Annual Berlin Bathtub Races return Friday

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) Eighty-four-year-old Jesse Turner knows a thing or two about racing bathtubs.

The owner of The Shoebox on Main Street in downtown Berlin first realized he possessed this unusual skill more than two decades ago, when he first took part in the sport.

Turner had just become chairman of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce, having taken over for Jim Barrett.

"Jim started the races and our first year was 1994," he said. "It was a big deal back then and there were other areas that wanted to jump in. One place was racing hospital beds."

While many of today's racing vehicles hardly resemble actual bathtubs – case in point, last year Burley Oak Brewing Co. simply put wheels on a beer barrel – Turner's original vehicle was just as advertised.

"Mine started off with a go-kart frame and I had an original bathtub," he said. "As the years passed, we go into bigger wheels, using a four-wheel bicycle, but it was always the same tub. The only improvement we ever made was bigger wheels."

The rules of the 26-year-old races call for at least two participants during each heat: one driving the vehicle, and another pushing it.

For Turner that usually meant family friends Turon Davis and Tony Purdue. One year, however, Purdue couldn't make it because of work.

"We had guy from Pennsylvania just standing on the [starting] line. He said, 'Do you need somebody to sit in that thing?' I said, 'Yeah' and he hopped in and steered and we won the race," Turner said.

While the races have changed every year, Turner said, with new participants emerging and old ones cycling in and out, he marveled at how some of the "bathtubs" have evolved.

"Mine was the only one like this," he said. "People would say, 'How come you don't go to three wheels?' I said, 'No, I'm going to stay original.' "The year before last we had a new guy – he had a canoe. All they say is it has to be able to carry water."

Turner retired from the races three years ago after winning a record five times, including four in a row during one particularly auspicious stretch.

The secret to winning, he said, is having a fast pusher. Long legs are not necessarily an asset.

"If you got a tall guy pushing on it, you need to be standing back," he said. "Otherwise, his knees are going to be bumping the wheels."

Turner also advised finding a driver who weighs less than 100 pounds and isn't easily distracted.

"All you've got to do is steer it," Turner said. "Don't be looking around, just keep doing it. If you look around you might move this way or that. You've got to keep rolling."
"It helped that my racer was awful light," Turner continued. "You just push it a little bit and she'll get running down the road. The only thing about that is you've got to have good brakes and make sure the guy who's pushing it, when you get to the finish line, hangs onto you. Otherwise your tub will keep right on going."
Turner said he still watches the races "most years." And although he's in retirement, he didn't rule out racing.
"It was a fun time," he said. "Someone from the town or the chamber approached me about displaying [the racer], and I told them right now I've got it in my garage up on a shelf, flat tires and everything."
"Next year though, I might bring it out, and there's a chance I might find a good pusher and a good runner. I might try again," Turner said.

The 26th annual Berlin Bathtub Races, sponsored by the Berlin Chamber of Commerce, run from 6-8 p.m. Friday, July 17, in downtown Berlin.

New details emerge on candidate Trendic

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) New details emerged this week in the June 20 incident involving Ocean Pines Board of Directors candidate Slobodan Trendic and an apparent DWI.

Trendic had been charged with numerous traffic offenses stemming from that evening, including drinking and driving and leaving the scene of an accident, according to a release issued by the Ocean Pines Police Department.

According to police, the incident took place close to midnight at 82 Windjammer Road in Ocean Pines at the home of Lanny and Kay Hickman, where Trendic allegedly struck a parked vehicle in the driveway, did additional damage to the property and drove away from the scene.

The report alleged $11,000 in damage's to Hickman's Ford SUV, and an additional $3,150 in property damages based on an estimate by Atlantic Stonewall Inc.

Police ultimately followed a trail of radiator fluid to Trendic's residence, where an officer saw Trendic in his car and asked him if he had struck the other vehicle on Windjammer Road.

According to police, Trendic answered he had hit the car because he had apparently been startled by a rabbit that ran out in front of him.

Police also said that Trendic said he had been at the Yacht Club, where he had consumed at least two beers.

Slobodan Trendic

He then proceeded to fail or perform poorly on a battery of roadside sobriety tests and was charged, police said.

At some point, however, Trendic apparently put a note on the Hickmans' damaged car with his insurance information and later in the morning apologized personally to the Hickmans.

"He was very contrite, and why not?" Hickman said. "He's running for office for God's sake."

When contacted about the incident, Trendic said his lawyer had advised him not to comment.

Berlin employees give thanks, cake to mayor and council

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) In front of a packed house at Town Hall on Monday night, the Town of Berlin staff thanked the mayor and council for its leadership.

Managing Director Jeff Fleetwood, who presented the council with a cake, said the employees were there to commend their employers.

"All these folks are here obviously to see you all," he said. "We did this last year and I can tell you, just with my interaction with the employees that are here and the employees that aren't here, I thought the momentum ... has gotten stronger. The appreciation that they have for you all as supervisors or bosses or whatever we want to call you has grown and grown and grown."

Fleetwood said Berlin was "a wonderful place to work ... and it's because of you guys."

Electric Utilities Director Tim Lawrence presented the mayor and council with a card on behalf of his department.

"When I came here five years ago, I came here for a reason," he said. "The town of Berlin reminded me of where I used to be 30 years ago, just the way it had the hometown feel to it. I'll be honest, it just feels like a big family."

turn, thanked the staff.
"Your attitude of putting public service first and taking pride in your community is being noticed by a lot of people," he said. "Everybody seems to get it."
"Many of you see our citizens sometimes at their worst because they're either upset, panicked, a little scared or not sure what to do, and then you come through and fix the problem [and] you always show them courtesy and respect. That, to me, says everything. It's our privilege to serve you," Williams said.

Second time's charm for OPA Parke forum

Six attending candidates generally happy with latest Ocean Pines political debate

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) Although several candidates for the Ocean Pines Association Board of Directors voiced their displeasure over the format and moderation style of a previous candidate forum held in June, most seemed pleased with the debate at The Parke last Tuesday.

Six of the seven board candidates, vying for two positions, participated in what was billed as an "ice cream social," allowing for a 45-minute meet-and-greet period before the two-hour forum.

"It was a huge improvement,"

Cheryl Jacobs said. "First of all, nobody was being rude to the people who were attending. It was very well organized and the questions were typed and handed out to the people, so it was far superior."

Handicapping her own performance, Jacobs said she did well "based on the number of people that came up to me afterwards and said I had their vote."

"If that's a barometer, I would say that that's a good sign," she said.

Jacobs said the campaign was going well overall.

"I've had people calling and saying, 'we want your signs,' and I've been getting positive feedback," she said. "I have some very good people working on my behalf – Diane McGraw and Marlene Ott and others, so I think I've got a good support team."

I'm keeping my fingers crossed."

Bill Zawacki, former board member and current candidate, agreed the typed-out questions were helpful.

"It allowed each person to have the question in front of them, instead of trying to remember what the question was five people earlier," he said. "A number of things went better."

Zawacki thought he did "pretty well" during the debate.

"All the questions, the lead-in and the closing were limited to two minutes each, so you always think of things after you're having to sit down that you wish you had said or you wanted to say, but didn't have time," he said.

Former board member Terri Mohr also praised the forum, saying it was well-run and provided "great questions" to the candidates.

"I thought it was very good, and we had a good turnout of people," she said. "I lived through it, and I did my best, like I always try to do."

Carol Ludwig said she was happy with the turnout.

"I thought it went well," she said. "A decent amount of people came out and they had good questions."

One of the questions, Ludwig said, involved the way Ocean Pines is portrayed in the media.

"I just think that sometimes when people are asked for their opinions, they're not speaking on their own behalf," she said. "Any time you hold any type of a position and you're a voting member and a representative you need to be a team player."

"Some of the newspapers are kind enough to cover us and interview us, but sometimes the information doesn't make it quite the way it was presented by the person," she added. "Sometimes it's not perceived the same way as the person is trying to communicate. None of us are great at public speaking – or politics."

That's what I think the problem is – none of us are politicians."

Slobodan Trendic admitted it was difficult to perform under the circumstances, given a recent report that he received a DWI near his home in Ocean Pines.

"I tried to do what I could and tried to be true to myself, and hopefully the audience noticed that and appreciate it," he said.

Trendic differed from Ludwig on the issue of media coverage, saying the actual question aimed more towards the tone of the current board of directors.

"I believe she's addressing question number four, which read, 'If I were considering moving to Ocean Pines today and read the local papers I would think twice. What do the candidates plan to do if they [become] elected about all the infighting, backstabbing and pettiness of the current board and get on with the real issues?'" he said.

"I focused on the real question, which was what would the candidates do to stop the infighting and focus on the real issues," Trendic

Thompson question ruffles feathers

“Basically, all I did was state what I would do, if elected, to bring some harmony at the board level.”

Another controversial question, according to Thomas Herrick, involved the performance of General Manager Bob Thompson.

“They basically asked us outright is Bob Thompson’s performance acceptable or unacceptable,” he said. “I’m not a person who likes to criticize or talk bad about someone in public, and I felt like I was put in a trick box with that question. It was very difficult for me and I hesitated, but I realized had to be honest and say how I feel: I think we can do better.

“That’s the reason why I’m running, because I’m not particularly happy exactly how things are going, and I really feel for the people we can do better,” Herrick added.

Herrick admitted he nervous going into the forum.

“I’m not a great public speaker and I thought that that would be a hurdle for me to go over, but I try my best and I put myself out there and I’m hoping what I’m trying to do resonates with the people,” he said.

Former board member Ray Unger was absent during the forum.

“I totally and completely forgot about it,” he said. “I had no excuse. I just had my head up my [rear] and completely forgot about it.”

Otherwise, Unger said, the campaign has gone “alright.”

“I’m really not going crazy on it,” he said. “I look at it this way: if enough people out there remember me, remember my name and want to pull the trigger, that’s fine with me. My world won’t end if I don’t make it, but I enjoyed being on the board. I had a lot of fun with it and still would. That’s why I’m trying to do it again – I like it.”

Berlin Little League All Stars heading to state tournament

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) One team from the Berlin Little League All Stars is heading to the state championships after dominating during district play, while another has reached the District 8 semifinal game.

The 9-10 All Stars advanced after Luke Mergott and Brenner Gursky combined to throw a six-inning, one-hit shutout against Fruitland on Sunday, leading the team to a 9-0 victory. Jack Quizgard added three key hits in the win, according to Coach Craig Lynch.

Mergott and Gursky previously no-hit Snow Hill en route to a four-inning slaughter-rule 13-0 victory last Friday.

While the pitching has been sterling during the early rounds of all-star play, allowing just four hits over five games, Lynch said the offense has been equally productive.

“We outscored our opponents 72-2, and both of those two runs were unearned – they were on walks,” he said.

Up next, the 9-10 team advances to the state tournament in Frederick, playing Conococheague (District 1) at 3:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Last year, the 9-10 team took home the state championship, while the 13-year-old intermediate squad went all the way to the final game of the Little League World Series in Livermore, Ca.

Eric Snelsire, who coached the 9-10 team last year, led this year’s 11-12 team to the District 8 semifinal game, held after press time Wednesday evening, at West Salisbury.

The team lost the opening round of district pool play 14-0 against Delmar, then rallied from a 6-1 deficit on Sunday to beat Fruitland 8-6.

“We tied it up in the fifth and won it in the top of the sixth with a two-out, two-run double by Evan Truitt,” Snelsire said. “That was a big win for us to come from behind against a

Berlin All Stars keep postseason dreams alive

good Fruitland team to stay alive.”
The 11-12 team won 8-1 against Willards on Monday in order to advance to the semifinals.
Snelsire said his team is on the young side, with roughly half of his roster is made up of last year’s state championship team.
“It’s very similar to our team last year in that they’re kind of split between the age groups,” he said. “Our 11-year-old group is really strong, so it’s nice to join forces with the 12-year-olds and try to compete. To have to split the team between 11 and 12-year-olds is going to challenge us in some regard as we move forward, but at the same token these guys are really talented and they’ve worked hard.

“It’s been a really good couple weeks of practices, and everyone’s putting in the work to be as good as they can be. I’m really proud of them,” Snelsire added.

Lynch credited travel ball play with the across-the-board success of Berlin’s Little League all-stars, who seem to bring home state championships on a regular basis.
“On my team, all but one player plays travel ball,” he said. “Without playing baseball year-round, the teams would not be as good as they are.
“We’ve got a couple of crazy parents like myself who are dedicated to it, and it only takes three or four parents like that ... willing to put their kids in an opportunity to succeed and work hard and do the extra work to be good,” Lynch added.

Three of his team’s leading players, Mergott, Gursky and Cole Lynch, the coach’s son, are returning from last year’s state championship team. It’s not a coincidence, Lynch said, that all three players work out 12 months a year.
“All the credit goes to them for all the hard work they put in,” he said.

Pines Farmers Market hosts events in July

(July 16, 2015) The Ocean Pines Farmers Market will host two special events in July in its continued effort to offer market shoppers a variety of unique experiences in addition to its growing lineup of vendors.
On Saturday, July 18, the Worcester County Humane Society and the Ocean Pines Farmers Market will present the “Dog Day of Summer.” Market vendors Tumbleweed & Ed-dies and Best Friends Collars will be joined by other guest vendors offering pet products and services in an effort to raise funds for the no-kill Berlin shelter.
The event will include a demonstration by the Worcester County Sheriff’s Office K-9 Unit and raffle drawings. Donations of items needed by the shelter will also be accepted. Visit worcestercountyhumane.org for a list of items.

Joining the market on Saturday, July 25 at 10 a.m. will be author Kim Kash, whose Jamie August book series features Ocean City as a backdrop. Kash will read from her second book in the series, “Ocean City Cover-Up.”
Kash, who currently lives in the Middle East, finds writing about Ocean City an antidote for her homesickness.
“I’m sure some of my Maryland memories are whimsically inflated, just like the stories we tell about our own exploits back in the day: they get more farfetched with every telling,” she said. “But the affection I have for the people, the food, the attitude, the sheer fun of Ocean City is real, and it gets me through the culture shock that will probably always be a part of expat life.”

Kash will be available to sign copies of “Ocean City Cover-Up” and her first book in the Jamie August series, “Ocean City Lowdown.” Kash is also the author of “Ocean City: A Guide to Maryland’s Seaside Resort.”
The Ocean Pines Farmers Market is open every Saturday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. year-round in White Horse Park in Ocean Pines. It offers seasonal fresh produce, meat, eggs, seafood, wine, baked goods, kettle corn, gourmet food products, handcrafted items and more.

For more information about the Ocean Pines Farmers Market, including a complete list of vendors and upcoming events, visit www.OceanPines.org or visit the Ocean Pines Farmers Market on Facebook.

After brief delay, ballots mailed in Ocean Pines

Problems with candidate Q&A prompted correction; mailers sent out Tuesday

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) Ballots in this summer's Ocean Pines Association election were mailed a week late, following the discovery of a layout error with the candidate questionnaire in the Ocean Pines Association's quarterly newsletter.

Originally, ballots were to be mailed last Tuesday, but because of the mistake, the association included a corrected version of the candidate Q&A with the ballots, which were mailed this Tuesday.

The mistake involved candidate Thomas Herrick, whose response to one question was printed twice, once after being asked "What is your history of community involvement within Ocean Pines ..." and again after being asked, "What are the advantages & positive aspects of living in Ocean Pines ...?"

"I felt like I did a pretty decent job, especially with that first question, and I wanted to introduce myself to the community," Herrick said last Thursday. "My understanding is that the newsletter was mailed to 8,400 homes and everybody would have the opportunity to see that. I felt that if people looked at that and read that they would say, 'Hey, this guy doesn't even answer the question they asked.' And I felt like that would be a hit on my intelligence."

When Herrick learned about the error he sent emails to Marketing and Public Relations Director Teresa Travatello, Elections Chair Bill Wentworth and OPA Board President Dave Stevens.

"I explained to them that I felt that this was an error on Ocean Pines and I believe that it will hurt my candidacy, and I would appreciate if they could in some way correct the problem," Herrick said.

Herrick said Travatello replied first, saying a retraction on the email version of the newsletter would be sent immediately.

"She said that's about all I can do," Herrick said. "I emailed her back and said I believe a little bit more could be done" to notify people of the situation and to give them the opportunity to read the actual answer that he provided.

Herrick said several of the directors debated via email whether the community should reprint the entire Q&A, or provide Herrick's correction with the ballot mailing.

"There has to be a 50-word statement by each one of the candidates in the ballot," Herrick said. "I asked if they could just put my right answer to question one with my 50-word statement and let the people know they made a mistake in the quarterly newsletter."

Herrick said Stevens notified him they would do just that.

"Later on that night [Stevens] said Teresa and Bob Thompson made up their minds on what they were going to do, and they were going to print out all the questions from all the candidates and put it in the ballot. At the bottom of my answer to question one, they put in bold type that this was a correction from the newsletter."

Herrick was not pleased with the decision.

"If people already got the newsletter and they see the same thing, they're just going to say, 'Wait a minute - I already read this. I'm not going to bother reading the same thing' and dismiss it."

"It's totally different from what they told me," Herrick said. "At this point I don't feel it's satisfactory."

On Friday, Herrick reported that a compromise had been reached and that the correction notice will be placed before the first question.

"If this does occur, I believe a solution to the error was handled to my satisfaction," he said.

Bill Zawacki, a former board member and current candidate, also had issues with the original printing.

At the end of Zawacki's 50-word statement, he listed his phone number and email address, and asked voters to "contact [him] to discuss the issues."

"I had a colon at the end and my phone number and email," he said. "They left the phone number and email off, and changed the colon to a period."

Zawacki said his statement was within the 50-word limit, but that his contact information was omitted because the brochure already contained the address, phone number and email of each candidate in an introductory section.

"It's not that it was so bad for me, but for Tom, of course, it was just a total mess-up," he said.

Development comes with amenities

posed project as a cul-de-sac, will actually make use of a utility easement at the end of King Richard Road and secured by a gate Steen would install to move traffic directly onto Route 589.
The county's technical review committee is a body that looks at issues like these, ingress and egress, before the heavy lifting of zoning, special exceptions or any of the other more time-consuming parts of the development process even begin. Steen appeared before the OPA board on July 8.

The floor plan of the proposed housing is different than ones in previous developments such as Wood Duck Isle I-IV, Salt Grass Cove and Harbor Village. Dubbed the "Triple Crown Twin Home," the houses feature one-car garages and, like other custom homes, a number of features and add-ons to the basic floor plan.
"We've got to go with what the market can handle. This is for a downsizing person, or someone who has a summer home here but now wants to live here full time," Steen said. "Young families too, but this is not 55 and over."

Full build-out is not expected for three or four years, he said.
With these homes also come all the Ocean Pines amenities, and do without governmental hand-wringing over the size and costs of growth seen in neighboring communities.
"I had seven board members — unanimous approval. If the residents were not going to be members of Ocean Pines, I wouldn't have had that. All of these people have to join the Ocean Pines Association, and have access to the amenities," Steen said.

Annual Angler's Club kid's fishing contest, Saturday

Art Hansen memorial event returns to South Gate pond

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) The Ocean Pines Angler's Club will present its annual Art Hansen Memorial Youth Fishing Contest Saturday at the South Gate Pond, near the Sports Core Pool, on Cathell Road.

The event, now in its 19th year, will take place from 9-10:30 a.m. Registration will begin a half hour earlier, at 8:30.

Kids are asked to bring their own fishing rod and reels. Bait will be provided by the Angler's Club.

Three age groups, 4-7, 8-11 and 12-16 years old, will compete for awards for anglers who catch the most fish and to kids who catch the three largest fish.

Children under 4 years old are also welcome, but will not be eligible for trophies. All participants, however, will receive a prize donated by the Ocean City/Berlin Optimist Club and the Maryland Sportsfishing Association.

Organizer Walt Boge said sunfish, bluegills, bass and even the occasional catfish can be found in the pond.

Events such as the Youth Fishing Contest, as well as Teach a Kid to Fish Day, held last month, provide perfect bonding opportunities for kids and their parents, he added.

"A dad teaching his kid to fish is probably the best way to build a family relationship," Boge said. "Hopefully, the kids learn a little bit more about fishing and the joys of it."

No license is required to fish in the pond.

For more information, call 410-208-2855.

Fat Fish opens, sets sights on becoming ‘locals’ eatery

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) Following a short stint of soft openings, new West Ocean City eatery Fat Fish officially opened to the public on Tuesday, July 7.

The “all organic” restaurant offers starters, including wings, as well as salads, sandwiches, burgers and “beach burritos.”

“We wanted to do something where it’s not really touristy, where we do everything mostly for the locals,” Chef Joe Boncore said. “We’re trying to be organic and environmentally friendly, and these are all local guys who are doing it.”

Boncore previously worked at Caesar’s Palace in Las Vegas and Café Milano in Washington, D.C.

“We get our produce from Pittsville, our fish from down the street, our chicken and our beef and everything is GMO free,” he said. “We’re not using any plastics. We’re trying to make sure everything we use is biodegradable.”

During the lead up to opening, Boncore said word of mouth has been exceptional.

“Everyone has been coming here and saying, ‘Why aren’t you open yet?’ We’re trying to get there!” he said.

Fat Fish features a small dining area and a delivery service. Getting a reservation, however, could prove to be tricky, as opening and closing times may vary.

“Our motto is our hours vary to swell conditions, so depending on the [ocean] swells, we might close and all go surfing, but we’ll be back after we’ve gone surfing,” Boncore said.

Surfing, clearly, is a way of life for the staff.

“Everyone here has worked in the community and our partnership are all local guys that lived here, surfing and growing up here,” Boncore said. “They were sick of everything touristy, so we decided to do something that’s kind of like a local’s spot. It’s the friendliest place that you’ve ever seen.”

The staff built the interior “from scratch,” and Boncore added, “It seems like everybody in West OC has stopped by to try to help out, and we want to give some of that back.”

Weekly specials will include “doggy happy hour,” which offers free food to dogs “with a human order,” and “low pay Mondays.”

“We just want to be a fun, local kind of thing,” Boncore said. “Joe is like, ‘Well, you’ve worked in all these top places,’ and I always tell him, ‘Yeah, but this is going to be the funnest place.’”

Fat Fish is located on 12703 Sunset Avenue, Unit 7. For more information, call 410-390-5006 or visit fatfishoc.com.

Pines Youth Theater provides more than $4K in scholarships

Each of the six college scholarships was awarded to a graduating senior who has participated in The Ocean Pines Youth Theater productions and is pursuing a college major or minor in a performing arts discipline.

Have spooky good time during Berlin's ghost walk

By Kara Hallissey
Staff Writer

(July 16, 2015) As visitors tour nine supposedly haunted properties and a graveyard in Berlin, their guides on the Chesapeake Ghost Walk tell tales about deceased residents who continue to be spotted years after they died.

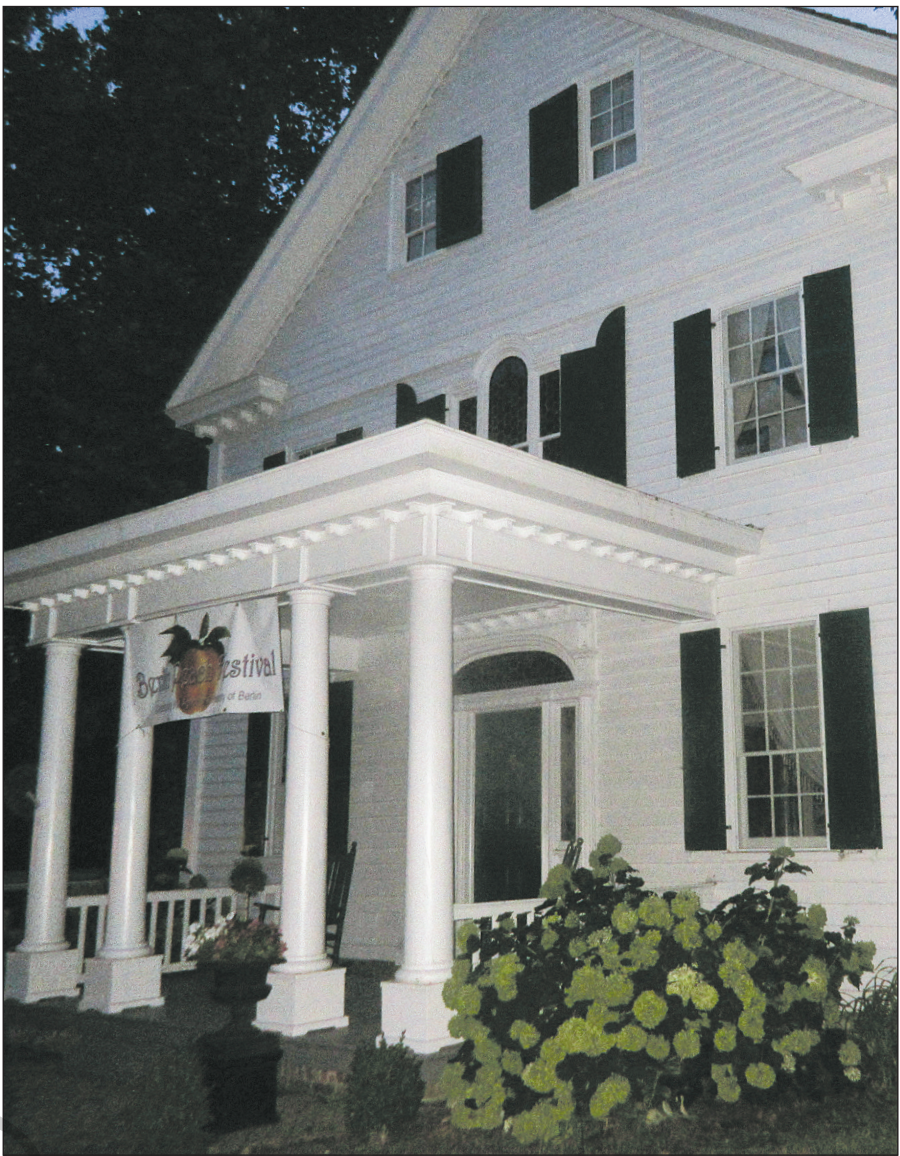

"Berlin is the only town where we have walking dead," said Mindie Burgoyne, Chesapeake Ghost Walk researcher and creator. "It's a fabulous place to have a ghost walk and the most mystical town we have out of all 10 walks."

The tour is about two hours long and encompasses 1.5 miles of the community.

The first stop, the Atlantic Hotel, is the center for hauntings in Berlin, with ghosts tied to the antique décor throughout the building and making appearances inside the rooms or hallways.

Recently, as the story goes, a woman came out of Room 16 and asked a daytime manager for towels. When she came back with the towels and knocked on the door no one would answer. After placing the towels on the bed to what looked to be an empty room, she went down to the front desk and found out no one was registered in Room 16.

Chesapeake Ghost Walk in Berlin on Thursdays

Around this time last year, a woman and her son-in-law went upstairs after checking into Room 10, but the door was closed. Rooms in the Atlantic Hotel are left open when unoccupied to show off the décor. After placing her hand on the doorknob, they both heard a woman's voice say, "Hello." When they told the wife what happened she opened the door. No one was inside and the son-in-law said later if he was not standing next to his mother-in-law and clearly heard the voice he would not have believed her.

Another story: an employee at the Atlantic Hotel was refurbishing Room 18 when he reached down for his paint scraper that went missing. He looked everywhere, left the door open and went downstairs to retrieve another one. When he came back upstairs, the door was closed and when he entered the room, his paint scraper was standing straight up in the middle of the room. To this day, the employee refuses to do work in Room 18.

And yet another: a woman was spending the afternoon with friends and walked up to Room 23 with packages in her hands. She entered and put the packages on the bed when the door suddenly closed behind her. Later, she went to leave and saw the security latch had been locked on its own. She went downstairs and had dinner with her husband. During the entire night, they would wake up every hour and not know why.

Tour guide Maria Pippen's favorite story is about a family of four who stayed in Room 18. They set the timer on their camera and took a few group shots before going out. The kids looked at the photographs and noticed another man standing beside the family.

"The man called down to the front desk and said he wanted to change rooms. Of course, employees wanted to try and resolve the situation," Pippen said.

Employees were stunned and quickly changed their room after seeing the photographs of a fifth person not staying with the family.

"I was giving the tour one night and telling this story when a man held up his room key and said well that's where we are staying tonight," Pippen recalled.

The next haunted site is the Town Center Antiques on Main Street, which has been dubbed by Burgoyne the "Store of Crazy Characters" because unique people have worked or been associated with the building throughout the years.

"I did not know what else to call it," she said. "You have Hudson receiving the alligator through the mail, Jake and Burbage sleeping in the window and Ned France hanging from the rafters putting on a magic show."

In the late 1800s, Mr. Hudson owned the store and one of his friends sent him a baby alligator in a cigar box through the mail. He decided to keep the alligator, named it Jake and built him a pen in the front window of the store as he continued to grow.

"Jake became quite the attraction with people coming to see how big he's gotten and parents were able to threaten their children into behaving," Pippen said.

Jake grew to be more than seven feet long and had to be moved outside where people could still visit. When Mr. Hudson sold his store to Dr.

Franklin, Jake was part of the package.

"He lived for years, entertaining crowds until he died in the 1960s," Pippen said. "Dr. Franklin was not ready to let go of Jake. He had him stuffed and placed in the front window where he remained for years."

The strange history of the store continues with story of John Howard Burbage, mayor of Berlin from 1962-1988, who once slept in the window of the shop since his actual home was not in town and he needed a residence to be eligible to run for office.

People did not find his sleeping quarters funny and on more than one occasion, a .22 pistol bullet burst through the window where he slept.

It is rumored a speakeasy was housed in the basement of the antique store during prohibition and late at night the current owner used to do her paperwork.

She could hear clinking glasses, music, people dancing, footsteps and card shuffling. When she would poke her head down it would stop and it started happening frequently enough that she decided to stop coming in at night because it would scare her.

Ned France was another character in Berlin who owned a bargain store and would come to the center of town in a strait jacket and hang upside down from the rafters in front of the antique store.

The eccentric magician is one of three walking dead in the town. France's Lurch-like-figure has been spotted hunched over walking up and down Main Street near the location of his store.

"He carried everything—from housewares to pharmaceuticals and

Oddities abound at Berlin hotspots like Taylor Museum

odd items such as medical implements, suits of armor and skeletons," Pippen said. "As he got older, his selection became stranger and larger."

Items from his store started spilling out into the street. There was only a U-shape cutout inside the store to browse around and he would take naps between serving customers.

Many of France's oddities are on display at the Calvin B. Taylor Museum and he has been spotted, reportedly, late at night walking up and down Main Street near his store.

The second walking dead, a woman in a white dress, is seen late at night in front of Calvin B. Taylor bank and appears to be waiting on the corner.

It is said that most residents in the second-floor apartments above the stores have spotted her on at least one occasion. One man who reportedly witnessed the apparition has retold his story to Pippen and other visitors on tours she has given.

"Late one night, he saw a misty woman in white and watched her for about five minutes before he woke up his roommate," Pippen recalled. "When they came back to catch a glimpse, she was gone."

A medium believes there may have been a carriage stop there back in the day.

The attorney's office of Jack Sanford was located in the current location of the Maryland Wine Bar and a coffee shop.

"His wife, Elizabeth, never let Jack out of her sight and loved slamming doors," Pippen said.

These days, when the wine bar still had a lounge area, a woman has been spotted sitting in the corner where Elizabeth would always wait for Jack to finish his work and doors will slam for no reason on occasions.

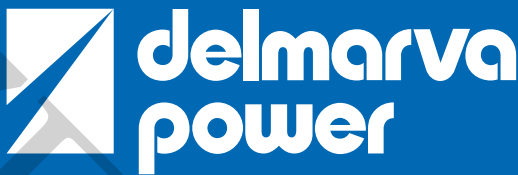

Last October, a couple was walking on Main Street one Thursday evening and stopped by the wine bar since its doors were open and lights on.

"The woman started looking at the wine list, grabbed a truffle and waited for someone to appear," Pippen said. "Suddenly, they got a weird feeling, figured no one was there, shut the door and left."

The next day, the couple returned to pay for the truffle and found out the owners would have never known if they did not come back to tell their story.

Next on the tour, is the Calvin B. Taylor Museum, where a lot of orb activity takes place and an old-fashioned gas lamp has appeared in pictures taken of the low window where Taylor's son died as an infant.

Harrisons part of Berlin's haunted history

Also, a “healing tree” is located out front of the house, which supposedly radiates heat, gives others a tingling feeling and is said to be located on a “ley line,” a geographical alignment that New Agers contend emanates mystical powers.

Although not haunted, the story of Windy Brow, home of the late Orlando Harrison and patriarch of Harrison Brothers Nurseries is essential to Berlin's history and growth.

Built in 1899, it sits near the railroad tracks in Berlin, which was a perfect location to ship his famous peaches to the White House, Philadelphia and all across the nation. At one time, Harrison Brothers Nurseries was the largest grower and distributor of peaches in the world.

As Orlando grew older, his son G. Hale Harrison, took over the family business and married Lois.

In the 1950s, G. Hale Harrison built the Harrison Hall Hotel on 15th Street in Ocean City as a gift to Lois, which started off the family's Ocean City hotel history.

Ten years later, a devastating peach blight wiped out the Harrison orchards and most of their assets were lost except for Windy Brow and Harrison Hall. Also, in 1961, G. Hale passed away.

“Windy Brow is one my favorite stories,” Burgoyne said.

The old Dairy Queen on Main Street was more recently home to Pink Box Bakery and owner Roberta Ward has spotted elementals of cats gathered around a dumpster outside supposedly looking for fish entrails. A fish market was located across the street decades ago.

“I will sum it up by saying the years I had that bakery, I never felt alone in that place,” Ward has said to Burgoyne.

There have been other mornings when she arrived to an open door, fans and lights on with no explanation. One day, she said, her assistant was cleaning the counter. She left to rinse out a rag, and found hieroglyphics written in the soap on her return.

On Pitts Street, the third walking dead of Berlin, Fred Pitts, has been reported. Pitts, who was a soldier in the Confederate army, has reportedly been seen walking up and down the street in his Civil War uniform in front of the abandoned house his father built.

“Fred is mentioned in history books because he was the one who caught J.E.B. Stuart as he fell from his horse and carried him off the battlefield at the Battle of Yellow Tavern in 1864,” Pippen said. “Maryland was a place where family members fought for the Union and Confederacy in the same family.”

Pitts was captured at Fort McHenry, released after the war ended and returned home to Berlin.

“Old folklore accounts claim Fred was never the same. He came back very withdrawn and was a loner,” Pippen said.

From time to time, Fred would put his Confederate uniform on and walk up and down the street.

When he died, the house was vacant for extended periods of time because no one would stay.

“The last family to live in the house bought it with the hopes of restoring the property,” Pippen said. “They packed up in the middle of the night and would not tell anyone what they saw.”

Another woman said her ex-husband lived in the house and every time her daughter would come to stay, she would get a phone call to pick her up.

The girl would wake up to see an older man at the end of her bed and the sounds of footsteps going up the stairs after her father fell asleep.

At nearby Baked Desserts Café, the previous home to Ayers General Store, owners have seen strange occurrences that cannot be explained except possibly Mr. Ayers' spirit returns to check up on his store.

“He ran a tight ship and made sure his store was always well organized with nothing out of place,” Pippen said. “Occasionally, Mr. Ayers comes back to express his displeasure with the current owners messiness.”

They claim to have seen doors fly open, ceiling fans changing speeds and lights going on and off. Once they came in to find a refrigerator door open a couple inches, even though it automatically closes and will not stay open on its own after being closed.

“Mr. Ayers liked listening to AM talk radio,” Pippen said. “There have been times when the radio quickly changes stations, it will go from FM to AM and stop at a station with talk radio on.”

During these unexplained in-

OP politics embarrassing? No, and here's why that is

People who cringe at what they perceive to be the negative cloud that seems to float over Ocean Pines Association politics and government don't realize how fortunate they are.

The frequently unrestrained public discussions, disputes and assertions that are viewed by many as a source of embarrassment are actually refreshing as compared to the subtle knife-throwing that goes on in other communities.

It's a fact. Ocean City politics, for instance, have been notoriously, but quietly, vicious for decades, seasoned as they have been by all sorts of chicanery and deviousness.

Even Berlin, where one might conclude that everyone loves everyone else and that competitors even vote for each other, has endured its share of political subterfuge over the years.

But because these things happen mostly below the surface in these communities, the general public doesn't see, hear or recognize the real nature of their local politics.

Not so in Ocean Pines, where, for the lack of a better description, it's just out there. Candidates, directors, you name it. If there's something on someone's mind, residents are likely to hear it.

That, believe it or not, is a good situation, because voters know exactly where their candidates, their directors and other players stand on almost every issue.

In politics, whether they are local or national, content is more important than style and in Ocean Pines, residents and property owners are better off knowing what leaders and challengers think rather than having to wonder what they might be up to.

Besides, Ocean Pines government, despite assertions to the contrary, is no more dysfunctional than any other. The only difference is the others just don't like talking about it.

Not-so-smart?

Editor,

After attending the Choptank open house on June 18 in Ocean Pines, we had more concerns than ever and decided to contact several insurance companies on their position of coverage for fire claims resulting from possible noncompliant, non U.L. listed smart meter devices.

Of the three agencies we have contacted, all three agents could not immediately answer the question, which is “if a home fire directly results from a meter without an underwriters laboratory seal [U.L. listed], would your company deny fire coverage for my home?”

Several insurance companies have denied fire damage claims for smart meter fires, so this a major concern.

Two weeks later, only one agent has responded and she stated, “if a fire occurred due to this unlisted device, we would make certain you are covered and we would subrogate the claim with the appropriate responsible parties.”

Although that makes us feel relieved that we would be covered at least by one insurance company, why would we want to take the chance in the first place if there are documented fires occurring with these units? Why would any insurance company want to take the chance? Any home fire, even with minimal damage, is devastating.

Our profession is home building and we cannot install or attach any electrical device that is not U.L. listed in any home or addition we build. We would be fined, lose our license, and if our actions caused the fire we would be sued and probably out of business due to the liability cost. How is it that utility companies can attach any such device without our consent and against our will in some cases?

Some utility companies offer an opt-out program, but any fee paid to someone or some entity to protect you or your family from any dangerous situation is extortion.

There are template forms on www.takeyourpowerback.net which guide you through rejection process, otherwise via “implied consent,” you will have a smart meter. After watching the documentary on this site, along with scientific and medical research done by many, including Dr. Dietrich Klinghardt and professor Martin Pall [both on YouTube], exposing the biological harm done to the human body by the pulsed radiation of smart meters 24/7, we have decided to refuse this device.

We totally agree with a former CIA director's recent statement that the smart grid's security vulnerabilities make it a “really, really stupid grid.” That statement alone is very scary. Add to that the health risks, fire risks, privacy issues and higher electric bills [which result from the smart meter's dirty electricity output being registered as usage], it is just not smart to allow this radiation-emitting meter to be installed.

Director responds

Editor,

I would like to respond to Mr. [Mike] Graves' letter dated July 9, 2015.

First and foremost, I applaud Mr. [Mike] Graves for taking the time to learn about the OPA Board of Director candidates. I was not named specifically named, but feel the need to respond to the comments. I stand by my remarks and my cited accomplishments, including the thoughtful process that went into constructing a solid contract for the general manager.

As I have stated many times, the general manager of Ocean Pines [Bob Thompson] works for us 24 hours a day, seven days a week and is responsible for the operations of what I call “a small city.” He has done a good job and continues to perform well on the behalf of all property owners to maintain our community stances, the current owners are convinced Ayers is revisiting his old stomping grounds.

The last stop on the tour is in St. Paul Episcopal Church cemetery, where Pippen recounted a few stories of the dead, including a woman named Sally who died young after losing four children. There is an empty spot between her headstone and the children.

"We think her husband is buried there, but no one was left to put a headstone up," Pippen said.

"My personal belief is we are all energy, which doesn't disappear or go away," Pippen said. "If someone doesn't cross over, their energy is all around and it makes their presence stronger."

Humane society presents 'Cat Days of Summer'

(July 16, 2015) The Worcester County Humane Society will be holding adoption events, "The Cat Days of Summer" at Walmart in Berlin from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the following Saturdays over the summer: July 18, 25, Aug. 1, 15, 22 and also Sunday, July 26.

There will also be some additional Saturdays in the fall: Sept. 12, 19 and Oct. 10. Cats will be available for adoption at every event along with baked goods for purchase and raffle tickets with the chance to win three cash prizes.

Cats from the shelter are also at Petco and OC Pet Spa both in West Ocean City and of course, visitors are welcome at the shelter during regular business hours. Adoptions are based on application approval. Adoption fees for cats are $75 and include spay/neuter, immunizations, microchip and fecal exam.

The shelter also has a senior to senior program where any person 65 and older adopting a cat over the age of 8 will have their adoption fee waived.

The Worcester County Humane Society is a private, non-profit, no kill animal shelter located on Eagle's Nest Road just off Route 611. The shelter currently houses more than 100 cats and approximately 20 dogs.

Many of these cats are affectionate, adoptable cats who have been there for several years. They are patiently waiting for their forever families to find them.

For more information on available pets or questions about adoption, visit the shelter website, www.worcestercountyhumanesociety.org or call 410-213-0146. Follow the shelter on Facebook for event updates.

In addition to Berlin, ghost lovers can check out walks in Ocean City, Snow Hill, Pocomoke City, Easton, Cambridge, Denton, Crisfield, Princess Anne and St. Michaels. Burgoyne has two more in the works in Oxford and Chincoteague.

More than a decade ago, Burgoyne moved into her current home in Marion Station with her husband and experienced ghosts and a presence for the first time.

"We had never thought about ghosts before moving in and I became curious about the stories," she said.

She said unexplained noises were heard, footsteps, coughing, objects starting moving, plates flipped off the walls, their dogs barked at nothing and it became scary when a globe fell off a chandelier and crashed into a bouquet of Valentine's Day roses.

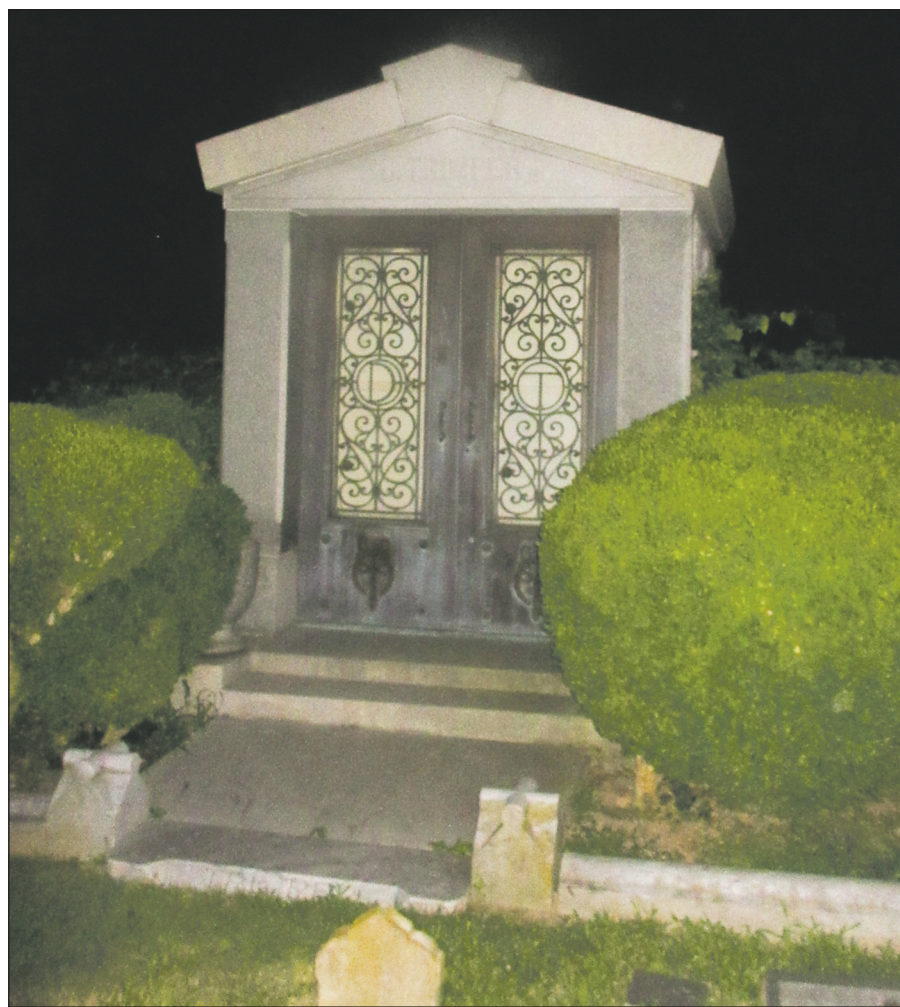

“Our grandchildren would not stay at our house,” Burgoyne said.

Her haunted house led to research by interviewing residents, visiting libraries for regional books or newspaper articles and she used the folklore collection at the Nabb Research Center at Salisbury University.

Burgoyne continued to collect tales, researched town history and developed a popular book full of stories about 26 different haunted sites in the nine counties throughout Maryland.

"Once I talk with someone, they usually lead me to somewhere else and only places that have several unrelated sources at different times are used in my tours and books," Burgoyne said. "It's amazing how these stories unfold ... it's really something."

One of her novels, "Haunted Eastern Shore: Ghostly Tales from East of the Chesapeake" built her a following in the community and she was constantly being asked if she did ghost tours.

KARA HALLISSEY/BAYSIDE GAZETTE

St. Paul Episcopal Church cemetery is also home to the Trimper mausoleum where tour guide Maria Pippen recounted the story of Joanne Trimper and her love for the carousel in Ocean City.

By 2010, bus tours started taking place on the Eastern Shore and the following January it was decided to try out a walk.

“Our Cambridge walking tour sold out three times in a row with 60 people a night taking everything in with snow on the ground,” Burgoyne said.

By 2013, 10 walks were researched, developed and conducted for visitors to experience. Burgoyne led 40 ghost walks that year.

"Every single one sold out until Halloween," Burgoyne said.

The following year, Burgoyne hired six tour guides and an administrator to help with the popular tours.

"In 2014, we put on 160 ghost tours and served more than 10,000 customers,” Burgoyne said. “It’s amazing how much it grew.”

Chesapeake Ghost Tours take place year-around and the offseason will feature a mix of bus and walking tours.

"It's great family entertainment from the best storytellers around," Burgoyne said. "Berlin was the most cooperative, helpful and easiest town to work with."

Tours cost $15 for adults and $9 for children 8-12 years old. Advanced registration is recommended on www.chesapeakeghostwalks.com. Call 443-735-0771 for more information.

and protect our investment. He is not without fault (none of us are), but I have always been able to confront him with any issue and have a meaningful discussion to seek resolution to a problem.

As far as the amenities losing money, Mr. Graves should take a look at the financials reported at the last board meeting. We will always have amenities that may cost us money to maintain, but I will bet that if Mr. Graves were to put his home on the market that he would list those amenities as a selling point.

To end, I actually believe there is an advantage to having "old blood" in addition to "new faces" elected to the board. I am and will remain proud of the accomplishments of the Board of Directors from 2010-2014 and hope to have the opportunity to serve again.

Important election

Editor,

This is an open letter to all the voters of Ocean Pines. Soon, a very important ballot is coming in the mail to all property owners. I urge you to consider carefully your options before you cast your ballot this year.

This is my final year serving as a board member for Ocean Pines. Through the past three years, I have learned some very valuable lessons that I would like to share from the inside.

First of all, the first two years of my term were exciting, filled with ideas, healthy debates and actions. I was proud to be elected to serve with this group of individuals. Did we agree on everything? No, not at all. There were no voting "blocks."

The board was run as an open exchange of ideas, and we all voted as we saw fit, with the interest of Ocean Pines as the number one priority. There were no "personal agendas" from the majority of the members.

However, this past year there was a very different environment, laced with acrimony, arguments and unprofessional actions at virtually every meeting. There was a total lack of respect by board leadership toward those board members who were not in the "majority." The leadership never reached out to the "other side." One only had to pick up the community newspaper any week, or view the videos of board meetings, to become aware of all the craziness that was going on in the meetings.

The leadership of this board rarely met with the general manager until well into the eighth month of the year. This has not fostered a good working relationship between the GM, staff and board. One cannot provide direction if you are not communicating.

Leadership is not bullying. We need to restore civility and integrity to the board. In my opinion, those running for the board who simply complain, criticize and have negative "agendas" will do nothing to bring this community together and advance it's interests.

I personally feel that we need a diverse board, and that the inclusion of women will bring a different perspective to the meetings. All three women candidates not only bring excellent backgrounds and experience, but a positive approach to addressing issues. Also, please note who is supporting which candidates.

This is a wonderful community, and this has been my home since 1975. Do we have problems? Yes, of course we do, but I challenge anyone to find a better community anywhere on the East Coast that offers what we do for our residents and owners. If you care as much about this community as I do, please take your voting privilege very seriously. I urge you all to vote.

Please, consider your options and vote to bring strong positive leadership to this community. Vote for the candidates that can work together with respect for all, including their fellow board members, management, staff and, of course, the membership. Let's make it a "win-win" for everyone.

Heritage arts activities set for Julia A. Purnell Museum

(July 16, 2015) The Julia A. Purnell Museum has just begun its most popular summer offering for children: a series of heritage arts activities where youngsters will learn about the area's history through hands-on projects.

The activities are offered every Wednesday through Aug. 12 from 1-3 pm. Throughout the summer, participants will create handmade Victorian toys, learn to play croquet in Byrd Park and engage with the museum's collection of local artifacts.

"Letting children experience history hands-on engages them with the ways people lived in the past and helps them to think about how those ways of living shape their experiences today," said Julia A. Purnell Museum Executive Director Dr. Cindy Byrd.

Thanks to the support of the Berlin-Ocean City Optimist Club, general admission is free for children all year in 2015, and this includes the Heritage Arts for Kids workshops. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Pre-registration is not needed; simply drop in between 1 and 3 p.m.

Children should expect to spend about 15-30 minutes working on their projects; afterward, they are encouraged to enjoy the museum.

To learn more about summer activities, contact the Julia A. Purnell Museum at 410-632-0515 or visit purnellmuseum.org.

Fresh chips and salsa go great with summer

Reprinted from Bayside Gazette
July 17, 2014

As voices echo through our little street, a feeling of summer, fun and family runs through me like an electric current. It's a wonderful thing as a parent to have a flash of memory back to the days of my own childhood; a prevailing feeling of worth as I remember the emotions that I attached to certain events in my life and that I now share with my children.

By Paul Suplee,

Years ago as we played at the water's edge, I was teaching my kids how to dig deep enough to reach the tide line, in essence making your own pool at the ocean. Something that my father taught me in the early 1970s, it was a laughable concept to my friend who was visiting from out of town. He brushed it off as nonsense, but as I taught my kids, you could see bewilderment in his eyes as the bottom of the hole began to fill with water.

Move forward a few years and our next scene is our home. I took my kids outside at dusk to teach them how to summon the bats, those ethereal creatures of the night about who has been written enough negative and cruel passages as to fill the scrolls of Alexandria.

Granted, I do not care to keep bats as pets, but as of today I have yet to be overly pestered or bothered by one. The trick, you see, is to take advantage of their lack of sight and their astounding sonar skills.

At dusk, simply go outside and throw tiny pebbles as high as you can straight up in the air. VERY IMPORTANT:

- Be in the middle of the street and tell everyone to pay attention.
- Do this at your own risk. I assume no liability if you throw like a New York Yankee and break a window.

• Teach your kids how to not catch one of these with their eyes. I suggest safety glasses, although I've never worn them. There, you are warned.

As the tiny projectiles fly up and down, eventually the bats will ping off of them with their impressive sonar system. They will mistake them for bugs and begin going after them. This is not foolproof; there have been a few evenings when we cannot get a single bat to come out. But more often than not, we find about 6 bats dive-bombing the rocks (and in essence, us) to the squeals, screams and laughs of the children. Fear and humor; hardly a better suited set of bedfellows.

Getting outside seems to be one of the greatest challenges for kids these days. The electronic distractions that we have allowed to consume the day make it tricky to get the children interested in things that fascinated us when we were kids. But I have found that simple exercises such as bat-calling work wonders.

Summer is a beautiful time of year in which we get to understand how things grow, the source of our food if you are like us and at least grow a few things, and of course there is no school; well, for the kids there is no school. Taking advantage of this, we can get the kids involved in the tasks of gardening and the wonderment of natural foods.

In our garden we have two tomato plants that are doing a fair job at producing some fruit, and after a trip to Paul Carlotta's Berlin Organics on 611, I was inspired to create a simple, summer snack that was enjoyed by not only me but our 9-year old as well. Had he not helped with the planting in our own garden, I hardly think he would have even sampled the goods.

Get outside and dig a hole; summon the bats. Grow some basil and tomatoes. Do whatever makes you happy. And make sure that you share it with a child, yours or not. It's the best way for them to learn.

Peach Salsa

makes about 3 cups
3 fresh peaches, diced
1 red bell pepper, diced
1 serrano, diced
1/4 fresh white onion, diced
1 fresh, very ripe tomato, diced
1/4 cup cilantro, minced
salt and pepper to taste
lemon juice, to taste

- Combine all of the ingredients and season to taste.
- Allow to sit under refrigeration for at least two hours.
- Taste again, and adjust the flavor.
- Serve cold or at room temperature.
- Serve with freshly fried tortilla chips, on seafood, pork or chicken dishes from the grill.

Fresh Fried Tortilla Chips

makes 60 chips
10 soft corn tortillas oil for frying
seasoning blend of your choosing

• Stack tortillas in a neat pile, and cut into 6 equal wedges yielding you 60 soft chips.

• Heat oil to 350, being incredibly careful not to overheat if you are using a pan on the stovetop. I recommend a fryer.

• When the oil has reached temperature, add the chips in batches and cook until golden brown. If you use whole wheat like I did for some of mine, don't be too upset if they come out dark. That's the nature of the beast.

• When the bubbles have mostly subsided and the chips are crispy, remove to a stack of paper towels and season immediately.

• Allow to cool and serve.
