Pines contention continues as new study data released

(June 25, 2015) After more than a month, at least one member of the Ocean Pines Association Board of Directors says he has not received a requested update on facility usage statistics in the community – and he's not happy about it.

The latest controller's report, listing May financials, is also noticeably absent.

During a May meeting, General Manager Bob Thompson and several representatives from the 17-member facility use group met with the board to discuss their work on crafting a new policy for use of Ocean Pines' many amenities. At the time Board President Dave Stevens was among several members to ask for more information from the collective, including a comprehensive list of usage requests.

"Who used it, how much did they use it, and how much, if anything, did they pay for it?" Stevens asked. "I want to know what database you were working from."

Although Thompson agreed to provide that information during the next regular board meeting, no information was provided during the May 28 regular board meeting, and Thompson, on Monday See THOMPSON Page 8

Denton, Bonser found guilty of Berlin vandalism

Judge Purnell orders nearly $9,000 in restitution, 450 hours of community service

(June 25, 2015) Jordan Denton and Nicholas Bonser, both 18, pleaded guilty to 22 counts of malicious destruction of property in connection with the Jan. 25 vandalism spree in Berlin during a hearing at Worcester County District Court in Snow Hill last Friday.

Denton and Bonser were ordered to pay $8,843.06 in restitution in total, complete 150 hours of community service each, and write letters of apologies to the town of Berlin.

A third defendant in the case pleaded guilty to all 40 charges levied during a separate hearing in juvenile court, and was also required to pay restitution, serve 150 hours of community service and write a letter to the town.

Assistant State's Attorney William McDermott spoke to more than a dozen vandalism victims before the hearing in order to confirm that each had submitted correct restitution figures.

McDermott told the victims that, of the three defendants, two were juveniles at the time the crimes were committed. The state's attorney's office decided that Bonser, no longer a juvenile, would face charges as an adult.

McDermott said no plea deal was offered to the unnamed juvenile defendant.

During the hearing, Denton pleaded guilty to malicious destruction of property under $1,000, while Bonser pleaded

Additionally, both entered guilty pleas for malicious destruction-scheming valued at more than $1,000.

McDermott said he would provide the court with a list of parties who would receive restitution.

Judge Purnell calls vandal sentence 'fair and balanced' morning state's evidence would have shown that on Jan. 25, 2015, the town of Berlin [suffered] acts of vandalism across the entire town," McDermott said. "It included many vehicles, buildings, trashcans and electric meters."

McDermott said almost the entire Berlin Police Department responded to multiple locations throughout the town on the night of the incident.

"Investigations and tips from the community quickly narrowed the suspects to Jordan Denton ... and Nicholas Bonser ... and one juvenile who has already pled involved in this matter," McDermott said. "Subsequent investigations led [Berlin] Detective [Jason] Burnett to WalMart, located in Berlin, where he was able to obtain video surveillance depicting all three suspects, to include the two defendants before your honor this morning, entering the Walmart prior to the acts of vandalism, all participants, smiling as they entered, picking up several cans of spray paint, all matching the types of spray paint used in the vandalisms, and exiting the store without attempting to pay for them."

Denton and Bonser, McDermott said, gave oral and written confessions to acts of vandalism including trash cans and electric meters belonging to the town of Berlin, as well as Renaissance Plaza, Evergreen Masonic Lodge and Town Center Antiques in Berlin, and vehicles belonging to several Berlin residents, the Wicomico County State's Attorney's Office and Nestle Dryer's Ice Cream.

Judge Gerald V. Purnell accepted the pleas of both defendants and found both guilty.

"I'm going to sentence them to what the state has asked and what you've agreed to," he said. "It seems to be fair and balanced to both sides."

Purnell added, "It sounds like graffiti gone awry to me [and] it sounds fair to the court."

Attorneys for both defendants requested probation before judgement concerning the possibility of additional probationary terms added to the sentences.

"Let's make sure everything is done, everybody's been paid, all the community service hours have done, [they] have the apology letters that you asked for, and if they are first offenders you can do it by way of motion – file a motion within 90 days," Purnell said.

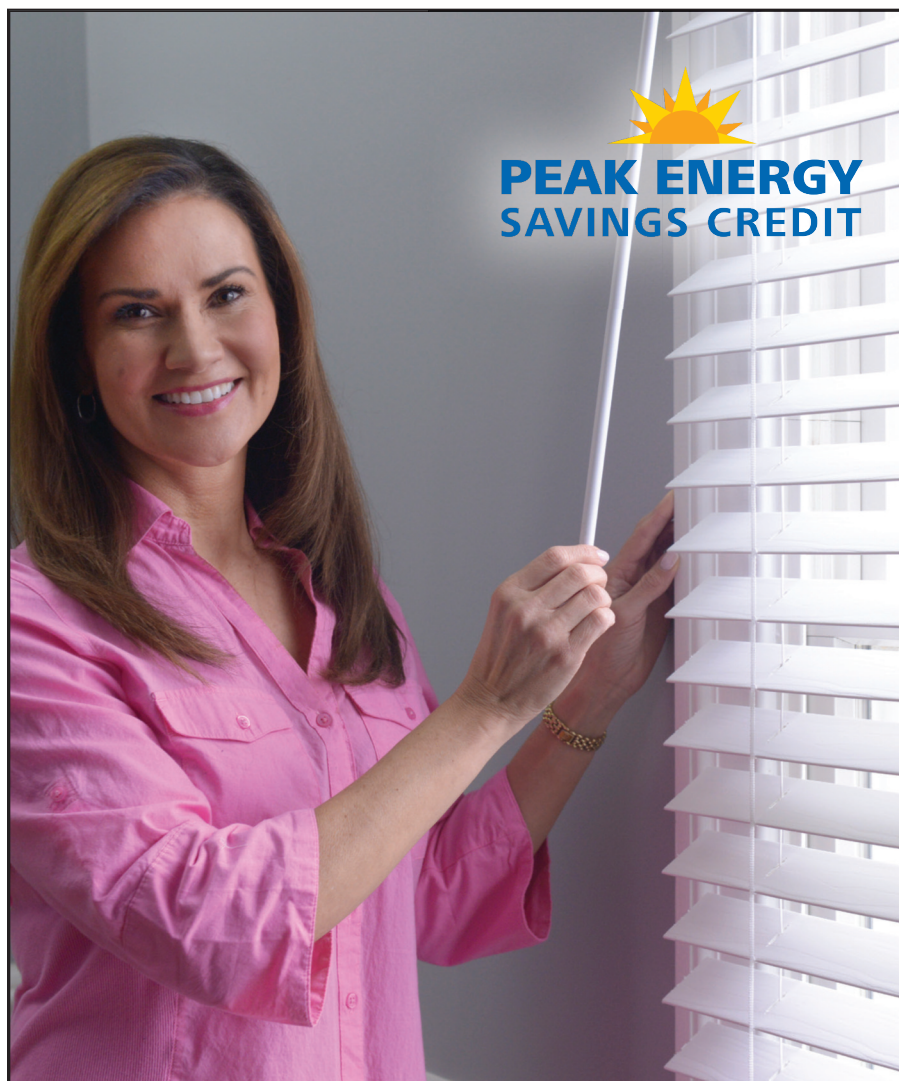

While Denton is a first offender, Bonser pleaded guilty to a shoplifting charge before the same court on May 29.

McDermott again met with several of the victims following the hearing.

Because the defendants pleaded guilty to the scheming charge, he said, most or all of the victims would be covered.

"Even though your name wasn't called it doesn't mean that you don't get restitution," he said.

McDermott also said it was unlikely that Bonser would be eligible for proba-

Nick Bonser, 18, was subdued, sitting with his mother, prior to a hearing on Friday. The Berlin resident pleaded guilty, along with 18-year-old Jordan Denton, in connection to a January spray paint spree in Berlin.

Bonser and Denton plead guilty to 22 counts of MDOP

tion before judgement.

“They have straight convictions right now for 22 counts of MDOP [malicious destruction of property],” he said. “They will not even be considered for probation before judgment until they’ve paid all the restitution. And I will tell you that Mr. Bonser will not get a probation before judgement because he has a prior conviction.”

McDermott added that Denton could be eligible for probation before judgement, due to her age and lack of prior convictions, if all of the conditions are met within 90 days.

The Berlin Police Department originally estimated damages totaling more than $11,000. That number decreased, McDermott said, because some victims “used elbow grease” to remove spray paint on their property. He added that the amount of community service hours he requested was based on the estimated number of hours residents “used to clean their vehicles.”

McDermott added that the 450 total hours of community service and the amount of restitution required within 90 days was virtually impossible, and that three-to-five years of supervised probation would likely be imposed on each de-

AGH walk-in clinics to close

(June 25, 2015) Atlantic General Hospital will close two of its Atlantic ImmediCare walk-in clinics located at the Rite Aids in Millsboro, Del. and Ocean Pines.

Walk-in services will remain available at the Atlantic Health Center on Healthway Drive in Berlin and at the ImmediCare location on 10th Street in Ocean City.

This closure will occur June 30.

"We have made this decision to be responsive to the needs of our community, by providing the walk-in medical services individuals need the most in locations that are most convenient for them," said James Brannon, vice president of professional services at Atlantic General Hospital.

Walk-in clinics provide care when the primary provider is unavailable, or for unexpected medical problems.

Plans are underway to expand hours and services at the Atlantic Health Center location in the near future.

Jordan Denton and Nick Bonser were sentenced to pay nearly $9,000 in total restitution and ordered 150 hours of community service, each, after pleading guilty to vandalizing several buildings and more than 30 automobiles in Berlin in January.

McDermott praises Berlin police work in vandal case

fendant in addition to the court's original ruling

“For all that has to be forthcoming in 90 days, I can tell you that it won’t happen,” he said. “It’s going to take years for them to do that.”

“The two of them, at 18 years old, just walked out with 22 convictions,” McDermott continued. “It’s pretty awful when you’re that young to walk out with that many convictions and a $9,000 tag and 450 hours of community service. What they did was awful [and] the price they’re going to pay is pretty close to what happened.”

McDermott said he previously told several of the victims that the likelihood of incarceration was low based on the ages and prior records of the defendants.

"I wasn't expecting them to go out in handcuffs, but I'll tell you now that if they violate their probation, i.e., they don't pay their money or they don't do their community service, we're going to be here," he said. "I will be a dog with a bone ... We will be here for violations of probations, and I will be asking for jail time."

He also praised Berlin law enforcement.

“Honestly, I want you guys to go and thank the Berlin Police Department because they’re the real heroes in this case,” he said. “Their work was exemplary and outstanding, and they were all consummate professionals. You guys are so lucky to have the Berlin Police Department. They were amazing. Go home and thank them, because they did this.”

Worcester County Tourism Director Lisa Challenger, one of the victims, said she was happy with the outcome of the hearing.

"I'm glad they pled guilty and owned up to what they did and I'm glad they're going to be made to pay restitution," she said.

Worcester County State's Attorney Beau Oglesby also provided a statement on Friday.

"The office is very pleased with the outcome because we accomplished all of our goals, including making our victims whole, protecting the community and holding the offenders accountable," he said. "Through the number of convictions as a result of the case itself, that gave the court the appropriate tools that it needed to make sure that sanctions were imposed, that there was accountability for the offender's actions, and really through that community service that there's going to be some return to the town of Berlin.

"Also as those hours are completed, every hour that is completed I hope those offenders are thinking about how foolish their behavior was and how you're simply not going to walk away from something like that in Worcester County," Oglesby added.

If the defendants cannot fulfill their sentence in 90 days, Oglesby said, "The court can get creative."

Oglesby said he was pleased with McDermott, who acted as lead prosecutor, and credited the Berlin Police Department with the final outcome.

"You take the great job that the Berlin Police Department did and you throw in being efficient and being effective in dealing with the victims and their willingness to correspond with us and keep us informed about their restitution figures and their availability for court, it's a lot of work by a lot of different people."

said he did not plan to share any new information during the next regular meeting, on June 25.

He did, however, say the information had been sent to the directors.

"I have provided information in their board boxes Friday of last week," Thompson said. "We printed it and pulled it off the system and it was almost the size of a phone book, so we actually tried a couple ways to consolidate it and then just ended up hand-computing to put it on four pages, versus 400."

The additional time, Thompson said, was required because "this was not a normal record."

"It took a little longer than we anticipated, but it's really no big deal," he said.

"This was a compilation of a number of things we needed to kick around, and that's why I didn't want to fully roll it out until we vetted. We need to apply common sense."

Not so fast, said Board Vice President Marty Clarke, who spoke with Michelle Bennett, executive secretary to the general manager, on Monday.

"I asked her if there was an updated controller's report in my box and she said no," Clarke said. "I asked her if there was anything on the facility usage and she said no. I said, 'are you sure?' She said, 'Marty, I'm looking right at it.'"

Clarke added, "Either Bob Thompson or Michelle Bennett is a liar, and I know Michelle as a good, honest, Christian

Ocean Pines Boat Club's parade set for noon, July 25

(June 25, 2015) The Ocean Pines Boat Club will present its annual boat parade, Saturday, July 25.

Participants do not need to be a member of the club to join the parade, which will begin and end at the Swim and Racquet Club, on Seabreeze Road in North Ocean Pines. Boats will line up at 11 a.m., and the parade will start at noon.

The theme of this year's parade is "Days of Yore," meaning years gone by up to the current time. Some suggestions for boat themes include: the Middle Ages, such as kings and queens; The Wild Frontier, such as cowboys and Indians, or anything historical.

Awards will be presented for Best in Parade, Best Theme, Best Costumes and Best Design.

There is a small entry fee of $10 per boat. The awards ceremony will be held later that day at 4 p.m. at the White Horse Park pavilion.

Parade rain date is Sunday, July 26. To participate or for more details, contact Fred Heinlen at 410-208-3165, fheinlen5@msn.com or Steven Stein at 410-641-8930, spikere@aol.com.

The controller's report, according to the general manager's office, was delayed for two reasons: the office had computer troubles, and the controller was bogged down with year-end audits.

Meanwhile two other members of the board, including Parliamentarian Tom Terry, insisted the facilities usage information was in the directors' mailbox.

"That information was put in the mailboxes [Monday] morning," Terry said. "I don't know if was put in there after Marty called. I'm assuming that's what happened here."

The Gazette obtained a copy of a six-page report titled "Community Organizations Using Ocean Pines Community Center and Country Club For 2013 Regular Meetings" on Tuesday. In the first half of the report, 58 separate organizations were listed, along with the number of members, number of resident members, nonresident members and the average attendance during meetings.

The second half of the report listed 55 organizations, type of event, number of members, resident members, nonresident members, average attendance, room use, number of meetings each year, hours per meeting and hours per year. A final, totals page listed 3,053 total members of organizations using Ocean Pines facilities, 2,579 of which were residents versus 474 nonresidents. Total attendance in 2013 reached 2,405 over 1,452 meetings totaling 4,585.25 hours.

The Ocean Pines Boat Club will present its annual boat parade, Saturday, July 25. This group's boat theme last year was Wizard of Oz.

Community remembers former OP Chamber's Felty

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) Reba Felty, a former member of the Ocean Pines Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors from 2004-2007, passed away on June 12 at Coastal Hospice on the Lake in Salisbury.

Felty battled ovarian cancer for four years before succumbing to the disease at the age of 52.

The oldest of three siblings, Felty is survived by her sister Kim Fillinger, brother Evan Felty, nephew Owen Fillinger, nieces Shelby Fillinger and Paige and Piper Felty, and her godson Cameron DiPerna.

"Our deepest sympathy to Reba's family, friends and community," Ginger Fleming, Executive Director of the Ocean Pines Chamber of Commerce, said in a statement on Tuesday. "The Ocean Pines Chamber of Commerce was truly blessed to have had her on our board for so many years. I had the privilege to work with Reba at Hospitality Golf and Sales in 2005. I learned an incredible amount from her, businesswise and personally. She will be forever missed and loved."

Melanie Purcell, director of the Greater Ocean City Chamber of Commerce, also issued a statement.

"Reba donated many hours of her time to nonprofit organizations," Purcell said. "She was one of the original Ocean City Chamber of Commerce ambassadors."

Felty was also member of the Worcester County Humane Society, Optimist Club and Ocean City Hotel-Motel Restaurant Association, among other organizations.

"A huge void has been created in her passing," Purcell said. "She was loved by all and always lit up a room with her smile."

Patricia Ilczuk-Lavanceau served with Felty in the Ocean City Chamber's ambassador program.

"Reba was loving, giving, direct – very direct," she said. "She did a lot of work for charities. She didn't have any children, but she was president of the OC Boosters, she won the Charitable Souls award from the Dispatch, and she won a tourism award for her hospitality giving, which is one of the highest honors you can win from the tourism industry."

Reba Felty, a former member of the Ocean Pines Chamber of Commerce, right, passed away earlier this month at the age of 52. She is pictured here with her oldest niece, Shelby Fillinger, in the Ocean City Winterfest of Lights hot chocolate booth, where she volunteered for several years.

"I loved her because we could have a conversation without talking – we would finish each other's sentences. She was like a sister to me," Ilczuk-Lavanceau added.

Dawn Hodge, a former neighbor, called Felty, "one of the most kind and generous people I've ever met."

"I know she's in a better place now," she said.

A memorial service for Felty will be held at the Blue Ox on 127th Street in Ocean City on Thursday, June 25 from 6-8 p.m. For memorial food donations or questions contact Ilczuk-Lavanceau at 443-497-1123 or Patricia@argdp.com, or Hodge at 410-723-2120 or Dawnhodge@com-cast.net.

In lieu of flowers, the family is asking for donations to the American Cancer Society Relay for Life, or the Worcester County Humane Society. Donations may be mailed to Patricia Ilczuk-Lavanceau, 503 Harbour Drive, Ocean City, Md. 21842.

Worcester County to mull change in water, sewer plan

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) A public hearing addressing water and sewer issues for three recent annexations in Berlin was tentatively set for a July 21 meeting of the Worcester County Commissioners.

The town is requesting an amendment to the current county comprehensive water and sewage plan, addressing a 2015 annexation at the intersection of Friendship Road and Route 50, a 2014 annexation on Seahawk Road, and a 2011 annexation at the intersection of Germantown Road and Md. Route 113.

A Royal Farms store and a relocated Arby's are planned for Friendship Road and Route 50, and a new townhome development is in the works on Seahawk Road.

Berlin Planning Director Dave Engelhart said the third parcel relates to the auto shop owned by John Derrickson.

"It's just to change the water and sewer plan," he said. "Basically [the county is] responsible for water and sewer, and when they become part of the town ... it's our responsibility to serve them."

Engelhart wrote a letter to county Director of Department of Environment Programs Robert Mitchell on May 28 requesting the hearing, saying revisions were needed to the S-1 sewer planning and W-1 water planning areas.

On the same day, Mitchell forwarded a proposed amendment of the county's comprehensive water and sewage plans to the Worcester County Planning Commission. The letter said that Berlin was not asking for any increases in capacity or changes in the capital plan or treatment plan in order to accommodate the expansion.

Mitchell also said in the letter that the connection of the properties would remove the flow of more than 25 equivalent EDUs worth of conventional septic systems and connect the properties to Berlin's spray irrigation facility.

"As proposed, the project appears to be consistent with the comprehensive plan and existing zoning," Mitchell wrote.

During a June 4 meeting of the Worcester County Planning Commission, Mitchell reiterated his belief that the expansion was consistent with the county comprehensive plan and recommended the commission vote to approve. The planning commission agreed, voting unanimously to provide a favorable recommendation to the county commissioners.

Along with holding a public hearing, notices must be sent to any affected municipalities, along with the county departments of water and wastewater services and the state department of the environment.

The county commissioners may approve, disapprove or approve the amendment with conditions. The amendment must then pass one final hurdle, heading to the state Department of the Environment.

Engelhart called the whole process a formality, adding that Derrickson's property, originally annexed in 2011, had never been updated at the county level.

"Bob Mitchell, the director, said, 'You know, we never did add them, so we'll put them all in a basket,'" he said. "They try and update them once a year, so he wanted to get it done before the fiscal year."

BERLIN BRIEFS

By Josh Davis

Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) The Berlin mayor and council discussed several issues during a public meeting at Town Hall on Monday, June 22.

Contract approvals

The council unanimously approved several contracts during Monday's meeting.

For the Berlin Youth Club, a program of Worcester Youth and Family Counseling Services, the council green-lit $24,000 for the basic youth program, $8,000 for expenses associated with the youth program and a one-time grant of $2,500 to hire an intern to work with the program.

Council approved a new service agreement with Network Integration Transmission Services, concerning its agreement with electricity vendors, as well as $2,435 for Card's Technology, to include the town of Berlin and the police department, and a $125 monthly contract to D3 Corp for hosting the town website.

Purchase orders

The council approved eight purchase orders during the meeting, including $6,658 to Aqua Aerobic Systems Inc.

for a mixer motor for a digester, $1,363.34 to Caron Net for tennis and volleyball nets, $7,486 to Terra Firma for patching along Tripoli Street and $1,162 to Mid-Atlantic Waste Systems for a rear load container.

Public works and planning will have a new blue print scanner thanks to a $7,977 contract with Affordable business system, $1,050 was granted to the Worcester County Sheriff's Office for range fees during fiscal year 2015, $1,836.24 went to American Municipal Power Inc. for electric services during March, April and May, and $1,159 was approved to Schweitzer Engineering Laboratories Inc. for interface/control equipment for a voltage regulator at the town's salvage station.

Town construction

Construction of a new sidewalk on Tripoli Street has been completed, according to Public Works and Water Resources Director Jane Kreiter, while preliminary work continues on a sidewalk on Branch Street.

Kreiter said the design for Branch Street is finished, but the town is waiting for a final easement to clear. Once that happens, the project will go out for bid.

Other sidewalk repairs continue throughout town, Kreiter said, adding that the harsh winter hampered construction.

Electric Utilities Director Tim Lawrence said the construction on South Main Street hit a few snags, but that the project “seems to be going well.”

“In the beginning I thought it was three street lights [that needed to be removed] and now it’s turned out to be 20-something,” Lawrence said. “We ended up having to take all the lights out on the east side of Main Street and putting them back ... and now we’re starting on the other street and heading back in the other direction.”

Lawrence praised the State Highway Administration for its cooperation during the project, adding, “Everybody seems pretty happy about it ... It’s a really great improvement.”

Elsewhere in town, Affordable Housing complex Cannery Village, on Flower Street, will begin installing infrastructure on Wednesday.

“You’re going to see a lot of activity there,” Kreiter said.

HEAL grant

Following an introduction during the previous public meeting the council unanimously approved a motion to apply for the HEAL [Healthy Eating Active Living] grant program, which could bring between $4,000 and $9,000 into Berlin.

Administrative Services Director Mary Bohlen said the grant would fund a healthy eating restaurant and food retail program that would include a “shelf tour” for school children that discusses nutrition labels and healthy eating options.

Walk group initiatives would also be included, as well as water fountains with water bottle refill capabilities, and several bike racks located in downtown Berlin and in Berlin parks.

The town’s portion of the 50/50 grant could include cash considerations, or “in kind,” Bohlen said.

Introductions

The council introduced ordinances updating the town’s floodplain guidelines, in order to adopt new FEMA regulations, and amending the town’s building code to comply with new state requirements concerning sprinkler systems in new constructions.

Public hearings on both ordinances are scheduled during the next public meeting on July 13.

AGH Medical Center grand opening

(June 25, 2015) Atlantic General Hospital and Health System will celebrate the grand opening of Atlantic General Medical Center in West Ocean City on Thursday, June 25 from 4-6 p.m., with a ribbon cutting at 5:30 p.m.

Atlantic General Health System purchased the property, located near the intersection of Route 50 and Old Bridge Road, from Mariani Development Company in 2014 and recently opened two medical practices specializing in pediatrics and family medicine.

“West Ocean City is experiencing great growth and having providers specializing in pediatrics and family medicine in the area will provide easy access for young families moving here,” said Jim Brannon, vice president of professional services at Atlantic General Hospital.

The community is invited to attend the celebration and tour the offices.

Dr. Munna Garg, a specialist in internal medicine and pediatrics, and Dr. Danielle Orr, a family practitioner, relocated to the West Ocean City office from AGH System’s Ocean Pines location in early 2015. Pediatricians Anita Pascucci, D.O., who previously practiced at the Atlantic Health Center, and Laura Stokes, D.O., new to AGH, began seeing patients in early June.

Cedar Chapel fundraiser to feature riding ‘Jetovator’

By Brian Gilliland
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) Local notables will try their luck against the “Jetovator,” a cross between Marty McFly’s hoverboard and a jet ski, in order to raise money for the Cedar Chapel Special School in Snow Hill, the only school in Worcester serving children ages 3-21 with significant disabilities.

Worcester County Tourism Director Lisa Challenger will join pro bodyboarder/promoter Brian Stoehr and Town of Berlin Councilman Troy Purnell, among others, in riding the Jetovator, Ann Hillyer, event organizer, said.

“I love Cedar Chapel — it’s a great, great school, so that’s why I said yes,” Worcester County Tourism Director Lisa Challenger said. “I’m not big into water sports, so this should be hysterical.”

The event is scheduled for Monday, July 13, but the time has yet to be announced because the event is weather-dependent. Interested parties can throw their hat in the ring to try to win bragging rights by raising funds for the school and surviving the longest on the Jetovator, Hillyer said.

“This is right up my ally in terms of activity and in the cause. I rode the hoverboard before and it’s really, really cool. It looks a lot harder than it is and I love the idea of helping wherever I am and in whatever I can do,” Stoehr said.

Space for competitors, Hillyer said, is limited and those choosing to tackle the Jetovator are eligible for prizes. No deadline for entries has been set, but a first-come first-served basis is likely.

“I’ve never done it before, but it’s one of the best causes out there and I love water sports, so I’m willing to learn,” Purnell said.

Footage shot during the event will be shown during a “Jet Powered Fundraiser Party” at local brewer, Ocean City Brewing Company on 55th Street, Monday, July 20.

A Jetovator is a hoverboard/jet ski hybrid available to rent through OC Jetovator located on 53rd Street, bayside. A fundraiser benefiting Cedar Chapel Special School in Snow Hill will see Worcester County Tourism Director Lisa Challenger, pro bodyboarder/promoter Brian Stoehr and Berlin City Councilor Troy Purnell, among others, battle for Jetovator supremacy July 13.

The money, Hillyer said, will go toward transforming a courtyard into instructional space at the school. The goal is to raise $2,500.

“We’re really excited to give people a great opportunity to learn about our school. We’ve contracted with a playground equipment company to help transform the courtyard with flooring, shade and a swing so our students can get their energy out and return to class,” Cedar Chapel Special School Principal Belinda Gulyas said.

Cedar Chapel served 53 students this year.

Crush n Crab sets sights on grand opening July 1 in Berlin

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) It may have been delayed slightly, but Berlin resident John Cookro insists his new restaurant, Crush n Crab, will be open for business by July 1.

The restaurant, specializing in fresh, local seafood, will fill a long-dormant spot on the corner of Route 113 and South Main Street in Berlin.

Signs have been ordered and shipped, Cookro said, and the liquor board and health department have signed off on his operation.

The interior of the restaurant is entirely refurbished, complete with new tables, booths, a lounge area and decorative crab curtains over the windows, casting a decidedly Eastern Shore atmosphere over the former Boomers space.

“That was a big part of our philosophy,” Cookro said of the coastal-area ambiance.

Outside, the 2006 Ann Ashton Scanlon mural, commissioned by Marge Coyman and the Calvin B. Taylor Museum and depicting turn-of-the-last-century Berlin, remains intact.

The menu, Cookro said, will cover breakfast, lunch and dinner.

“We’re doing seafood, chicken, ice cream and we’re doing as much local fare as we can,” he said. “I’m getting my crabs and ice cream locally, and we’re hoping to get some local root beer.”

Oysters, clams and mussels would also be locally sourced and a fresh catch fish special is in the works depending on “whatever I can get off the boat,” Cookro said.

“We’re trying to keep our prices reasonable,” he said. “A lot of places, especially in Ocean City, are on the higher side, so we like to be affordable if we can. The local crabmeat is more expensive, but I want to keep it that way and not go with the Chinese stuff — which you can get at half price, but it’s just not the same thing.”

Crush n Crabs will also offer a “dessert of the day” special while local craft beer, including Burley Oak Brewing Co., Fin City Brewing Co. and OC Brewing Company, will rotate on tap.

“We’re looking forward to it, and by July 1 we should be full tilt,” Cookro said.

The restaurant is currently hiring. For information, call 410-973-2350.

Berlin Organics to offer local produce on Main St.

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) Another dimension to Sunday strolls through downtown Berlin is about to be added, as the Visitor's Center on Main Street will soon offer fresh, local produce.

Berlin Organics, a family farm specializing in hydroponic tomatoes grown with organic seeds, will provide the products.

"I have heard several suggestions from residents how wonderful it would be to walk downtown on the weekend to pick up fresh, local produce," Berlin Economic and Community Development Director Ivy Wells said. "So, I thought, why not? The Berlin Organic Grocer here on Main Street is re-organizing to a food co-op and will open soon, but until then I'd like to be able to offer this service to our community as well."

Paul Carlotta, a Berlin native with a background in nutrition, founded the Berlin Organics farm three years ago.

"We couldn't find anywhere around to basically buy organic, local produce, so we started growing, starting with 900 heirloom plants and our hydroponic greenhouse," Carlotta said. "My grandfather, an old Italian man, used to grow heirloom tomatoes and he had me working the garden very young. We're very well known in the community for our heirloom tomatoes, and that's my passion."

The custom-made hydroponic greenhouse creates the ideal location for growing Carlotta's signature crop.

"We use organic fish emulsions for nutrients, along with some other odds and ends that are all natural, and then we have a tank here and we're able to irrigate the plants, once an hour, all day long," Carlotta said. "They grow in this environment, which is controlled, so we don't have to worry about pests."

Without pests, Carlotta said, the need to spray potentially dangerous pesticides is nonexistent.

"We grow everything naturally," he said. "It also makes for a much longer growing season."

Tomato season, generally speaking, runs from July through August on the Eastern Shore. With Carlotta's method, the first ripe tomatoes arrive in early June and last until October.

Today the small, attached store at Berlin Organics also sells basil, cucumbers, squash, zucchini, red tomatoes, beefsteak tomatoes, several

"Most everything here, if not grown here, it's locally sourced," Carlotta said.

Carlotta plans to have something up and running outside the Visitor's Center "within the next couple weeks," on Sundays from 9 a.m. until noon.

"We're going to set up and start selling our local produce, focusing primarily on the heirloom tomatoes, squash, zucchini and some vegetables that are grown here, locally," Carlotta said. "We're really starting to dial it all around during the third year, and we have a lot of production now. We grow a lot of tomatoes, and they're very, very tasty. They're original varieties, and they taste like real old-fashioned tomatoes. That's what we do best."

Cash to bring ‘The River & the Thread’ to Freeman Stage

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) In February, singer/songwriter Rosanne Cash took home three Grammy awards for her highly acclaimed 2014 album “The River & the Thread.”

On Saturday, June 27, Cash will perform the record, in its entirety, at the Freeman Stage at Bayside in Selbyville.

The inspiration of the “The River & the Thread,” she said, came during a trip to the American Southwest that began with a fundraising stop at Arkansas State University, which had recently purchased the boyhood home of her father, the late Johnny Cash.

“I was going down south to do that and I was going to visit a friend of mine in Alabama, and it just seemed that there were a lot of events that conspired to really rattle us emotionally,” she said. “And we started to write songs.”

“The Sunken Ranch” and “Etta’s Tune,” Cash said, both stemmed from those early writing sessions during the trip.

“We started to say, ‘we could write an album about this,’” she said.

Cash said her writing style has changed vastly over her celebrated career, which began with her first composer credit in 1976 for “Love Has Lost Again,” recorded by her father.

“I think I surrender more than I used to – once inspiration started I would just try to squeeze it to death,” she said. “That doesn’t mean I didn’t write any good songs, I did, but I think I’m more willing to just let go and surrender and find more obtuse language and write third-person narratives rather than having it all be about me.”

Today, Cash said, she blocks off set times to write, rather than waiting to be struck by some sort of nebulous muse.

“I think that’s an incredibly narcissistic way to approach any kind of creative work,” she said. “Like, ‘Oh, I’m just going to wander around and wait until a lightning bolt hits me?’ No, that’s not the way it happens. I think toddlers do that, but serious writers don’t do that.”

“I write every day,” Cash continued. “This morning I only wrote for 45 minutes, but then I’ll write later on in the evening. I got a lot done last night, actually. I’m working on, it seems like, five different projects right now.”

One of Cash’s more high-profile current projects is the soundtrack for season two of HBO’s critically adored “True Detective.”

“I wrote the lyrics for three or four [songs] – I’m almost finished with the fourth,” she said. “I don’t know that they’ll all be in it, but T-Bone [Burnett] See CASH Page 18

Cash working on 'True Detective' and other collaborations has been writing the music with a couple of other people. He and I are friends and last year at some point he said – he was so great, he didn't tell me it was for 'True Detective,' he just said, 'give me the lyrics to a narco-ballad where the lover had a lover who turns into a bird and dies.' I said, 'Man, that's in my wheelhouse!'

"So I sent him the lyrics and he wrote the melody, and we ended up writing four songs that way," Cash said. "He kept sending me these strange descriptions."

Cash is also writing songs with husband and long-time collaborator John Leventhal for a project that Leventhal is producing for 75-year-old soul singer William Bell. The couple is also penning music for a new stage play.

"I've got a lot going on and I'm happy to be doing this work," she said. "I'm not anxious to start another record. I'm thrilled to be working on these projects that I'm working on."

Although Cash has earned scores of high-charting singles and multiple Grammy awards and nominations throughout her career, starting with her self-titled 1978 debut and reaching yet another milestone with "The River & the Thread," she seems especially proud of current output.

During her acceptance speech at the Grammys this year, Cash invoked Ray Charles, saying, "You're a better singer at 50 than you are at 30 because your whole life shows up in your voice." Now 60, Cash said she's also a better writer today than she was at the beginning of her career.

"I'm about the same guitar player that I was at 30, because I don't put any time into it," she said with a laugh. "I know what I know how to do and I just do that. I know I'm never going to be a great guitar player – ever – so why should I put my very limited time on this earth into trying to be a great guitar player when I know I can be a better songwriter and a better singer?"

Rosanne Cash will perform her Grammy-winning record "The River & the Thread" at the Freeman Stage at Bayside in Selbyville, Del. on Saturday, June 27.

She's also listening to and enjoying more music than ever, including seven-piece Birmingham, Ala. soul band St. Paul and The Broken Bones, and 21-year-old Oklahoma songwriter Parker Millsap.

"This strange girl from Scotland send me her record recently, and it was just so odd and beautiful," she said. "I just love that there are really young people who are so inspired and so soulful."

At the Freeman Stage, Cash said, she'll bring the full-band approach towards recreating her latest album for fans. Expect some tracks to resemble the recorded versions, while others will take on a new life in the live setting.

"With the band we do ['The River & the Thread'] in sequence, which is really, really cool," she said. "There ends up being this overarching narrative to all the songs, which is how we intended it. And then I go back into my catalogue and do some older stuff."

"Some of [the songs] are very much like the record, like 'Etta's Tune' and 'Night School,' because 'Night School' is very orchestrated – it's very particularly arranged, so that is just like the record. Other songs, like 'Money Road,' we expand on it, and 'The Sunken Lands' is a little more aggressive than the record," Cash said.

In the immediate future, Cash plans to continue her collaborative streak, although she's certainly aware that expectations for her next full-length solo release will be unusually high.

"It's actually making me feel very happy and good that I don't have to think about what do I do for an encore," she said. "It's daunting. I don't expect to win three Grammys again, but you never know. I've been really, really gratified with the response to the record and we knew we were doing good work, but you never know if it will get above the noise."

"I feel lucky that I get to do this at this time in my life," Cash continued. "I have a lot of people my age who are struggling and find it really hard to be in this business. It's a really difficult business, and I feel lucky that I'm still getting heard and I have the support of Blue Note Records, one of the great old labels of the world."

Tickets for Rosanne Cash: The River & The Thread in Concert are $35. For more information 302-436-3015 call or visit www.freemanstage.org.

Art's Alive at Northside Park this weekend

By Kara Hallissey
Staff Writer

(June 25, 2015) Art's Alive is back for its 15th year with more than 75 artists selling their wares and a range of activities for the entire family to enjoy at Northside Park on 125th Street this weekend.

The fine arts event will include food, music, beer, wine and children's activities in addition to providing a serene setting with 58 acres surrounding a lagoon at the north Ocean City park on Saturday and Sunday.

"Art's Alive has grown in several ways. We added additional live music, changed the caterer to offer new menu selections and there will be several new vendors in attendance," said Frank Miller, special events director for the Town of Ocean City. "Enjoy free activities all around the park and our newest addition is the Art League of Ocean City will be selling wine and craft beer on site."

From drawings and sculptures to jewelry, mixed media, ceramics, fine wood and photography, the show brings a variety of works by artists from 10 states including Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and Florida.

"There is something for everyone. Northside Park provides a great backdrop for viewing and purchasing unique work," said Brenda Moore, special events coordinator for the Town of Ocean City.

Linda McAdams, from Mantua, N.J., will be selling two-dimensional, mixed media works of photography and painting.

"I have a nice following in Maryland and Delaware," McAdams said. "The coastal work I do is a good fit for art shows along the beach and I am always well-received."

Sculptor Scott Hornbaker comes all the way from Saint Mary's, Ga. to bring handcrafted metal art including shepherd's hooks, dragonflies, plant stands and other garden sculptures to the resort.

Better background checks

In the aftermath of the Charleston, S.C. church massacre, the public's focus has turned to the appropriateness of flying the Confederate battle flag at government institutions, rather than on the greater problem of how a deranged black-hating person like Dylaan Roof got a gun in the first place.

Hauling down that flag at South Carolina's capital and denying its use in other official instances there and elsewhere is a matter of showing respect for all residents of those regions and is clearly the right thing to do.

Still, the national coverage that this symbolic gesture has engendered accomplishes little except to make some people feel that a colossal societal shift has somehow taken place when it has not.

What it does is eliminate the perception that government condones a racist philosophy, while also wishing that the Civil War had turned out differently when it ended 150 years ago.

But what it also does is misdirect the national discussion from the more important problem of how to reduce the odds that an unhinged assailant will shoot up a church, a school, a theater or any of the other places innocent people have been gunned down in recent years.

While we just might be able to agree on the flag business, what we apparently cannot do is agree that we need stricter background checks on potential gun owners.

Undoubtedly, opponents of any kind of gun control will argue that there's no effective way to separate insane from "normal" people, but making that effort would at least acknowledge that we want to try.

Two years ago, the so-called Manchin-Toomey amendment that would have expanded background checks fell six votes short of passing in the U.S. Senate, after the measure sponsored by Sens. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) and Pat Toomey (R-Pa.) was accused by opponents of containing all sorts of excesses, many of which did not exist.

Curiously, many members of Congress and other elected officials have no problem at all with government restricting other individual freedoms or collecting all kinds of data on individuals in the name of national security, but oppose doing anything to address our apparent decline in domestic security.

NASA Wallops to host open house

Commemoration of first rocket flight set for Saturday, June 27

(June 25, 2015) NASA's Wallops Flight Facility launched its first rocket June 27, 1945. In commemoration of this event and its 70 years of supporting science and aerospace research, the facility is opening its doors to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, June 27.

"The facility has an outstanding history in supporting the aerospace and science goals of NASA and its predecessor agency, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics or NACA," said Bill Wrobel, director of Wallops. "During these 70 years, the community has been very supportive of our work, and we want to open our doors to give the public a first-hand look at the incredible, diverse mission set we have here at Wallops."

On Saturday, Wallops will open facilities such as the aircraft hangar, the scientific balloon lab, the sounding rocket payload facility and the range control center.

In addition, organizations that support Wallops' research efforts will have displays including, NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center and Langley Research Center, the U.S. Navy's Surface Combat Systems Center, Virginia Space and the Mid-Atlantic Regional Spaceport, Orbital ATK, LJT and Associates, NASA's James Webb Space Telescope, The Maryland Science Center and the Salisbury Zoo.

"We really wanted to showcase the many activities here at Wallops," said Rebecca Hudson, coordinator for the Open House. "In addition, there are activities for the entire family from the very young to the young at heart. This should be a fun time for all who attend."

The day begins at 8 a.m. with a Wallops Runway 5K run/walk. Registration for this event is required at <http://go.nasa.gov/1HIVFcG>.

The gates for the Open House open at 9:30 a.m. and the event begins at 10 a.m. An opening ceremony will be held at 10:30 a.m. featuring federal, state and local officials, including Virginia U.S. Congressman Scott Rigell.

Nearly 60 exhibitors are participating in the event, and aircraft from NASA, the U.S. Navy, and the U.S. Coast Guard will be on display.

Special presentations on topics ranging from internships at NASA to fundamentals of rocketry and Wallops' history will be conducted at various sites throughout the day. Food and refreshments will be available at several venues as well as entertainment, including the U.S. Navy's Brass Band.

Robotics demonstrations will be conducted by local team members who recently competed in the National First Robotics Competition. There also will be children's activities including model rocket launches at the NASA Visitors Center, Salisbury Zoo demonstration and Engineering Challenges.

"We have been totally amazed at the interest in the Open House. I think this shows the great interest in the research conducted at Wallops," Hudson said. "We hope people are able to attend, learn about the facility and have a good time."

More information on the Wallops 70th anniversary Open House is available at www.nasa.gov/content/wallops-flight-facility-70th-anniversary.

Art's Alive celebrates 15 years in Ocean City

Alive show and I had heard it was a great show from a fellow artist, so I decided to apply. I am really looking forward to participating,” Hornbaker said. “My items are my own designs and are quite unique.”

Another newcomer to Art’s Alive, Paul Treadway, of Millsboro, Del. is “a fine artist who has taken the pencil to its highest level.” His art career began more than 50 years ago and he started out in black and white graphite with a focus on wildlife portraiture.

In the last year, Treadway has started to experiment with colored pencil and was awarded the best emerging artist in Delaware by the Rehoboth Art League in 2014.

“I decided to show my work in Art’s Alive to try and broaden my base of possible clients for my current work and future commissions,” he said. “I am self-taught, very concerned with detail and love North American wildlife.”

Treadway is currently illustrating a children’s book about the adventures of a squirrel named “Frisbee,” whose author has been rescuing squirrels, nursing them back to health and releasing them back into the wild for more than 25 years.

“The fact that these are all artists participating and not a resale of manufactured products is a unique quality of this show which should be appreciated by everyone,” said Harry Dill, a fine wood artist from Rehoboth Beach, Del. “The variety of arts and crafts displayed insures that everyone will find something to their liking. It also affords an opportunity to talk with the various artists on a face-to-face basis and thereby understanding and appreciating the time, skill and talent which is involved in their creations.”

Dill creates planters made out of driftwood and then he attaches Tillandsias or air plants after polishing and carving animals into the wood. Shells, glass globes, sea urchins and reclaimed wood may also be infused into his work.

“They make nice gardens for your home and I will also burn the heads of birds into the wood, which can have plants attached to them,” Dill said. “Some of my planters can be hung on the wall or in a window while others are created to be placed on a table or shelf.”

He began making planters about four years ago at the age of 72 and thought if it cheered him up, perhaps it would do the same for other people.

“My goal is to bring sunshine and happiness into the lives of the people who purchase my planters,” Dill said.

“I enjoy helping adults and children who are interested in trying to grow the air plants themselves.”

In addition to selling their works, artists will compete in 12 juried categories at Art’s Alive. The winners will be presented with ribbons and more than $5,000 in cash prizes at an awards reception Saturday night at the Art League of Ocean City on 94th Street, Moore said.

Awards include Best of Show, Mayor’s Choice Award, People’s Choice and six Judge’s Choice Awards.

Attendees can stop by Artists Café for crab cakes, fish tacos, hand cut fries, beer battered cheese dip, smoked brisket and more, which will be provided by Sobo’s Catering from Salisbury.

“Stop by and enjoy many of their unique menu items,” Moore said.

Maui Wowi will be back to cool visitors off with its fresh smoothies and the Art League of Ocean City will offer craft beer and wine to purchase for the first time.

“It’s a unique experience and typically it’s not aloud, but for the first time this year as you peruse the different vendors and their art, you can also walk around the lagoon with beer or wine,” Miller said.

Town of Ocean City
Communications Manager
Jessica Waters

In addition to browsing artwork and enjoying food, Art’s Alive visitors can listen to live music from Janet Spahr and her handpans, which provides audiences with a soothing and tranquil experience. Also, Mystic Warriors will be entertaining crowds both days with their Andean music infused with guitar synthesizers, drums and bass.

There will be free art activities for children including soap carving, painting and beading.

About 10,000 people are expected to come out this weekend to enjoy Art’s Alive events.

“The arts community in Ocean City is flourishing,” said Jessica Waters, communications manager for the Town of Ocean City. “Whether you are an art lover or not, Art’s Alive offers an outdoor, open air environment for people who want to enjoy scenic views while browsing a variety of unique exhibits.”

The Art’s Alive official merchandise tent will provide guests with a piece of the event to take home, such as T-shirts, jackets, baseball caps and pins.

“Art’s Alive is the art show that has something for everyone,” Waters said.

Check out the fun this Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on 125th Street at Northside Park. Art’s Alive will take place rain or shine.

FOR YOUR HELP

The Stephen Decatur High School After Prom Committee has many people to thank for the success of our “Big Bang Theory” event, held on May 9th 2015. Through cash, prize, and food donations, we were able to provide a night of fun for over 400 students until 3 am. We could not continue this event without the support of the administration, teachers, and support staff of SDHS, as well as the many parents who contributed monetary and food donations and spent countless hours designing artwork, decorating, picking up food, collecting prizes, and staying up all night to chaperone and clean up. We would also like to give special thanks to Mr. Chris Tabb for keeping Trivia going throughout the night. Through the generosity of our wonderful community, we hope to continue the After Prom event for many years to come. KAYAK ECO-TOUR

As part of their Service Learning project, students from the Diamondback and Dragon teams at Stephen Decatur Middle School recently participate in a kayak eco-tour with Ayers Creek Adventures. After researching three types of land erosion plans to determine which is the most environmentally sustainable, the students concluded that a Living Shoreline is the best choice. Students also completed a seining activity to identify “critters” in our local waters and participated in a water quality testing activity. BUILDING ROBOTS

Students in Amanda Lynch's fourth grade class at Worcester Preparatory School video conference with the Museum of Flight located in Seattle, Wash., where they learned about the history of robots, how robots are used in everyday lives, and the future of robots. After conferencing with the scientists, Lynch gave her students a robotics challenge. Their mission was to build a robot that would move forward, backward, left, right, have the ability to pick up an object and then carry that object on itself. Students Luke Bunting, JR Hamer, Timmy Hebert and Logan Ginnavan show off their robotic creation.

Little effort goes long way in pickling

It's nice to see that most stores are carrying pickling cucumbers in the produce section. That part of the culinary world has picked up nicely. Every site and book out there would be remiss if they were to leave out this old and venerable practice. I teach pickling at school and it is an important part of the restaurant industry, as are smoking and curing. They're all the rage, as the kids like to say.

By Paul Suplee,

Making your own pickles is a lot easier than most of us chefs will let on, but I'm not going to write about that necessarily, as I just wrote about pickled mustard seeds and pickled onions recently. But do yourself the favor of practicing on some easy items such as pickled mustard, pickled onions et al.

OK, break my arm; I'll talk about pickling again. Pickling can be as easy as pouring boiling vinegar, sugar, salt and garlic on sliced cucumbers letting them sit overnight. It can be as easy as simmering vinegar, sugar and julienne onions until the latter are cooked. Either way, a little effort can go a long way.

Of course, it can be much more complex, such as making a nice Giardiniera that can marinate for days before use. Marinated, grilled artichokes are a blast when done correctly, but again you'll have to experiment on your own. Basically you can pickle anything, but for the sake of brevity I will discuss the mighty, simple pickle as we know and love it.

The pickling cucumbers that we see in the store are great for either pickling whole (this takes a long time), as spears (less time) or slices (very quick pickling process). And since the ingredients are so inexpensive, it is an obvious fact that one can practice many times over until they have perfected the proper pickle, precisely.

As I sit to write this, I have one of my favorite sandwiches in front of me, acting only as a vehicle for the pickles. Of course, that's not entirely true, but I do need some sort of segue into a Cubano sandwich. You can't have one without pickles, so I'll just stick to that.

The Cubano has many incarnations, and I will hardly claim that this is the end-all. I would hardly be so presumptuous as to think myself an expert on Cuban food, let alone the ubiquitous sandwich named after the denizens of this amazing island country.

And while I'm on the country itself, am I alone or is anyone else out there chomping at the bit to fly to Cuba to try some authentic cuisine? I love Cuban food, and can only imagine that it tastes better in Havana. Maybe Hemingway knew what he was doing all those decades ago when he crossed over for food, beer, fishing, his 15-acre estate and cigars.

Even though I'm in downtown Baltimore, I can't help but think of Cuba on this 100-degree, high-humidity day. I'll just pretend that I'm in Havana, or even South Miami Beach enjoying the sandwich known to many as the ultimate Cubano.

And while I know that most Cubanos don't have bacon on them, it's a happy addition. It's pork, it's salty, and it's a natural fit to the already porky mound of delicious and savory flavor. Topped with a little Gruyere cheese (I know 'normal' Swiss cheese is preferred by many, but I like the stronger Gruyere to match the complexity of the pork and the pickles).

So as I wait for the storms to come across the Ohio Valley, I can't help but think that I'm on deck of The Pilar getting ready to reel in one of the 1,000-pound monsters of yore. Alas, I'll have to settle for a simple sandwich and a bottle of tea. It will simply have to do.

For whatever reason you decide is good enough to get back in the kitchen, make sure that you throw pickling into the mix. Our grandmothers did it. Some of our mothers did it, and there was good reason for it. And it's not so much what you can pickle, but rather what your pickled goods can accompany – the raison d'être of pickles.

Not-so Cubano Sandwiches

Makes 4 sandwiches
1 loaf French bread (soft, not crispy baguette)
Dijon Mustard, as needed
Mayonnaise, as needed
1/2 # sliced smoked ham
4 slices Taylor Pork Roll

8 slices cooked bacon
8 slices Gruyere cheese
Pickles for a thin layer, as needed
Butter, as needed for cooking

1. Split the French bread so that it is still connected on the backside. Then cut it into four equal sandwich rolls.

2. Spread the mayonnaise and Dijon mustard on the bread and then pile on the meat and pickles, dividing these evenly.

3. Top with cheese and smash the bread together. And when I say 'smash', I don't mean to pull out The Hulk and pulverize the sandwich. Just press it so that it can withstand the skillet or the panini press, whichever you'll be using.

4. On a hot skillet or panini press, simply cook until the bread is crispy on the outside, and hot and gooey on the inside.

5. Serve immediately.
