OP candidate caught in DWI bust

(July 2, 2015) OPA Board candidate Slobodan Trendic, 59, has been charged with numerous traffic offenses, including drinking and driving and leaving the scene of an accident, according to a release issued Tuesday by the Ocean Pines Police Department.

The charges stem from an incident that occurred on June 20 in Ocean Pines, when Trendic allegedly was driving while intoxicated. Other charges include, leaving the scene of a property damage accident, negligent driving and violation of a license restriction related to corrective lenses.

Numerous other traffic citations were issued to Trendic, who was released pending trial, according to the report.

Speaking to the Gazette on Tuesday, Trendic said he has hired a lawyer, who advised him not to speak about the case. He added that he has no intention of dropping out of the board race.

"I will let people judge for themselves, and when the truth comes out, they can make their own decision," he said. "I'm entrusting the legal system."

Ocean Pines Police Chief David Massey provided a few more details on Wednesday morning.

'We got a call of a hit and run accident where a resident's vehicle was struck in his driveway [on Windjammer Road], extensive damage, his front lawn was run through [and] there was a trail of radiator fluid. It was obviously a heavy impact," Massey said. "Part of the bumper was left in the front yard next to the damaged vehicle, and the trail of radiator fluid led back to Mr. Trendic's house. His vehicle had damage with radiator fluid coming out of it.'

Massey said Trendic failed a field sobriety test and refused a chemical test. He was taken to police headquarters in Ocean Pines and eventually released, according to Massey.

No injuries were reported, and Massey said the parked vehicle was unoccupied when it was struck.

Maryland Judiciary Case Search on the Internet listed 16 separate charges related to the incident, including failure to control vehicle speed on a highway to avoid collision and changing lanes when unsafe.

Massey said it was not unusual to see 16 charges related to this type of incident.

"It's different subsections," he said. What happens is they'll charge with driving while intoxicated and driving while impaired, and that leaves leeway See TRENDIC Page 4

OPA CANDIDATE FORUM

Ocean Pines board candidates clash over issues at forum

By Josh Davis

Staff Writer (July 2, 2015) Underground fiber optic cable, more civility on the board, spending issues and support for the Ocean Pines Association general manager system were among the topics covered last Wednesday at the Ocean Pines Elections Committee's forum.

Moderated by committee Chairman Bill Wentworth, the forum allowed the seven candidates for two open seats in this summer's board of directors election to present their views to a standing-room-only crowd at the Community Center.

Former board members Terri Mohr, Ray Unger and Bill Zawacki and newcomers Cheryl Jacobs, Thomas Herrick, Carol Ludwig and Slobodan Trendic also addressed questions asked by Wentworth and the audience.

Mohr, who worked as a medical practice manager for more than three decades, touted her previous board experience as an asset.

She also recalled her 2010-2014 term as a director, citing as accomplishments during that span the replacement of the golf green, the new yacht club the lowering of assessments in 2014.

Jacobs, a veteran prosecutor and professor of business law, who also has experience in the private sector, said she wanted to protect residents' investment in the community, while Unger, a former police officer, said he was running again because of how much he enjoyed his service during two previous terms.

Herrick, also a former police officer, expressed disappointment with how the amenities are being run and Zawacki drew on his previous board service as president, vice president and treasurer, to criticize the current group of directors.

One of the things that has brought me back to this table to seek your vote again was the way a lot of our finances have been handled," he said. He con-Continued on Page 4 tended that some of the amenities have been allowed to lose money while the current board seemingly expressed little interest in overseeing the work of the general manager.

Noting that the new yacht club lost $182,000 during its first year, Zawacki told the crowd that no plan existed to improve the community's finances.

Ludwig, a member of several committees and the director of the Delmarva Chorus, offered a little advice to voters.

"If you would take the time to watch the board meetings ... get your story firsthand," she said. "It would be nice if we had everybody voting this year. You have seven people here – there should be someone for everyone ... Get out there and vote."

Trendic said the focus of the election was "the future of our 47-year-old community."

The one-year-old yacht club, Trendic said, is losing a great amount of money, the community's bridges are crumbling and the IT infrastructure "belongs at the MIT museum." Meanwhile, he said, the general manager is eligible for a $40,000 bonus.

"This would make some of us think that everything is perfect ... yet our community has a list of series issues and problems," he said. "Achieving success and solving these challenges will not be the act of a single board member."

He said it was his goal is to see the board's seven members work in unison on improving the community.

Asked about the primary role of an elected representative in Ocean Pines, Zawacki said the board sets policy and provides oversight.

"The board needs to be measuring what is being done operationally and determine and make sure it's being done according to policy, and that all Continued on Page 5 for the courts to determine whether they want to reduce it or charge it with the full amount. Typically with multiple charges, they'll allow leeway."

Trendic recently took part in a seven-candidate forum on June 24 at the community center in Ocean Pines. He previously ran for the board in 2014, but left the race early in order to throw his support behind Dave Stevens and Pat Renaud, who were both elected and later voted president and secretary, respectively.

policies are being followed, and that financially we are meeting our targets and our budgets," he said.

"This past year, Ocean Pines Association took in $14 million ... I don't know how anybody can't run a household or a business on $14 million and at least break even at the bottom," he continued. "We didn't. We had to take $182,000 out of our savings account to make our nonprofit actually come out nonprofit."

Ludwig said board members should heed the advice of its many advisory committees.

"When they bring things to the board table, they have done their homework, and most of the time want you to listen and make a decision based upon that – and not micromanage," she said. "If you step out of the board position to get involved with individual things like we have seen recently, it doesn't bode well.'

Volunteers in Ocean Pines, Ludwig said, are "trying to take care of your investment" and should be treated accordingly by the board.

"Let's face it, [for] most of us this is it," she said. "All I own is right there, 5 Sandpiper Lane. All my money is right there. I want it to be there and be worth it for a long time. I want to live there happily, and that's what I want for you too.

Trendic said board members need "innovative leadership and strategic thinking," along with "razor-sharp focus and flawless execution."

"You've got to get things right the first time. You can't afford $5 million mistakes," he said, referring to the new yacht club. "The board is here to serve you as homeowners. Everything else becomes secondary. You pay the bills and you are the voice and we need to make sure we pay attention to what your goals, needs and priorities are.

Mohr said she would, "like to bring the conversation back" to the board. "One of the most disappointing things that I've seen this year on the board is they don't communicate at all with one another," she said. "And if they don't communicate with one another, then they're not communicating with you, and I think that is very, very sad.

"I'd like to see some civility and some respect," Mohr continued. "I would like to see us work together, work [and] support the general manager and the job that he does ... I want us to be able to get back to moving forward, working toward things that we have in common ... I would really like to see us start talking to each other again."

Asked how the candidates would set priorities in managing the "fiscal priorities of the association," Herrick stressed the importance of upkeep.

"The longer we wait to maintain our facilities the more money it's going to cost us," he said. "If we continue to wait until we need replacement, the replacement will mean millions of dollars to the community. Let's take care of what we need to do today so we don't face a problem in the future."

Zawacki slammed the board for passing a budget that he characterized as illogical. He also charged that General Manager Bob Thompson failed to explain budget variances, while Ludwig defended Thompson.

"As far as I can see, he does his job," she said. "You can't point the finger at someone if you don't give them the responsibility that they should have to go along with the job. Give them the responsibility - don't micromanage from the board of directors."

Trendic said the community needed what he referred to as a proper plan that included capital investments and "a 10 or 20-year road map" for operations.

"For any large community ... you cannot put any legitimacy in the budgeting process in how you fund your yearly operations or multiyear Continued on Page 6 operations unless you have a proper plan in place. This is what we have to pay attention to as board members."

He called the reserve fund "bloated" and suggested, because most board members and candidates may not have all the experience they need in certain areas, that they use advisory committees as a "think tank resource."

Jacobs agreed with the call for a comprehensive plan, but leapt on Trendic's suggestion that some of the candidates might need help during budgeting.

"Mr. Trendic questioned whether or not any of the candidates had the wherewithal - the qualifications - to serve on the board given what we might be facing fiscally. I do have those qualifications," she said.

In the private sector, Jacobs said, she worked with a $60 million budget.

"I know about budgets," she said. "The one major priority for me is going to be we have to have a comprehensive plan. I don't know how Mr. Trendic can say that we have inflated reserves if we don't have a plan. Is it enough? Is it too much? You know what, we don't know the answer to that question, and that's why the comprehensive plan is absolutely necessary and will be my priority.

Asked about the most important issues facing the next board of directors, Herrick addressed what he called the dysfunction between the board and the general manager.

"I think that we need to elect people that will serve on the board that have an open mind, that know the meaning of the word compromise and understand how to debate with civility," he said. "If we keep putting people that are on one side of a coalition or another ... it's never going to end."

Zawacki agreed there was friction, although he largely placed the blame on Thompson.

'I think we have a GM who ... does not react to what the board wants in a timely and effective manner," he said.

Ludwig, however, said the board should be concerned with replacing lost funds from the county and state.

"We probably pay more taxes in this square area that anyone else in Worcester County, and maybe on the Eastern Shore," she said. "That is a concern when we talk about reserves. That's where my mind picks up money for things ... that normally we would look outside of Ocean Pines for that money - it's not there and it's not coming."

Trendic again went to the yacht club, as well as IT infrastructure.

"You can't run a business without proper IT infrastructure [and] we have proven over the years that we keep losing money with the yacht club – we don't know how to do it," he said. "Outsource it. Get the right private sector partners that know how to do it cheaper, faster, better and let's focus on what we know how to do best."

Mohr echoed the importance of a comprehensive plan, and stressed the need to maintain current facilities.

"We promised you when we built this yacht club that we would never let that happen to another building again in Ocean Pines," she said. "I remember hearing everyone in that room saying that. So we need to do that."

She also said fixing the relationship between the board and the general manager was "not [the voters'] problem."

"It's our problem if we're on the board, and we need to learn how to work together," she said. "We are all adults."

Jacobs, continuing one of the more popular themes of the evening, again drove home the need for long-term vision.

"If you're crossing a bridge that's likely going to fall down while you're crossing it, I'd say that's a pretty big challenge that has to be addressed," she said. "That's something that the budget has to address, and it's part of what I keep saying we need in terms of this comprehensive plan to prioritize what are the most important things that we have to do first [and] how should we spend the money that we are collecting from all of the homeowners."

Unger took a decidedly different tactic, insisting that Ocean Pines' amenities "were never designed to be profitable."

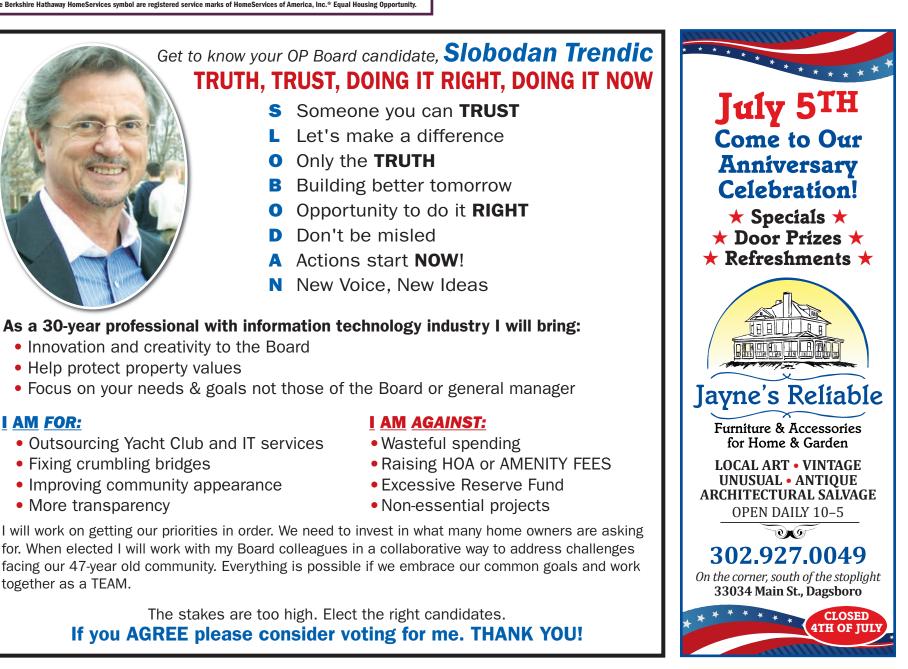

"I don't think it's possible unless we go out and all of us wave signs to people on 589, 'Let's go to the yacht club and have dinner," he said.

Halfway through the forum Wentworth passed around a plastic sand pail, telling the candidates to draw numbers and ask each other a question of their choosing. While most offered softballs, Jacobs went in a different direction after drawing Zawacki's name.

"Mr. Zawacki, you talked to us about having previously served on the board as a president in the past. Therefore, don't you bear responsibility for problems that went unchecked?" she asked.

"Cheryl, it would be easier to answer that maybe if you could tell me what the problem was," Zawacki said, adding that he changed the way the board operated, offering workshop sessions that included public input.

Unger asked Trendic if he would raise membership fees.

"The simple answer to your question is no," he said. "Those of us who have been in private sector, we know that raising prices or raising fees or dues is not always what I call 'creative leadership' or innovative thinking. I think there are other ways to run a fiscally responsible budget."

Trendic added that he was against, "charging social clubs fees for holding their meetings," drawing applause from the crowd.

After drawing Herrick, Trendic asked how he would tackle "what you believe is the single biggest problem" facing Ocean Pines.

"I still believe it's this dysfunction between the manager and the board of directors," Herrick said. "If they do not work together ... our community cannot reach its full potential ... We all have to learn to get along and do what's best for the community. I will stress that. It's very important that the board gets along, has a great working relationship with the general manager and fosters a relationship with the community."

Herrick asked Mohr about her position on the proposed policy change that would require volunteer hours or pay in order for community groups to use Ocean Pines facilities.

"That seems to be the hot topic," Mohr said. "I think it's a really tough one, but I actually think it's kind of a good problem to have. That means we have a lot of people that want to use a lot of our facilities."

Mohr said she was kept busy with volunteer requirements while her daughter attended Catholic school.

"I think the volunteer thing might be a good thing ... I don't think it's the whole solution," she said. "I think that we have groups that want to use our facilities [and] if they want to use our facilities they should pay to use our facilities, because we pay to keep them the way they are."

She added that residents should be able to use facilities for less money than outside groups, but that she wasn't sure if they should use those facilities strictly for free.

"The problem [is] we have so many groups," she said. "I think we need to talk about this a little longer and come up with a better solution and hear more from the people out there."

Ludwig, a member of the committee studying the facilities, reminded voters, "There is no policy that has been set," and urged people to watch video of the committee's presentation to the board.

"Bob [Thompson] felt as if he had to take his committee and the ideas to the board of directors because they were threatening to do their own type of thing – micromanaging as far as I'm concerned – about how to handle individual groups using ... any of our facilities," she said. "That's what Continued on Page 10 stepped up trying to find a fair, easy and nonthreatening way to use the facilities."

She added, "Ninety percent of the people on the list [the committee used] probably already fulfilled what was being asked of these groups as volunteers.'

Jacobs, addressing whether residents should be required to perform community service or pay to use amenities, drew on her previous work experience.

"When I hear 'doing community service hours,' that reminds me, as a prosecutor, of what we offer people instead of going to jail," she said. "I appreciate the work that the community is doing, and I surely hope that what we've been told so far does not turn out to be the policy because we do pay out of our dues to be able to use the facilities that are in our great community. I don't don't want to have to keep people out of jail by making them do community service.'

Herrick questioned some of the numbers presented by Thompson and the facility use group.

"They said we had 18,000 requests that would be 50 requests a day for this building," he said. "I come here in the afternoon, I don't see lines [of people] coming in and out of these doors. I talk to various clubs and they tell me anytime they ask [to use the facilities] there's never been a problem with them getting a room."

The subject of a comprehensive plan came up yet again during a community question about Ocean Pines' aging infrastructure.

in the past and you say, 'We talked about it, we talked about it' ... but you don't have a plan, something's wrong," Jacobs said. "We need to stop saying 'we need a plan' and get people on the board who finally make that happen.'

Unger suggested the board approach the county when addressing infrastructure issues.

'Believe it or not, that's where the big bucks come from, and the important stuff that needs to be done on our roads and everything are coming from the county," he said. "We have nothing to do with the roads."

When Herrick moved to Ocean Pines, in 2010, he said he found himself thumbing through an old newsletthat made mention of a ter comprehensive plan dating back to 1998.

"In 2009, we started a 10-year task force [to] prioritize maintenance, to do a study on the funding of it and, in fact, schedule and implement the plan to get the work done," he said. "Here we are six years a later taking about a capital improvement plan, talking about additional studies ... We continue to kick the can down the road. It's time to do something about it.

"My fear is six years from now we're still going to be talking about another plan that another board is trying to devise," Herrick continued. "It's time to finalize the plan, fund the plan, and let's aggressively pursue having that come to fruition."

During closing remarks, Herrick underscored the importance of the election.

"Electing board members that work for certain factions or to serve a special interest group would not be in the best [interest] of the community,' he said. "I believe we need someone that has an open mind, we need to elect somebody that's willing to get along, knows the meaning of the word compromise [and] understands the need to debate with civility. I would be honored to serve as a representative of this community on the board, and I would do so in a reasonable, courteous and professional manner.'

Trendic encouraged voters to select the two candidates with "the winning combination of skills, broad experience and the ability to successfully represent our community interests."

"If you do not approve [of] how some of the board members are voting or addressing critical issues don't be silent," he said. "Stay engaged. Keep the pressure on those members. Remember, our board does not have absolute power - the people do."

Mohr's message was simple: "get everybody to vote.'

"It's really important for our community that we all vote," she said. "Please make sure that you get all the facts [and] read as much as you can ... It's your voice, your choice and your vote.'

Board members react to OP candidate forum

Stevens, Terry, Collins and Cordwell weigh in on last Wednesday's Pines debate

By Josh Davis

Staff Writer

(July 2, 2015) In a critique of last Wednesday's Ocean Pines Association candidates forum, current members of board of directors this week rated the performances of the seven hopefuls, offering assessments that ranged from disappointment to praise for a job well done.

Among those in the standingroom-only crowd in the Assateague Room was Board President Dave Stevens, who said he was disappointed by some of the comments about the relationship between the board and General Manager Bob

serlin, MD

Thompson.

"I think it's unfortunate that they want to call it dysfunctional," he said. "I think that's not true. It is functional, but the way that's it's supposed to function is that the board is supposed to do its share of the job and not simply put it off to the general manager to do it all."

As an example, Stevens cited his first board meeting as president, when he floated the idea of conducting a new capital improvement study.

"I brought it I up and said we want to do this and [Director] Sharyn O'Hare said, 'Well, look, that's the general manager's job. Why isn't he on the team and why isn't he involved in this?' As it turns out I had talked to Bob the day before and we agreed that he wouldn't. I wanted to take the longer-term CIP off his shoulders and let him focus in on the next few years.

'It's a hard thing to do and it's not Bob's fault and it's not [CIP workgroup member] Jerry Aveta's fault. They're doing the best they can," Stevens continued. "I'm still hopeful. I think we're moving in the right direction, and that's the important thing. If I'm disappointed by how slow it's going I'm also not surprised."

Parliamentarian Tom Terry, who watched the forum via live streaming video on his computer, had a slightly different take.

"I thought those who were ... talking about the need for more civility on the board were dead on," he said. "I think the ladies who talked about that were absolutely correct that we need folks who are looking to work on cooperation with each other, and not

The Church Mouse

We're looking for folks who want to be a part of a team, and while not agreeing on everything, certainly looking to be collaborative in their approach," Terry continued. "Those are the kinds of people I want to work with, and I think those folks had a pretty good handle on what it's going to take to kind of realign where our board has been going.'

Treasurer Jack Collins, who attended the forum, offered a candidate-by-candidate breakdown.

"I thought it gave everybody an opportunity to express their point of view, and to let people know exactly who they are and that they represent," he said. "I thought that there were some outstanding points made by Slobodan Trendic and one of those was the infrastructure on the bridge. If you attended the last board meeting, that was reinforced by a guy who said 18 inches of concrete fell on his boat [from one of the bridges].'

Collins also thought Tom Herrick connected when he talked about setting the right priorities when it came to spending residents' money and providing good amenities that can be enjoyed by all the property owners at affordable prices.

Cheryl Jacobs, Collins said, appeared professional and polished.

"She's a pretty smart lady," he said.

Terri Mohr, on the other hand, presented the old board very well," Collins said.

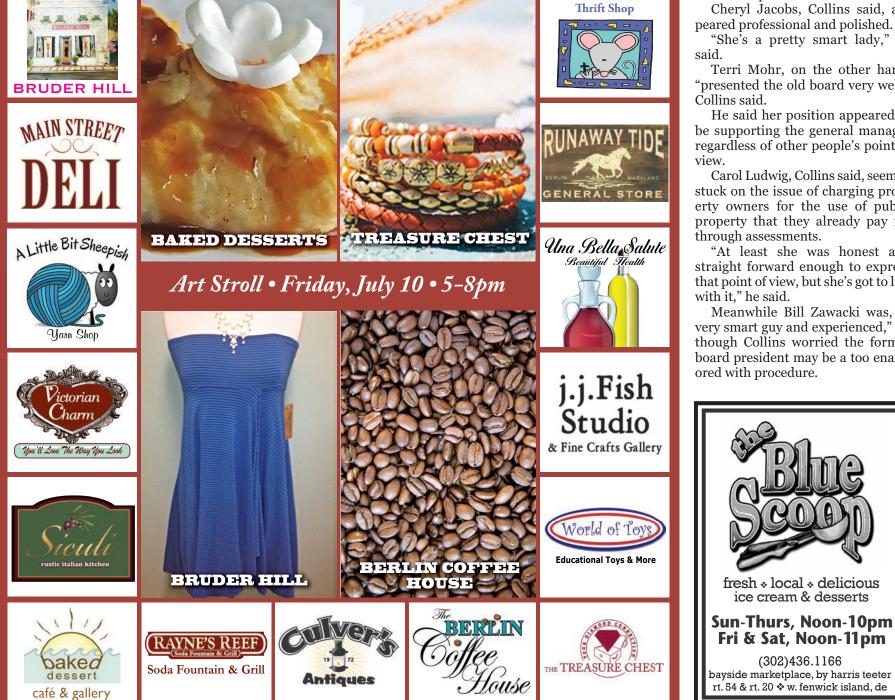

He said her position appeared to be supporting the general manager regardless of other people's point of view.

Carol Ludwig, Collins said, seemed stuck on the issue of charging property owners for the use of public property that they already pay for through assessments.

"At least she was honest and straight forward enough to express that point of view, but she's got to live with it," he said.

Meanwhile Bill Zawacki was, "a very smart guy and experienced," although Collins worried the former board president may be a too enamored with procedure.

Director Cordwell criticizes candidates' call for 'plan'

"I think that, at times, process is necessary and important, but if you have to move the community from point A to point B and process is slowing you down, you have to find another way."

As for two-time former board member Ray Unger?

"I thought he was very brief," Collins said.

In summarizing the session, Director Bill Cordwell, who also attended, said "Two candidates want to fire people and take the place over themselves even though they have no experience in doing so. Five said they would work together and with the general manager. I prefer to concentrate on those who are positive."

He add that campaigning on the theme of not raising dues and fees might be popular but not that practical, considering that costs and prices are always rising.

Cordwell added, "one gentleman and all three ladies gave good accounts of themselves and I would be excited to work with any of them."

He was also enthused by the candidacy of "three strong women candidates. Women candidates are usually some of the best directors for a number of reasons."

On the issues, while a number of candidates spoke about alternatives to "repair and replacing facilities," Cordwell said he was troubled by the lack of specifics.

'I never heard what the alternatives are," he said. "This is another 'elect me first and then I will tell you my plan.' I suspect the plan would be bank funding at seven-to-eight percent, which will greatly affect our assessments.'

Cordwell did balk at Trendic's proposal that Ocean Pines lay fiber optic cable behind county workers while they replaced water pipe.

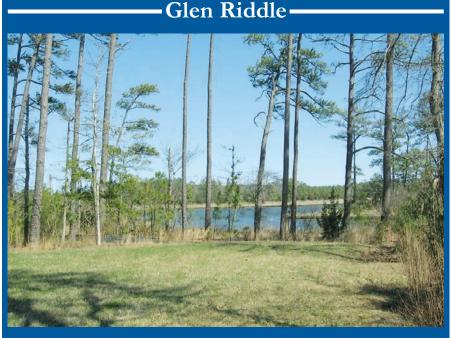

"The idea of throwing fiber optic cable in a hole as the county is replacing the water pipes is bizarre at best, he said. "I had no idea the county was planning on replacing the entire water system in Ocean Pines.

He was also perplexed by Trendic's assertion that the community did not have a capital improvement plan in place.

"Mr. Trendic stated there is no plan and therefore we shouldn't be collecting reserves with no plan,' Cordwell said. "He is completely wrong. We have a capital improvement plan, started in 2013 and continuing into 2014, that addresses the capital needs for the next 10 years, including major repairs to bridges, identifying projects throughout the community and projecting their costs.

"Unfortunately the current leadership of the board chose to completely ignore this plan and has started to form a plan of their own, which we have not been given any specifics to this date," Cordwell continued. "The leadership also didn't include any capital in this year's budget for bridge repair. This capital plan is on the website and should be reviewed by everyone who hears there is no plan.'

The May controller's report in Ocean Pines showed major improvement in the bottom line at three of the community's major amenities: the yacht club, golf course and aquatics.

May marks turnaround for Pines amenities

By Josh Davis Staff Writer

(July 2, 2015) After a long string of down months financially, Ocean Pines released some good news during a board of directors meeting last Thursday

The May controller's report showed a positive budget variance of $4,590, with several amenities hitting new highs for the month.

Aquatics came in $18,395 over budget in net operations, bringing in $131,101 and marking a $46,289 improvement over the previous year.

mates in golf, which is now under the management of Landscapes Unlimited, it finished May $8,521 over budget in net operations at $94,550, a $44,941 uptick over the previous year.

While the yacht club fell more than $35,000 shy of budget estimates, finishing with a net operating profit of $38,312, General Manager Bob Thompson, in his monthly report to the board, said there was room for optimism.

"The good news is that while revenues were down, so were expenses," he wrote. "Regular food and beverage costs were down as well. Additionally wages and benefits followed suit and were below the budgeted amount ... While we finished the month $35,081 below budget, the actual bottom line for the month shows a profit of $38,312. Equally important, we realized a $74,876 improvement over last year's numbers.'

"I think the numbers in general were pretty good," Board President Dave Stevens said during the meeting. "The golf numbers were perhaps a little below budget ... but still an improvement over May of last year, and the highest it's been in the last eight years for the month."

Stevens said the yacht club financials, in terms of revenue, were also a "record high."

"Both good things," he said. "Total net revenues were a little less than double what they were last year, and the same for every year proceeding it for the last eight years. I don't know exactly how [General Manager Bob Thompson] did this, but the results are really outstanding.²

"It does deserve congratulations and I know how you did it — you doubled the sales," Board Vice President Marty Clarke said. "It's pretty incredible. It's a lot of sales and a lot of people spending monev.'

Stevens provides update on three OP studies

By Josh Davis

Staff Writer

(July 2, 2015) Even though three major studies were either approved by the board of directors or introduced by Board President Dave Stevens back in March, the need to plan was a recurring them during last Wednesday's candidates forum.

According to those plans, Jerry Aveta and Ted Moroney would tackle a new capital improvement plan (CIP), Salisbury University's Dr. Memo Diriker would handle a new long-term comprehensive plan, and General Manager Bob Thompson would prepare a request for proposals for a new reserve study.

Aveta and Moroney are residents and volunteers. Diriker, founding director of the Business. Economic. and Community Outreach Network at SU, would receive grant money and two payments of $8,250 from Ocean Pines to cover two stages of the study. The vendor of the reserve study was, and apparently still is, to be determined.

As for progress made on those plans, Stevens said this week that it has turned out to be a case of easier said than done.

Those things are easy to say and hard to do," Stevens said. "I've been one of the people that's said those things, and now I'm trying to do it."

According to Stevens the first two plans are well under way, while the reserve study "should be under way" by the end of Julv.

"The [request for information] went out, responses have been evaluated, and three out of five companies were invited to come and give a presentation," he said. "Two of the companies have given us prices, but they're not their best and final."

Stevens said the prospective vendors would likely make their pitch to the board during an open meeting, the date of which was not set.

"The board will ask questions and, hopefully, the general membership will be enlightened at the same time we will," Stevens said. "Then we'll give them a few days and ask them to come back with their best and final offer."

When the offers come in, according to Stevens, Aveta and Moroney will evaluate and make a recommendation to Thompson, who will take the results to the board for a vote, likely during the July 30 meeting.

The comprehensive plan, Stevens said, is in the hands of Diriker.

"He has already been gathering information and I think it's moving along," Stevens said, adding, "I'm kind of watching this one from afar." Stevens said the CIP was "slow moving," but making progress. "To a certain extent, it should coincide with the arrival of the completion of the reserve study, and I'm guessing six-to-eight weeks on the reserve study," he said.

The goal is to have all three major studies at least partially completed in time for work on the next fiscal year budget, which generally begins in September in Ocean Pines.

"That's the plan, anyway," Stevens said.

While the purpose of the reserve study is, on the surface, to gauge how much money the community has in reserve and how much it should have, Stevens said the actuality is a little more complex.

'The reserve study focuses on all of our assets," he said. "It tends to look at specific facilities and specific components of our facilities. The reserve study, as I would expect it to be done would, let's say, go into the county club and it would look at the roof, it would look at the foundation, it would look at the HVAC system, the plumbing, the electricity, each of those components of the individual building."

Stevens said the work Aveta and Moroney have done thus far has been to compile known data and look for obvious gaps in information. That includes the 2008 reserve study, the 2010 report by the OPA Facility Task force, the 2011 report by the 10-year Facility Plan Task Force, as well as various engineering surveys and of BHH Affiliates, rvices symbol are maintenance work orders.

Newer facilities, like the yacht club, are rich with data, while older amenities, including the aforementioned country club, are less up to date and may require fresh information.

While the CIP will obviously share some data overlap with the reserve study, Stevens said the CIP and the comprehensive plan were "fundamentally different."

"In my view the comprehensive plan is about major changes that will influence what happens in Ocean Pines, let's say, 10 years out. The operative question is, what's going to be different 10 years from now?" he said.

On the other hand, the CIP, Stevens said, would specially address "current assets and what has to be done to preserve - or improve them.'

"That's where the overlap comes in," Stevens said. "If the comprehensive plan says we need a different kind of beach club and it should do different things and it makes a case for that because of changing demographics or - it could be environmental issues, it could be anything then obviously that would be taken into account when you're looking at any serious improvement or replacement of that particular asset.

The comprehensive plan, really, is looking at what we think is going to be different [in 10 years]," Stevens added. "What is our plan for future expansion? Will we buy surrounding properties? It's the larger issues."

The last comprehensive plan in Ocean Pines, Stevens said, was conducted in 2002.

"The capital improvement plan is really looking at our existing assets," Stevens said. That includes infrastructure such as roads and bridges, where recent reports have suggested some of those assets are literally crumbling.

The point was emphasized when, during a recent board meeting, one resident claimed a sizeable chunk of concrete from the one of the bridges recently fell onto his boat as he passed underneath. OPA Board Candidate Slobodan Trendic also brought up the issue of bridges during the June 25 forum.

That particular part of Ocean Pines' infrastructure is tricky because state funding comes into play, and the percentages may vary depending on whether the community attempts to repair or replace a bridge. Stevens estimated the state would cover as much as 80 percent of replacement costs, for example.

Stevens said the county inspects bridges every two years, the last such study coming in 2013. The next study, he said, is due in November of this year.

"In the 2013 study they recommended a number of repairs. Some of them were of the 'do it right now' type, and then there was a second list, which was called 'priority repairs.' The total of those priority repairs were around $360,000," Stevens said.

Stevens added that the 2011 study "didn't have the bridges past the critical point," although it did recommend a host of repairs, most of which were never done. Those issues on the 2013 county study listed as critical, Stevens said, "were not the most expensive ones and they're not in the life-threatening category."

Specifically on bridges, Stevens said the plan was to either create work groups or have the board meet directly with County Director of Public Works John Tustin in order to "walk us through exactly what this process is."

"That is the action that really has to be taken, but it is a process," he said.

The other issues the community is attempting to tackle in the studies, Stevens said, "are no less compli-cated," and include amenities, information technology and bulkheads.

"There are a lot of things and you have to say, 'do I want to spend this much money in our next budget?' when, in fact, updates and engineering reports [on amenities like the country club] might show that really, we have to do a major renovation. That's the issue that's been facing the board and the general manager before Bob and has faced Bob since he's been in there.

"It's a hard problem, and what we're trying to do is say, 'here are our options' and not look at it as an immediate thing," Stevens continued. "This is a plan of action for the next, it could be up to 10 years, and here are alternative plans of action. And if we can decide on a first step then that can be budgeted in the next coming year. That's what the CIP should be.

Nearly every item on the CIP list, Stevens said, "either has some renovation or replacement needs, or it has some serious maintenance needs." If the study is successful it will tell the board when each item needs to be addressed, and in what order.

"It's based on specific requirements from specific engineering reports, and it's based on what the reserve study says - very much so," Stevens said. "Right now our reserve study is eight your old and we don't have up-to-date engineering studies. We haven't asked the questions about, 'do we really need this, or do we need a different kind of one, or another kind of one?' Specifically it's about what are our needs to keep our assets as they are.'

While Stevens said it would be useful to have much of the work done by the time the next board meets for the first time in August, the larger looming deadline is the fiscal year 2016 budget.

"In my mind that's going to be the real driver," he said. "That should be the actual target. There should be specific things in there that are related to the CIP and in specific areas, and areas that I'd like to see are IT and bridges on the infrastructure side, and the county club on the facilities side.

"The trouble is you have to do all the rest too, but they don't have to be done to the same detail," he added. "I don't see the same urgency in any of

Apparently, OP amenities profit

By Josh Davis

(July 2, 2015) Although it's been a matter of some debate in Ocean Pines, a report obtain by the Gazette this week shows that Ocean Pines amenities did turn a profit during the previous fiscal year.

What they did not do, however, was generate enough money to cover all the unrelated expenses elsewhere in the Ocean Pines Association's operation.

Overall, the community, run as a nonprofit, lost money, with a sub-net of -$29,419 and an overall net loss of $182,419 after adding in $153,000 in capital and loan principal payments.

Positive returns at the Beach Club ($92,723), Beach Club Parking ($414,846), marinas ($132,697) and racquet sports ($3,993) offset losses at the yacht club (-$189,152), golf (-$107,649) and aquatics (-$168,614).

All told, the amenities finished with a net gain of $178,844.

CPI, recreation, police and public relations posted a net loss of $1,953,659, while cost centers, including the manager's office, finance, membership, general maintenance, public works and fire/EMS, also posted net losses across the board, totaling $2,736,886.

Crush n Crab cuts ribbon on former Boomers in Berlin

By Josh Davis Staff Writer

(July 2, 2015) Crush n Crab, one of Berlin's newest restaurants, tested the waters last weekend with an unannounced soft opening.

Located at the site once occupied by Boomers, the Eastern Shore-style seafood house also celebrated with a ribbon cutting on Wednesday.

"The soft opening went really well," Owner John Cookro said on Monday. "Our official opening is July 1, and we'll probably have a grand opening after we get 30 days under our belt."

Signs at the restaurant were not in place until late Monday.

"I've been really pleased with business with not having a sign on the building given the volume that we had Friday, Saturday and Sunday," Cookro said. "I think people were really happy with the crabs that we got, and it seems like the chicken is a big hit and the ice cream's a big hit. We had some latenight people that came up and got ice cream on Sunday night."

Cookro said breakfast also went over well.

"Generally we wanted to stop breakfast at 11 a.m., that was our hours posted, but on Sunday I think we're going to extend late because we had a lot of people come after church. Across the board, we were very pleased."

The restaurant is putting an emphasis on local products, getting its crabs, clams, fish, oysters and mussels locally, as well as ice cream and, potentially, root beer.

Crush n Crab is located at the corner of Route 113 and South Main Street in Berlin. The restaurant is open seven days a week, 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, and 7 a.m. to midnight on Friday and Saturday.

For information, call 410-973-2350, or search Crush n Crab on Facebook.

OPINION BAYSIDE GAZETTE

Next time, try adding some substance to political forum

The Ocean Pines Association election forum last Wednesday was an interesting exercise in ... filling up the allotted time and letting the public see who was running.

Beyond that, it offered no new revelations, few, if any, bold visions and no detailed plans for solving whatever problems were identified.

That's hardly the fault of the Elections Committee, which staged the event, but is just the way most politics are these days, whether that would be in a town, a city, a state or a property owners' association.

What candidates generally do everywhere is concentrate on what previous administrations did right or wrong and how their individual personal qualities will enable them to do a good job if they are elected. Little mention is made of exactly what they propose to do and how they will do it.

In the OPA instance, the break between candidates at the forum seemed to be who supports General Manager Bob Thompson and who doesn't.

That, of course, has nothing to do with how well a candidate can address the needs and desires of the community. Besides, if being pro- or anti-GM is the most critical element in determining Ocean Pines' future, then it is one lucky community indeed.

Given the length of time the association's election covers, candidates still have the opportunity to step away from that old argument and present their positions and plans on the myriad other issues that Ocean Pines either faces now or will face in the next few years.

If they can't do that, then voters will have little to help them make a decision in a race that would be, unfortunately, more about style more than substance.

AAA projects 41.9M to travel for July 4

(July 2, 2015) AAA projects 41.9 million Americans will journey 50 miles or more from home this Independence Day, the most since 2007 and a 0.7 percent increase compared to last year's holiday.

The Independence Day holiday travel period is defined as Wednesday, July 1 to Sunday, July 5.

"This Independence Day, more people will get in their cars, board airplanes, and take buses, trains and cruise ships to celebrate our nation's freedom with friends and family," said Ragina Cooper Averella, manager of AAA Mid-Atlantic's Public and Government Affairs. "Students all across the nation are also celebrating freedom from pencils and books, making this an ideal time for a family vacation. Independence Day is typically the busiest summer travel holiday for this reason, and this year more Americans are planning a holiday getaway than any year since 2007."

Rising income, driven by a strong employment market, is prompting more Americans to take a holiday trip this year. Despite recent seasonal increases, gas prices remain well below year-ago levels, which has helped boost Americans' disposable income.

"Although some consumers are using their recent savings on gas to pay down debt and save, overall, Americans are planning to travel in record numbers," Averella said. "Independence Day gas prices are expected to be the lowest in at least five years, a welcome sign for the 35.5 million people planning a holiday road trip."

Nearly 85 percent of travelers (35.5 million) will drive to their holiday destinations, an increase of 0.7 percent. Holiday air travel is expected to increase 1.5 percent to 3.21 million leisure travelers. Travel by other modes of transportation including cruises, trains and buses, will increase 0.5 percent this Independence Day, to 3.2 million.

AAA expects to rescue nearly 360,000 motorists at the roadside this Independence Day weekend, with the primary reasons being dead batteries, flat tires and lockouts. AAA recommends motorists inspect their vehicle and check the condition of their battery and tires before heading out on a holiday getaway. Members can download the AAA Mobile app, visit AAA.com or call 1-800-AAA-HELP to request roadside assistance when needed.

Despite recent seasonal increases in the price of gas, travelers continue to benefit from substantially lower prices compared to recent years. Most drivers will likely pay the lowest Independence Day gas prices in at least five years.

Travelers will encounter moderately higher lodging rates and airfares this Independence Day. According to AAA's Leisure Travel Index, the average nightly stay in a Two Diamond hotel is six percent higher this year at $145, while Three Diamond hotels will cost nine percent more, averaging $195. Average airfares for the top 40 domestic flight routes are six percent higher this Independence Day, climbing to $227.

Before setting out on an Independence Day getaway, download the AAA Mobile app for iPhone, iPad and Android, free to both members and nonmembers. Travelers can use the app to map a route, find current gas prices, and if a AAA member, can access exclusive discounts, make travel arrangements, request AAA roadside assistance and more. Learn more at AAA.com/mobile.

With the AAA Mobile app, travelers can find more than 58,000 AAA Approved and Diamond Rated hotels and restaurants via TripTik Travel Planner. Every AAA approved establishment offers the assurance of acceptable cleanliness, comfort and hospitality, and ratings of one-tofive Diamonds help travelers find the right match for amenities and services.

(July 2, 2015) From patriotic concerts and fireworks to a hot dog-eating contest and 5K race, Ocean City and the surrounding towns have an abundance of ways to celebrate Independence Day.

Here are a few events taking place this weekend:

OCEAN CITY: • Uptown Concert and Fireworks:

At Northside Park on 125th Street, The Janitors kick off a free concert Saturday at 8 p.m. followed by a fireworks show at 9:30 p.m. The National Anthem will lead the patriotic show.

"Northside Park is a spectacular place for families to watch the colorful displays light up the evening sky and lagoon," Ocean City Mayor Rick Meehan stated in a press release.

"We encourage spectators to get there early to claim their spot to watch the fireworks," which visitors can catch from anywhere in the park.

A stage will be assembled in the restaurant's parking lot for the 10minute event, which is modeled after Nathan's famous Fourth of July international contest. Bleachers will be set up in front of the stage for spectators.

Last year's winner, David Brunelli, of Philadelphia, Pa. ate 28 hot dogs in 10 minutes.

Fish Tales and Coors Light are sponsoring the event. Dietz & Watson will supply the hot dogs and specials from Coors Light will be offered. Hot dogs will be on sale during the contest.

The family-friendly timed race starts at 8 a.m. in the Veterans Memorial Park on Cathell Road where participants will go around the park, head into the woods and come back out onto the road.

At the finish line, flags from each of the military branches will be on display and organizers encourage runners to support the military by wearing red, white and blue.

Awards will be given for the most patriotically dressed female, male and child runners.

Registration costs $35 and begins at 7 a.m.

The all-American celebration will include a deejay, face painting, water slides, carnival games and refreshments. Festivities take place until 2 p.m.

Wristbands for unlimited rides on the water slides costs $6 and tickets will be sold for additional rides and games including a dunking booth.

Swimming at the Sports Core Pool on Cathell Road is free for swim members. Adult, non-members pay $8 and children ages 5-17 are $6. Add $1 for nonresidents.

• Fireworks:

Ocean Pines festivities come to a close with a free fireworks display at Showell Park across from Showell Elementary School on Racetrack Road, Saturday night.

Visitors are encouraged to watch the display from Showell Elementary School, the Community Church of Ocean Pines, Most Blessed Sacrament School, St. John Neumann Church or the Pavilions for a good view. Free parking will also be available in these locations.

Fireworks will begin at 9:15 p.m., the event is open to the public and the Community Church at Ocean Pines will be selling refreshments and offering activities for children prior to Visitors should note that the Town of Ocean City is charging a $50 flat fee for all-day parking at the inlet lot on July 4.

Visitors can arrive as early as 5:30 a.m. and stay until midnight without paying the hourly rate. The fee is good for one entry only. Those arriving after 3 p.m. pay $30 for the one-entry fee, which is based on availability.

Once the inlet lot is full, visitors should seek neighboring parking lots on Worcester Street, Somerset Street, Dorchester Street, North Division Street, Fourth Street and the West Ocean City Park & Ride. Normal ticketed parking operations will return at midnight on July 5.

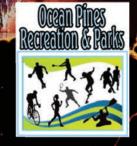

Because parking is extremely limited at the downtown and uptown fireworks show locations, the town recommends that visitors take the bus. The West Ocean City Park & Ride on Route 50 is just west of the Route 50 Bridge and offers free parking and $3 ride-all-day shuttle service to the downtown.

Area boaters should also note that on the evening of July 4, the span of the Route 50 Bridge will remain closed to marine traffic from 9:30 p.m. until 11:30 p.m. The Route 50 Bridge will reopen and operate under the normal schedule for boaters at 11:30 p.m. on July 4.

CUISINE BAYSIDE GAZETTE

When things get squirrelly, go with Coke

As I sit here eating my mild carnitas tacos, I reminisce of a day not too long ago. It was Christmas 2014. The air was crisp, and I was outside sitting on the front porch enjoying my spoils of war. The dog was p r a n c i n g around the yard in an effort to find a suitable toilet when she came to a complete standstill.

By Paul Suplee, CEC PCIII

As soon as she did, and before I saw that which had grabbed her attention, I heard a deliberate and ominous "flawp, flawp, flawp!" I looked up just in time to see a monstrous hawk swooping onto the branch of the tree that was nine feet away from me and nine feet up, which Pythagoras tells us put a mere 12.7 feet between me and this magnificent beast. If you've never been this close to a mature hawk, suffice it to say I could feel her talons and her piercing glare. I cannot lie; it was a touch unnerving.

In her talons was a squirrel, no longer of the living, and I'm not sure whether the raptor lost her grip or whether it was a Christmas gift, but the squirrel flopped to the ground. I looked at the hawk. The hawk leered back at me. It seemed like hours. The dog sat motionless, not even barking.

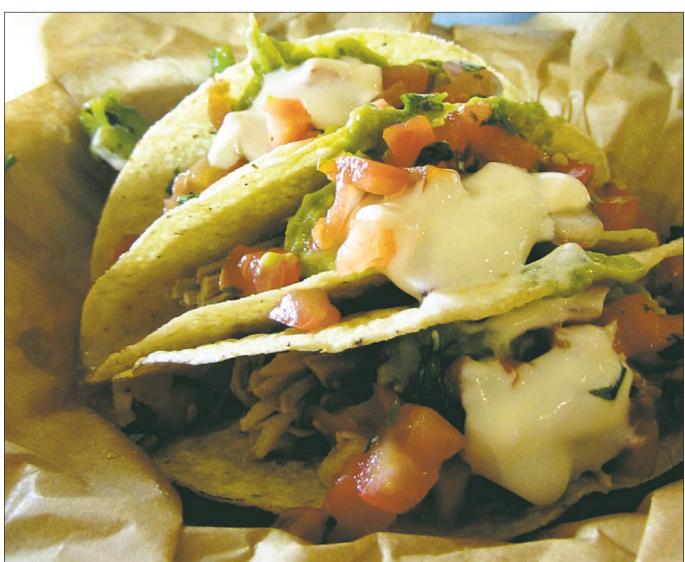

And as soon as it started the hawk flew away, leaving me a gift of squirrel on this glorious winter's day. I grabbed the squirrel carefully as I was concerned that the hawk would think that I was stealing its meal, and carried it to the side yard, all the while staring at the bird now 30 feet above me in a different tree. That evil eye will never leave my soul. All she had to do was look at me to tell me quite candidly that the prey was hers and that I had better leave the damn thing at the base of the tree. I complied.

Still the dog didn't move.

The hawk flew around for a while, and once she was assured that I was not planning a surprise attack, she swooped down and reclaimed her own spoils. It was not a gift after all.

Despite the fact that I still feel jilted by what I thought was a hawk's friendship and gift, I still want to give you the greatest gift known to man; a gift that has plagued millions over generations. This gift is the answer to the age-old question: "Coke or Pepsi?"

To me, it seems like it shouldn't even be a contest, but it must be addressed, so arduous are the arguments for both sides. As I'm not one to offer up suspense, I'll give you my answer. Pepsi with super spicy foods, and Coke for absolutely everything else under the sun. In other words, Coke is your go-to and Pepsi is just a backup for when things really get heated up; a support actor.

And there you have it; an emptyhanded gift such as the dead squirrel that I was convinced was mine in a moment of Christmas cheer (maybe "cheer" isn't the word for it). I'm happy to help. Now go eat something spicy. Or not.

Carnitas Tacos

Serves 4 12 Corn tortillas 1 lb. Carnitas (recipe follows) 2 c. Guacamole (recipe follows) 1 c. Pico de Gallo 1 c. Crema fresca Lettuce, optional Cheese, optional Hot sauce of your choice Assemble tacos Serve tacos Eat aforementioned tacos

Carnitas

Makes a pound

- 1 lb. pork shoulder, trimmed and cubed
- 1/2 Red onion
- 8 cloves peeled garlic
- 1 c. Sour orange juice
- Juice and zest of 2 limes

Juice and zest of 2 lemons

- 1 Tbsp. Salt
- 1 tsp. Cracked black pepper
- 1 tsp. Dried thyme

1 tsp. Cumin

Place ingredients in a Dutch oven or other pan with a lid.

Top off with water until just at the top of the pork.

Bring to a high simmer (just under a full boil), and then lower it to a nice simmer, skimming the scum from the top of the liquid.

Cook for as long as it takes to make the pork tender and easy to shred; 1.5-2 hours should do it.

When the pork is done, remove but make sure not to break it up, and strain the liquid. Place the liquid back in the pan and reduce to a nice, viscous glaze.

Combine the pork and the glaze, making sure to keep the pieces as large as possible and set aside until ready to use.

A true carnitas has a bit of a bite to it, so I like to heat some oil in a pan and fry the larger pieces of carnitas so that they have a crispy outside. Then, when you shred them, the pork on the inside is nice and tender.

Your carnitas is ready to go. That's all there is to it.

Guacamole

Yields about 2 cups

2 Avocado, soft and not brown

- 1/4 c. Red onion, finely minced
- 1/4 c. Fresh cilantro, finely minced

1/4 c. Fresh tomato, finely diced

Juice of 1 lime

1 Jalapeno, finely diced

1 garlic clove, smashed

Mash the avocado to the consistency of your liking, and then fold in all other ingredients. Season to taste.
