching a boiling point when Vice President Marty Clarke stood up, frustrated over the continuation of the five-year funding tool, for the seventh year, and walked out of a public meeting in February.

"When I saw Marty jump up, I thought he was going to hit Bill [Cordwell]," O'Hare said. "I really thought he was going to. And I said, 'Gentlemen, sit down! We're all board members. Respect each other.' The president should have said that."

"The anger expressed by a couple board members is unacceptable," O'Hare continued. "When I ran, I honestly felt it was an honor and a privilege to run for the board. I really did, and I still do. What I don't understand is the animosity of current board members."

The hostility she perceives on the current board, O'Hare said, was the principal reason she decided not to seek a second term in office.

"I've done three years," she said. "I felt I was doing a lot of good for two years. This year I haven't been asked to do anything – not one thing. To my

April Child Abuse Awareness Month

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) As part of its efforts during Child Abuse Awareness Month, the Life Crisis Center in Salisbury is driving home the message to residents in Worcester, Wicomico and Somerset counties that silence is never the right answer when it comes to potential instances of child abuse.

Executive Director Michele Hughes said there are plenty of tools to assist victims of child abuse, starting with child advocacy centers such as Cricket Center in Berlin, which serves all of Worcester County.

“A child advocacy center is sort of an agreement among a very specific group of people who come to together to make a decision that they’re going to treat child abuse in a way that means that children are heard, they’re believed and they’re treated,” Hughes said.

“That’s what they do at the Cricket Center. The law enforcement and the child protective services do the investigations, and they do it in a way which is very sensitive to how children react to those things. That’s why you have a child advocacy center, because it’s not frightening to children.”

Before the Cricket Center was established, victims of child abuse in the county were required to tell and retell stories of their abuse several times, often at a number of different and potentially frightening locations.

“Usually the buildings were things like police departments and departments of social services – very frightening places to children,” Hughes said. “The Cricket Center is very welcoming to a child.”

At the center, specially trained forensic interviewers speak with the child, while law enforcement view the testimony in an adjacent room through a video monitoring system.

The center also houses the entire Worcester County Child Protective Services team and receives support from Atlantic General Hospital, social workers, the Maryland State Police, the Worcester County Sheriff’s Department and the Life Crisis Center, where staffer Cindy Cook doubles as a family advocate.

“She works with the nonoffending parent and the other siblings to try to make sure that they know what’s happening is the case goes to court,” Hughes said. “It helps the family to figure out how they’re going to deal with this.”

Hughes said child sexual abuse is at near-epidemic levels in the lower Eastern Shore counties, with Worcester, Wicomico and Somerset having the three highest rates in the state.

“Part of that is good reporting,” Hughes said. “We are very proud to say that these cases get reported down here. The school system does an excellent job of reporting, and that doesn’t happen elsewhere.

“A much larger percentage of these reports come from the school system here than anywhere else in the state, and that’s a good thing,” Hughes continued. “If it doesn’t get reported children don’t get treated and these guys don’t get off the street who perpetrate these things.”

Hughes underscored the importance of therapeutic treatment in cases of child abuse. The Life Crisis Center, for example, staffs seven trauma-trained therapists, including four child therapists.

“If you look at the National Children’s Advocacy Center in Huntsville they will tell you that is the most important piece of being a child advocacy center is the treatment,” she said. “It is critical. You don’t have a child advocacy center if you don’t have the therapy piece. If children are not treated it affects their entire life.”

Trauma therapists, Hughes said, teach a victim how to cope with instances of abuse.

“This happened to you. I can’t make you forget it, but what I can do is help you to recognize when these feelings are coming and how to deal with them,” she said.

Hughes also praised the Worcester County prosecutorial team.

“[State’s Attorney] Beau Oglesby is serious about this,” she said. “He’s serious about prosecuting child abuse cases and that trickles down through the staff. Also he’s got Abby Marsh there as the deputy, and Abby famously tried the Sarah Foxwell case in Wicomico County.

“He’s got people that are really knowledgeable on staff, and he’s very serious about making certain that they get these guys off the street,” Hughes continued. “You can be proud of the job that they do in Worcester County.”

If someone suspects a child may be a victim of abuse, Hughes urged that person to make a call to the department of social service’s child protective services office in Snow Hill at 410-677-6800 or 410-641-0097, or contact local law enforcement, or the Life Crisis Center.

knowledge, I don’t think our president has had one meeting with the GM since he’s become president. He’s certainly not called me once.”

“I have a lot to give and help with and I’m more than willing to,” O’Hare continued. “I’ve been in this community longer than anyone else on the board. And I’ve offered to help. But I can’t do it without authorization from the person in charge.”

The coming election, O’Hare believes, could be another referendum on General Manager Bob Thompson, meaning the current majority could increase its numbers.

“I would hope anybody running for the board would run without an agenda,” O’Hare said. “Run with an open mind and run with a positive attitude, and let’s make this foolishness stop. This arguing between each other – it makes no good happen. Let’s sit down as adults and work for what’s right for Ocean Pines. That’s what the purpose of the board is. We are not supposed to be running the day-by-day operations and that what this board is trying to do.”

O’Hare hopes to focus her life after politics on the more positive aspects of the community, including the veteran’s memorial, which first held its dedication and blessing a decade ago.

On Saturday, May 23, the Worcester County Veteran’s Memorial Foundation will host a cocktail party from 5-7 p.m. under a tent at the memorial grounds. The foundation will also mark the 10th anniversary of the memorial on Monday, May 25 at 11 a.m.

“I still have a lot of energy and a lot of interest,” O’Hare said. “They veteran’s memorial has always been near and dear to my heart, and I’m chairing the cocktail party and it’s going to be the party of the season. It’s going to be great, great fun for sure.

“Pretty soon, in a couple of years, it will be the 50th anniversary in Ocean Pines, and I will hope to have some role in that,” O’Hare added. “Who knows what the future holds, but I am not one to sit and eat bonbons.”

Cedar Chapel, WCDC await regs.

'Employment first' options could bring major overhaul to Newark and SH centers

By Brian Gilliland
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) New philosophies in the way disabled adults enter into and maintain employment could force major changes in the way students at the Cedar Chapel Special School are taught and adults at the Worcester County Developmental Center gain employment.

Of course, it first boils down to funding.

"The Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services contributes 50 percent of the funding for disabled adults," Jack Ferry, executive director of the development center, said, "and since they contribute so much money they have decided to start making rules."

The Affordable Care Act mandates this change and Maryland has until 2019 to develop an implementation plan. Both the WCDC and Cedar Chapel school, as well as the Eastern Shore delegation in the Maryland Assembly, have written letters in support of the existing system.

Currently, students at the school follow a needs-based curriculum designed to prepare them to enter the workforce or continue development at WDCD. Ferry said the goal is to pre-

Clients of the WCDC may choose to work at the developmental center in jobs earning less than minimum wage. For example, clients work to produce soap that the WCDC then endeavors to sell at venues including next weekend's Springfest. Soap sales brought in about $6,000 last year, Ferry said, and total salaries for clients are expected to break $100,000 this year.

Critics of the federally required structure maintain that its regulations eliminate client choice.

Outlined in the plan is an “employment first” approach that obligates students or clients to fail to obtain regular employment before being diverted into programs such as the

"It's like Henry Ford said, you can have any color you want as long as it's black," Ferry explained.

The impact would trickle down into student instruction at Cedar Chapel.

"The goal is to establish that we've tried everything we can to get adults out into the community. As a parent, I would find it difficult to place my child into that situation," Belinda Gulyas, principal of the Cedar Chapel school, said. Gulyas is also a member of the board of the WCDC.

"Our staff understands our students' needs. They understand the schedules, structures and the things they need. The child is set up to transition easily. Some may only be able to work for 30 minutes at a time successfully. At a normal job this isn't provided for," Gulvas said.

She also thinks it's counter to the goals of her school.

“What we do all day is proactive and sets our students up to be successful. Instead of success, it will prove they are unable,” she said.

Yet Gulyas has no desire to demonize other avenues of discussion concerning her students.

“The motivation for the change is inclusion. I understand that. Every person should be included in life, but we’re eliminating a part that has been really successful and is all-or-nothing in presentation,” she said.

Program Manager Wendy Myers made her case on behalf of the Cricket Center for town grants during a mayor and council meeting in Berlin on Monday, April 27.

Nonprofits make pitches in Berlin

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) A week after Berlin officials released a budget draft showing a potential $15,000 increase in appropriations for nonprofits, the mayor and Town Council fielded pitches by three such groups during their Monday night meeting.

All told, the draft includes $35,000 set aside for appropriations to nonprofits.

"I have to say that we're very selective," Mayor Gee Williams said during the meeting. "The council tries to do our best to choose nonprofits that specifically ... do things much more efficiently, much better, [and are] much more qualified to fill these needs than government."

Cricket Center Program Manager Wendy Myers spoke first for the Berlin-based child advocacy foundation.

The center, which covers all of Worcester County, has served more than 600 area children since opening its doors in 2009.

"Child sexual abuse is a crime of secrecy," Myers said. "Immediate psychological affects of child sexual abuse [include] isolation, fear, lack of trust [and] oftentimes spiral them into long-term problems, eating disorder, teen pregnancy, drug abuse."

The center combines the efforts of several agencies in one location, including law enforcement, forensic interviewers and social services.

"It's really important to have one interview so we're not re-traumatizing the child by the system created to protect the child," Myers said.

During the previous fiscal year the center provided services to 98 children, including over 460 hours of child trauma therapy hours. Cricket Center activity directly led to 13 arrests for child pornography, netting 149 years of jail time.

All services at the center are provided free of charge.

Worcester County Developmental Center Executive Director Jack Ferry spoke next on behalf of the Newark facility.

Ferry called the clients of the center, "the best people in the world."

"We provide employment opportunities, residential services, day habilitation training, and community-based individual support for adults who live with an intellectual disability," Ferry said.

A 2014 grant from the town went towards equipment and supplies to help clients earn a paycheck through employment, either at the center or in the community, according to Ferry.

"The main thing that we're doing at our center is employment," Ferry said. "We believe that economic independence comes before social independence."

In 2001, client payroll at the facility was less than $25,000, according to Ferry. That number grew to $72,000 in 2014, and is expected to top "six figures" in 2015.

Finally, Executive Director Steven Taylor and Volunteer Coordinator Maria Cusimano spoke on behalf of the Berlin Youth Club, a program of Worcester Youth and Family Counseling Services.

The program presents a number of projects and activities throughout the community, including partnerships with several other area groups. It was designed to offer cultural and educational experiences that fill the gaps between public and private school offerings.

"Our goal is for the children to learn and appreciate what the communities have to offer," Cusimano said. "Each child is encouraged to reach their full potential as a productive, responsible, caring person. We try to build their self-esteem and foster creativity and promote team work, and our community service projects try and teach them to give back to their community."

The program served 85 children during the previous year, with demographics split between 50 percent African-Americans, 37 percent Caucasian and 13 percent Hispanic.

Fundraiser for fire victims, May 2

Three families, including Johnson and two children, displaced by Berlin blaze

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) Several families, including Diksha Johnson and her two young children, were displaced by a devastating fire at the Trappe Creek Apartments on Bay Street in Berlin on April 3.

Now, the community is rallying around the families, and groups such as Soulful Gospel Events are holding fundraisers to gather donations.

"I heard about [the fire] through Facebook and I wanted to use my project called Soulful Gospel Events to be a blessing to the families, and just try to use the resources that I had to get the community involved," La'Reka Marshall said.

"Not only was Diksha Johnson affected by it, but both of her next-door neighbors were affected by it as well. I'm trying to get the community to help me help them."

Soulful Gospel's fundraiser will be held at Berlin Intermediate School on 309 Franklin Avenue on May 2 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Marshall will cater the event.

The Praise Dancer Gospel Singers will provide live entertainment during the fundraiser, along with additional musical acts and a standup comedian.

"Anybody that comes, they have to bring a donation in order to get in," Marshall said, adding that donations may come in the form of money, as well as clothing or food.

"It's just whatever is laid on the person's heart to do," she said. "We know that they need new living room furniture and we also have one young lady [affected by the fire], her electric bill is $1,000. So one of our goals is to raise that money to give to Marie Briddell so she will be able to pay that expense."

For those who cannot make the May 2 fundraiser, Marshall said additional items could be dropped off to members of her gospel committee in Berlin.

"Even if you do not want to attend, I do stress that things can be dropped off," she said. "We're trying to help out all of the families affected by this fire, and it's a total of 10 people."

For more information, call Marshall at 302-233-6160, or email cleaningscents@gmail.com.

Berlin youth club looks to introduce children to culture

Taylor said many of the children in the program have "never been to Asateague, never been to Snow Hill, certainly not Pocomoke."

"Exposing these kids to these different communities is introducing our culture, our history, who we are," Taylor said. "Taking them to these places and exposing them to things that are interesting and educational is just as important as the Shorebirds or bowling or the movies. It's a great program and it's very successful."

"They do learn to become civic minded because of the things that we introduce to them, and also because they learn well from one another," Taylor added.

Hill wins 'If I Were Mayor' contest

Worcester Prep fourth grader honored by Berlin council during meeting

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) Lindley Hill, a student at Worcester Preparatory School in Berlin, is the district winner of this year's "If I Were Mayor I Would" contest.

Sponsored by the Maryland Mayor's Association and the Chesapeake Employers Insurance Company, the contest asks fourth-graders to demonstrate language skills and social studies knowledge.

Hill was honored by the Berlin Mayor and Council during a public meeting on Monday, April 27.

"[She] has continued a tradition that very few towns in the state can claim," Mayor Gee Williams said during the meeting. "We're very proud of [her]."

Hill's essay imagined a place called "Happy Town" that happened to be exploring the possibility of building a playground with a skate park.

"In town, we took a vote and more people voted for the playground," Hill said, reading from the essay. "When I told the people of Happy Town that we would build a playground, some people were happy and some people were sad."

Looking to smooth over concerns, the mayor of Happy Town held a council meeting.

"At the meeting, we talked about the pros and cons of our skate park and the playground," Hill said. "I would try to make the citizen and elected officials live in peace in Happy Town."

"To do this, I would take them all to another city council meeting. At the meeting, we would talk about how more children could use the playground. Also, about how the other town knows how to skate. Also, that every child can afford the equipment that you need to be safe, such as the skateboard, padding for your elbows and knees, and a helmet. After that the citizens and the city council understood."

JOSH DAVIS/BAYSIDE GAZETTE

Worcester Prep fourth grader Lindley Hill read selections of her winning, "If I Were Mayor I Would" essay to Berlin Mayor Gee Williams and the town council during a public meeting on Monday, April 27.

Thanks to the deft dealings of the imagined mayor of the imagined town, all of the citizens supported the new playground following the second meeting.

"Everybody in Happy Town was satisfied and happy," Hill said.

Williams praised the essay, and warned that he could be calling on Hill in the near future to fill in during speaking engagements.

"I'm voting for her," Police Chief Arnold Downing quipped during the meeting.

Williams said Hill's essay would move on to the statewide contest, which includes essays from children in seven different districts.

"We may hear more news, but we're extremely proud," Williams said. "Thank you so much for the time and the very, very thoughtful effort."

District 2 Councilmember Lisa Hall extended an invitation to Hill and her family to the April 30 meeting of the Maryland Municipal League at Fager's Island in Ocean City.

Berlin SWAT sent to Baltimore to help during unrest

(April 30, 2015) Among the law enforcement agencies called on to assist during the Baltimore rioting and looting on Monday was the Berlin Police Department, which dispatched its SWAT team to the city at 7:30 that evening.

The department was called on by the State of Maryland Emergency Management Agency through the Worcester County Office of Emergency Services. The state emergency management agency is headed by Clay Stamp, who headed emergency services in Ocean City for years.

The Berlin department sent six members who reported to Baltimore City Police Headquarters.

Upon arrival in the city, Baltimore Police Command assigned the Berlin team to provide security for civil disorder officers who were holding established police lines. Berlin Police Units operated in the area of North and Philadelphia Avenues, which is the location where the CVS Pharmacy burned earlier in the day.

The Berlin team relieved other SWAT units who had responded from other surrounding jurisdictions and had been operating in that area since early Monday morning. Upon completion of this assignment, Berlin officers secured later in the morning on Tuesday and returned to Berlin.

Police are maintaining communication with the Office of Emergency Management for possible re-deployment to Baltimore as the situation unfolds.

BERLIN BRIEFS

By Josh Davis

Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) Among the topics discussed by the Berlin mayor and council Monday night were:

Yoga in the park

Mayor Gee Williams asked yoga instructor Emily Keen and Zenna Wellness Studio owner Chrissy Ehrhart to look for a nonprofit partner before seeking council approval for their yoga in the park project.

Keen hoped to hold the program on Sundays in Stephen Decatur Park at 6 p.m., and offered to donate partial proceeds to area teachers.

District 2 Councilmember Lisa Hall suggested the group look to Worcester Youth and Family Counseling Services for a partner.

"You're already giving free lessons to the Worcester Youth camp," Hall said. "You're part of their summer program of yoga. Maybe you and Worcester Youth could partner. They could be your nonprofit and you could take the money that you were talking about. Instead of giving it to the schools, you could donate it to Youth and Family Services. I think that conversation should happen."

Williams backed the idea.

"Not to give you any influence, but I think it's a wonderful idea," he said.

Bulk pickup

Spring bulk trash collection in Berlin will take place on Wednesday, May 6 and Wednesday, May 20. Collection is for residential properties only, and does not include regular household garbage. Vacant lots are also not included.

Items must be on the curb of the residence by 6 a.m. on the pickup date.

Acceptable pickup items include furniture, toilets and sinks, carpet, mattresses, tables and chairs, refrigerators, washers and dryers, small appliances, televisions, microwaves, computer components and small items placed in a container with a total weight less than 100 pounds.

Touch a Truck Day

The council voted to approve the second annual Touch a Truck Day for Saturday, May 30 from 10 a.m. to noon.

The electric department, police, fire, public works, and water and sewer in Berlin will all bring large-scale town vehicles for interactive displays aimed at children.

A rain date was set for Saturday, June 20.

Strategic plan

The council unanimously approved town government's 2016-2018 strategic plan.

"This is the plan that was the result of the multiple strategic planning sessions that we held ... primarily in February and early March," Williams said.

The plan included a statement of community values that read, "The town of Berlin is a safe, welcoming, innovative, can-do model small town that values its history, traditions and diversity. We embrace tolerance and inclusiveness."

Three-year goals laid out under the plan included increasing parks and recreational facilities, preserving Berlin traditions, enhancing public safety services, investing in infrastructure and promoting economic development and increasing employment opportunities.

"Lego" rain date

The first showing of the Movies in the Park and on Main Street series on Saturday, April 25 was postponed due to rain. The "Lego Movie" screening was rescheduled for Saturday, May 9 at dusk in Henry Park.

Wor. Arts Council to host inaugural race/walk May 16

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) Looking to spread the word about upcoming exhibitions and projects, and possibly to increase membership, the Worcester County Arts Council will hold its inaugural 5K Race/Walk for the Arts on Saturday, May 16.

Included in the $25 registration fee for the event is a T-shirt and a one-year membership to the arts council.

"We hope to do this every year. That way everybody can renew their membership." Board Member Erika Rittling Uebel said. "It's a membership drive, kind of like what NPR does, but we thought this would be more fun and interactive with the community, and raise awareness with runners and maybe reach a whole new group of people."

Executive Director Anna Mullis echoed the council's desire to raise its profile.

"We have several different programs that we sponsor and classes and grants and scholarships, but we wanted to offer something fresh, something different and take advantage of the nice weather," she said. "There are various different organizations that do this type of activity, and we liked the idea because it's open to people of all ages and they don't necessarily need to be art-oriented."

The arts council is working with OC Tri Running, which will be the host.

"They have a great database and they've hosted successful events in the area," Uebel said. "They take care of the registration and the planning and the course and all of that."

Uebel said entrants could register online until the day before the event, or in person on the day of the event, although T-shirts may be limited to pre-registrants.

The race/walk will start at 8 a.m. at the council building on 6 Jefferson Street in Berlin, head towards Worcester Prep and circle back. Mayor Gee Williams is expected to send off participants prior to the start.

As an incentive, handmade awards will be handed out to top finishers at the completion of the event.

"Instead of just giving out the typical medal, each board member was asked to create or do an award," Uebel said. "I think it's kind of funny and quirky."

Uebel said the council would also distribute pamphlets touting council activities.

"I don't think the community knows everything that we do contribute to," she said. "We plan to have some paraphernalia out where people can see all the different things we do contribute to, like the Brown Box Theatre Project and the Ocean City Art League, and 'Cinderella' we helped with."

"When they see that, I think there will be a little more of a connection to how important the art council is and

Crews from A-Del Construction Co. finally began work on the long-delayed sidewalk connecting Stephen Decatur Park to downtown Berlin along Tripoli Street.

Despite delays, Berlin sidewalk breaks ground

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) After months of delays and almost comical levels of complications, construction finally began on a sidewalk connecting Stephen Decatur Park to downtown Berlin on Wednesday, April 22.

The project appeared to be close to reality as far back as July 2014, when easements from a holdout homeowner in the sidewalk's path threw a wrench in the works.

During a public meeting in August, Water Resources/Public Works Director Jane Kreiter stressed the urgency of the project, calling it a safety issue await action by the Town Council.

"That's a heavily traveled area, and if somebody is walking and there aren't sidewalks then you're sharing the road with all the cars that are coming and going," she said at the time.

Sidewalk connects Decatur Park, Main Street in Berlin

The easement issue was resolved soon after, and on Oct. 14 the council approved a $61,402.60 bid by Worth Construction to build the sidewalk, running from South Main Street down Tripoli Street to the park.

Construction was slated to start in November, when scheduling conflicts with the Maryland Department of the Environment, required to conduct an onsite preconstruction survey, pushed back the start date.

Then, poor weather conditions and an overbooked schedule on the part of the contractor again stalled the project.

"We had all the nasty snow and everything and then the ground was frozen and actually we switched contractors because [Worth] got backed up," Kreiter told the Gazette last week. "We left on good terms, it's just he's been backed up from his other job. We'll still do other things with him."

This time, Berlin went with Newark, Del.-based A-Del Construction Co. Inc., and things appear to be running smoothly.

"It looks like they're moving along pretty good already, so hopefully we don't have any other delays," Kreiter said. "It's really been unbelievable up to this point."

A-Del was contracted to complete the first phase of the sidewalk from South Main Street, down Tripoli, and stopping just before hitting a ditch on the way to the park. Kreiter said the town is exploring grant options for phase two of the project, completing the connection to Stephen Decatur Park.

"The plans have been drawn up, but because we're putting pavers in and that sort of thing, it was pretty expensive," Kreiter said. "It's already designed, and certainly we'll move forward with it as finances allow."

The project is the first of many the town hopes to tackle during the coming year. A fiscal year 2016 budget draft released last week includes more than $170,000 in sidewalk and street repairs on Baker Street, Bryan Avenue, Cedar Avenue, Branch Street West, Grace Street, Flower Street, Maple Avenue and Tingle Road.

Correction

An article about the fiscal year 2016 Berlin budget published in the Bayside Gazette on April 23 said the draft included, "a $50,000 Department of House and Community Development façade grant for the new art gallery on South Main Street."

The town received a $50,000 Community Legacy façade grant from the Department of Housing and Community Development in 2013 to use to encourage businesses in the Main Street district to make improvements or fix their storefront facades, according to Economic and Community Development Director Ivy Wells.

Wells the 50/50 reimbursable matching grant program does not cost the town additional funding and is a "budget neutral line item."

"I offer all business and property owners a portion of that grant [up to $10,000] to use as an incentive to beautify the façades of their buildings," Wells said. "All commercial businesses in the Main Street district are entitled to apply for the façade grant. The application can be found at: <http://berlinmd.gov/wp-content/uploads/2014/07/Facade-Improvement-Program.pdf>."

Artists Franz and Hastings to be featured in OP library

(April 30, 2015) Two artists will be featured at the Ocean Pines library in May.

Wayne Franz, photographer/oil painter, will showcase his work in the main common areas of the library.

Franz is a self-taught artist and resides in the Parke at Ocean Pines. He uses film for many of his photographs which he develops himself. His early painting/work experience includes assisting Professor Francis Hoffman as an apprentice. Hoffman taught painting and fine arts at the Maryland Institute.

Franz's present work is influenced by the Dutch artists of the 1600's and is also by the English Landscape style of painting.

Born and raised in Baltimore, Franz's work career was in the printing industry. He was employed for several years at Peninsula Press in Salisbury. During this period, he traveled to fishing and crabbing villages on the Eastern Shore.

He honed his skill photographing skip jacks, oyster boats, historical local houses and harbors. Many of these have disappeared from the landscape and are now history.

Mary Jane Hastings' acrylic paintings will be on display in the two computer rooms to the right of the common areas.

Hastings has made art an important part of her life. Although she has been painting since she was a child, she became more serious about her art after taking classes at Salisbury University in art history and studying with Professor Progar.

She moved to Ocean Pines 21 years ago and paints in her studio almost every morning. Her exhibitions have been seen at galleries and libraries in Salisbury, Berlin and Ocean City, where she has won many prizes.

She is most proud of the award given by The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution for her painting, "Hand Sewing the American Flag," which she won in its American Heritage Contest.

A prolific artist, she paints some very large pieces and some as small as one inch square. Presently, her miniatures are on display at the Ocean City Center for the Arts, where she was the Artist in Residence for March. Hastings does not like to be called an artist.

"Art does not need me, but I need art," she said.

Police called to help elsewhere sad situation

It's a sad state of affairs indeed when local law enforcement agencies are called on to help quell violence in any jurisdiction other than their own, and it's even more unsettling when they are needed in a metropolitan area.

This isn't to suggest that our police aren't capable of doing the job if called upon. Quite the contrary is true, since they would not have been contacted at all if the leadership of the Maryland Emergency Services Agency hadn't thought they were qualified.

It also didn't hurt that the director of that agency is Clay Stamp, a local product who is well aware of the resources in the coastal communities, having proved himself some years ago as the resort's emergency services director.

In that sense, the level of trust in our police is a good thing, but it remains a terrible business that requires them to be needed elsewhere in the first place.

Monday's violence in Baltimore will spawn all sorts of explanations and analyses of its possible cause. Most of them will have little to do with the tragic incident that preceded it – the death of Freddie Gray during the course of his arrest by Baltimore Police for no clear reason other than he ran when he saw them.

The rioting, looting and burning that occurred on the day of his funeral was about something else and all people can do is offer theories that will justify whatever it is they are predisposed to believe.

Besides, pinpointing the actual cause wouldn't mean anything without also pinpointing the real solution.

Just about everyone in this area probably thought at some point early in the week how lucky we are to live where we do. At the same time, however, the call-up of local police to help protect that city and its residents from harm also shows how some events, no matter how far away they may be, affect us all.

OC Community Health Fair, May 5

Increased screenings at event thanks to partnership with AGH

By Zack Hoopes
Staff Writer

(April 30, 2015) The 29th annual Ocean City Community Health Fair will be held from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Tuesday, May 5, at the Roland E. Powell Convention Center on 40th Street, featuring 89 health and medical service vendors as well as eight different free screenings and tests.

"We're able to offer a lot more screenings to the public due to our cooperation with Atlantic General Hospital," said Dr. Melvin Friedman, the AARP's Health Committee chair.

This will be the ninth year that Friedman has organized the free event, which the Ocean City AARP Chapter 1917 co-sponsors alongside AGH and the Town of Ocean City.

It will also be the second year of the event's re-branding as the Ocean City Community Health Fair, as opposed to the former AARP Health Fair.

"We did that consciously to attract a younger crowd. When people saw 'AARP,' they'd assume it was just for older folks," Friedman said. "I would say most of the crowd is still 50 on up. We always hope for a younger group to show, though."

Besides demographics, Friedman has also seen the fair's role change rapidly. Undoubtedly, the healthcare industry in Worcester County has undergone a huge boom in the past decade.

"We've gotten a lot more medical facilities in the area [in the past decade]," Friedman, a former pharmacologist, said. "At the beginning, there just weren't that many."

But where the fair once had to stretch to find exhibitors, there's now a waiting list. Although 89 is the current cap, Friedman may be able to squeeze a few more vendors into the convention center's upstairs hallway by Tuesday.

Correspondingly, while the fair currently draws around 500 attendees, it previously saw twice that number, back when the AARP event was the only game in town, so to speak.

"When this first started, there were close to 1,000 people that came though, because there weren't other services out there," Friedman said. "There are still plenty of people who can't afford insurance. I can't tell you how many people stop me and say they rely on this event every year because they still don't have insurance that will cover these screenings."

All of the services offered at Tuesday's event are free of charge. All testing is done by AGH, and users are sent their results in the mail. Those planning to get a blood test, remember to fast for 12 hours prior to the fair.

This will also be the first year of participation by the Blood Bank of Delmarva. Several local businesses will be providing snacks and beverages for those who give blood during the fair.

The Blood Bank of Delmarva will be holding a blood drive throughout the event as well. To make an appointment with the Blood Bank call, 888-8BLOOD (888-825-6638).

Friedman wished to thank Dawn Denton of AGH and AARP 1917 President Chris Norris for their continued support in helping him put on the event.

For more information, call the Atlantic General Hospital Community Education office at 410-641-9268.

PTA hosts May 4 raffle fundraiser for Berlin school

(April 30, 2015) The Berlin Intermediate School PTA is holding a raffle fundraiser to raise money for the students on Monday, May 4 at Sweet Frog, located in the 67th Street TownCenter.

Each year, the PTA hosts a variety of fundraisers to raise money for student programs and activities. One of the final events to be held is a raffle of 10 gift baskets to be awarded. There will be a drawing for each of the 10 gift basket.

The gift baskets are comprised of a large variety of donations from area businesses: Back Bay Adventures, Rum Pointe Seaside Golf Links, Bay-side Skillet, The Original Greene Turtle, Atlantic Physical Therapy Health & Fitness Center, Bunting Landscaping, Creative Day Spa, Kitty's Flowers, Lighthouse Sound Restaurant, Treasure Chest, D.A. Free open house at Ocean Pines Sports Core Pool (April 30, 2015) Ocean Pines Aquatics will host an open house at the Sports Core Pool on Saturday, May 2 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Guests will have free use of the pool, located at 11143 Cathell Road in Ocean Pines, during the open house. Food will be available for purchase, and the Ocean Pines Volunteer Fire Department's fire-house moon bounce will also be on site.

In addition to showcasing aquatics programs in Ocean Pines, the open house will recognize National Water Safety Month. Information about those programs and staying safe in the water will be shared.

Ocean Pines will be offering a variety of summer swim programs this summer, including indoor and outdoor swim lessons for all ages, aquatics fitness classes, summer camps and family swim events.

Aquatics will once again take part in the World's Largest Swim Lesson on June 18, and hold an Anna and Elsa Tea Party and Swim, featuring the popular "Frozen" characters, on July 11.

For more information about the open house or other aquatics events contact the Ocean Pines Aquatics Department at 410-641-5255.

Bishop's Stock hosts plein air show in May

Paint Snow Hill artists and southern Maryland author, Gary Pendleton, featured (April 30, 2015) During May, Bishop's Stock will celebrate plein air painting with work by Gary Pendleton from North Beach in southern Maryland.

Pendleton is the past president of the Mid-Atlantic Plein Air Painters Association and the author of 100 Plein Air Painters of the Mid-Atlantic, published in 2014 by Schiffer books.

As a native Marylander, he finds inspiration in every corner of the state, from the Chesapeake Bay to Appalachian Mountains and beyond. Whenever possible, he takes his easel out to paint in the towns, cities and natural areas. The regular practice of painting from life, "en plein air," allows him to create the feeling of light and atmosphere in his paintings. His love of plein air painting also lead him to research and write about regional artists who share his interest.

His book is a catalog of regional paintings. It is packed with more than 400 color reproductions of work by some of today's finest landscape artists, including Kirk McBride, Lynn Lockhart, David Diaz, Stan Sperlak, Carole Boggemann Pierson and Leslie Belloso.

The book not only documents the contemporary art scene, it includes a concise history of landscape painting in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. This is an ideal book for anyone who appreciates the Mid-Atlantic landscape or has an interest in painting.

It is a wonderful introduction to traditional art of the region, and it will also appeal to art historians and collectors.

The opening reception is Friday, May 1 from 5-8 p.m. at the Snow Hill shop. Pendleton will sign books that will be for sale at the gallery. Also showing will be a selection of plein air paintings created during Paint Snow Hill 2015. A number of these paintings were painted by artists featured in Pendleton's book.

For more information contact Bishop's Stock at 410-632-3555 or info@bishopsstock.com.

Plate so easy board member could make it

(Reprinted from Bayside Gazette May 1, 2014 issue)

Yesterday at the club, I had the opportunity to discuss life, liberty and the pursuit of bigger and better things in Ocean Pines with one of the directors on the board. While we may not have agreed on everything (disagreement and discourse being some of the great blessings of a community within a democracy), the conversation quickly turned to the topics of the military and food. They were not subsequent topics; we were merely bouncing around.

By Paul Suplee,

In the midst of our friendly tête-à-tête, he told me that he read my column regularly but that he didn't, or rather couldn't, cook what I had to offer up in my weekly ramblings. I assured him that I would find something for him to master before long.

Getting home from work, it was hard to believe that it was time to cook dinner. In my mind I start reeling that maybe I need to invest in that Jetsons-style self-cooking system that I saw so often as a child. Maybe that could be a project for my kids and me someday, but I don't see any good reason to go off on that tangent right now.

It was time to turn to the bookshelf. My wife recently purchased me a new cookbook from Amazon from L&L Barbecue in Hawaii, my stomping grounds on the Big Island when we visited there. The food at L&L is ono — broke mouth and nothing short of it.

I believe I wrote about food being broke mouth last year. "Broke Mouth" is pidgin for "damned good!" If something you fed to a guest "Broke da mouth," you can rest assured that if it was a Hawaiian dish they are not talking about cracked teeth or anything damaging. It's a compliment, and I fondly remember the first time that an islander had my fish tacos at The Reel Inn last summer. He told me they "broke da mouth" and I was afraid my days were numbered at the Inn.

And that is exactly why I love etymology.

The more I travel, the more I realize that I know next to nothing, reflecting one of Voltaire's most famous maxims.

So despite the fact that I am cooking dinner after cooking at the club after grading papers on food and ingredients after writing tests on food, I at least am happy to be thinking about the islands again. Hawaii brought me great peace, and still does.

Nothing takes me back to Kona or Ocean View like a simple plate lunch, the ubiquitous midday meal of the island. Rice, chicken, vegetables and sweet and salty Hawaiian barbecue sauce. Nothing about it is expensive and nothing is difficult. It very well could be the perfect daily meal. It's delicious, it's mostly healthy and it's simple.

Hey, it's a lunch so easy that even a board member can cook it.

Hawaiian plate lunch

serves 6

- 1 whole chicken, split and broken down
- 1 cup Hawaiian barbecue sauce (recipe follows)
- 3 cups cooked brown Basmati with Kombu (recipe follows)
- 4 cups vegetable medley (recipe follows)
- sesame oil, as needed
- salt and pepper as needed

Step 1: Brush the chicken with the barbecue sauce and either grill or cook in a hot pan

Step 2: Make sure that the internal temperature of the chicken reaches 165 degrees and let rest for at least 10 minutes before serving

Step 3: Serve with hot rice and vegetables, topping with a touch more Hawaiian barbecue sauce as desired

Brown rice

- 1 cup brown Basmati rice
- 2 cups water
- 1 Tbsp. rice vinegar
- 1/2-inch by 1/2-inch square kombu
- Small piece of roasted nori, shaved

Step 1: Let's keep it easy. Throw everything in the rice cooker and set for 35-40 minutes

Step 2: When done, fluff the rice and check for doneness

Step 3: Discard kombu and serve rice with sesame seeds and shaved nori

Hawaiian barbecue sauce

- 2 Tbsp. flour
- 1 cup soy sauce
- 1 cup water
- 2 cloves fresh garlic, crushed
- 3/4 inch piece fresh ginger, peeled and crushed
- Pepper, as needed

Step 1: Combine the flour with just enough soy to make a paste

Step 2: Slowly add more soy and water until fully incorporated and smooth

Step 3: Add remaining ingredients and bring to a boil

Step 4: Skim the scum off of the top and let the sauce simmer to develop in flavor; maybe 15 minutes tops

Step 5: Strain through a fine mesh sieve and cool

Step 6: Use as needed. Will keep in a sealed container in the icebox for weeks and weeks, bordering on months. I'll leave that one up to you

Vegetable medley

- 3 cups assorted vegetables
- 2 Tbsp. light sesame oil
- Soy sauce, as needed

Step 1: If you cut the vegetables small enough, just cook them in a small amount of water until tender

Step 2: Drain and add the oil and soy (optional) as your salt. In this instance, easier is better
