Clean report paves way for final phase of studies on Tyson

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) The 611-page environmental report on the former Tyson's Chicken plant in Berlin conducted by EA Engineering Science & Tech shows a mostly clean bill of health, although there were a few hiccups along the way in the property's 100-year-plus history.

Released by the town last week and conducted from March to June, the study began with the obvious: the southwestern portion was used as a poultry processing plant beginning in the 1940s, while the remaining portion consisted of mostly agricultural land until the 1960s, when several waste treatment lagoons were built.

Three parcels of land totaling 56.72 acres make up the property the town voted in December to buy from Berlin Properties North LLC. Parcel 0052 consists of 43.36 acres of land, containing no structures, and listed as industrial use. Parcel 0057 contains 3.98 acres and a 70,103-square-foot manufacturing structure. Parcel 0410 has 9.38 acres, a 5,796-square-foot service garage.

The study was done, following an appraisal that valued the property at $2.5 million, as phase two of a three-part series of studies the town commissioned before formally purchasing the land with the intention of building a multi-purpose recreation facility.

EA completed phase one of the environmental site assessment using American Society for Testing and Materials E1527-13 Standard Practice for Environmental Site Assessments Phase I Environmental Site Assessment (ESA) Process.

The company also examined historical reports pertaining to underground storage tanks and "elevated levels of volatile organic compounds identified in onsite wells and prior operation activities," although the elevated levels were later labeled "not to be attributed" to the site.

EA found the site needed no additional investigation or actions for industrial use, but recommended additional investigations in order to revise the approved use to recreational, See STUDY Page 9

OPA Board elects Renaud new pres.

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

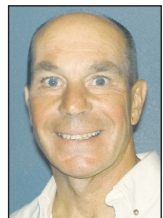

(Aug. 20, 2015) The Ocean Pines Association Board of Directors shook things up on Monday, electing sophomore director Pat Renaud as president by a 4-3 vote, while selecting freshman director Cheryl Jacobs as vice president.

who turned 60 on Monday.

More than 40 minutes after the start of the meeting and following accusations that a clandestine meeting had been set up to preselect several officers, the nomination process officially began. Former President Dave Stevens nominated Jack Collins for the presidency, while Tom Terry, who served as president before Stevens, nominated Renaud.

"I feel the tension in this room, and I think that that is not in the best interest of this community and this board in general," Collins said in a brief statement. "If I'm elected I would like to work toward removing the tension in this room and see if we can all come together in a much more collegial type of relationship."

"I think each and every one of us have to think about taking the high road on this one," Collins added.

Renaud agreed with Collins' call for, "a collegial atmosphere."

"As you may recall, I was called the 'swing vote' last year, and I was called a turncoat. I was called a lot of different things. 'Weak sister is another one,'" he said. "But what I feel that I have done or that I've tried to do is to try to represent what I believe is the best interest of the people."

During his time with the Maryland Healthcare Coalition, Renaud said, he brought "doctors, hospitals, Blue Cross/Blue Shield and employers together to try to solve the problems of medical care cost."

"I don't have all answers ... but I do have the ability to bring people together," he said.

Following Renaud's selection, the new president nominated Terry for vice president, while Tom Herrick, the other newcomer on the board, nominated Jacobs.

Jack Collins seconded the motion and Terry said he was torn over the office because he was thinking about nominating Jacobs himself.

"This is my last year on the board," he said. "I've got one year left. I want to make sure this board is in a position to move forward."

"In my view we're electing a group of people now who can make sure we're solidly in place and ready to go for the next few years, and not just one short, 365-day period," he continued. "It's clear this community voted overwhelming for people who want to be independent ... I appreciate Pat wanting me to sit in the VP slot ... [but] I'll take whatever role that they think is best for me to have."

Stevens said the choice was between someone who has experience on the board and “someone we might put in a position to gain more experience.”

“I look forward to continuing to work on behalf of the entire community,” Jacobs said. “That’s where my head is always.”

Jacobs won the vote 5-2, and Herrick was named secretary.

Terry then won a 4-3 vote for treasurer over Collins, and General Manager Bob Thompson was selected assistant treasurer.

Bill Cordwell then nominated former board member Pete Gomsak for second assistant treasurer.

“The assistant treasurer’s position in my opinion, especially the second one, has to bring to the table a level of expertise that you just don’t get every day for free,” Terry said. “Clearly Pete ... has brought a lot of value to our organization over the years, saving us money many, many times.”

Stevens objected to the nomination.

“I believe we have been cost a significant amount of money [by Gomsak],” he said. “What we’re doing is turning the job over to Pete – I mean idated,” he said. “This is the position we have long held. I do take exception to what you’re saying and I don’t know what to do about it.”

Stevens noted that there were no prior board members present during this year’s organizational meeting, as is generally the case.

“We have on a regular basis over the last number of years accepted the fact that the election is final,” he said. “It requires no further validation than to read the results [at the annual meeting]. I think everybody knows this and I think in fact it’s just been ignored for convenience in this particular case.”

Stevens said he consulted Jim Trummel, former chairman of the By-laws and Resolutions Committee, about the matter.

“There is no doubt in his mind that ... if you meet the condition of having had the election announced [and] having property validated it, then in fact [Jacobs and Herrick] become board members,” he said. “In fact, it would possible to call a meeting of the board the very next day.”

Moore admitted Renaud consulted him, adding, “Apparently I was part of the circumstance.

“If Dave is right, then I am wrong,” he said. “It’s something that needs to be clarified,” he said.

Tom Terry interjected, insisting the discussion had, “nothing to do with the agenda of this meeting.

“I’m not going to sit here and listen to this much longer,” he said, adding the invitation only went out after consulting Moore.

“The bottom line was the people who were invited to that meeting decided not to have the meeting,” he said.

Terry then suggested similar meetings took place last year, including one or more that involved Stevens.

“If anybody thinks that a group of people who ran to have a voting bloc in order to take over the board of directors never had a session to discuss who the president was going to be and who the vice president ought to be ... if anybody dreams for a second that that didn’t go on, then

OPA Pres. Renaud feels ‘exonerated’ following board vote

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) New Board of Directors President Pat Renaud said he felt exonerated following a contentious organizational meeting on Monday, when former president Dave Stevens accused him and another directors of potentially violating community bylaws.

Following the accusation, the board voted 4-3 to select Renaud as president.

“I feel anything I did was within the bylaws as I understood them,” he said. “I’m looking forward to a good, positive year when we’re all going to try to work together, and I will work very hard to try to make sure that happens.”

Renaud said he hoped the board would continue making progress on the capital improvement plan, reserve study and comprehensive plan, all currently under way.

“I hope we don’t have any holdup,”

he said. “I want to move it along – move the process. I’ve always been oriented that way as an action person, not somebody who says, ‘well, what do you think we should do?’”

“I’ll make mistakes, of course, but not because I won’t be trying,” he added.

Jack Collins, who was also in the running for the presidency, said he would “take the high side” following Renaud’s selection.

“I’m going to look for the best,” he said. “I wish Mr. Renaud all the luck in the world, and if we can help him in any way I’d be glad to do it.”

Board ruling on issue still to come

they’re naïve,” he said. “It’s that simple.

“The two people, along with the sitting board members, decided this was not a good idea, and I admire these two people who are sitting here, who said, ‘I don’t think that’s a good idea,’” Terry continued. “They are independent. They aren’t running to be a voting bloc on this board, like happened in previous years.”

Stevens fought back.

“If you read Robert’s Rules, your job [as parliamentarian] is to advise me, the president, and not make rulings on the meeting,” he said. “I think the most important issue here is to whether or not a couple of members of the board of directors ... had in fact called a meeting excluding other members of the board of directors to discuss association business at which it is anticipated, by virtue of the invitation, that a quorum will be present.”

Moore said the issue was whether the invitation was made to board members.

“If I’m in error about the time these folks became board members this brouhaha is my responsibility and I apologize for it,” he said. “I still stand behind my opinion, but I am subject to be corrected.”

He added that if Trummel disagreed, “I take that very seriously.”

“I think that this board needs to reach at least a firm consensus – if not an official resolution – as to this issue,” he said.

pated Typical Concentration levels.

Benzo(a)pyrene and benzo(a)anthracene were found in a single surface sample next to the former maintenance room, but levels were “not anticipated to represent an exposure concern for the recreational user.” The study also found E.coli and enterococci in surface water samples greater than MDE Recreational Use criteria.

“Based on review of the soil and groundwater analytical data, it appears that there are no analytes of concern detected at concentrations or frequency that would represent a human health concern for future recreational users of the Site,” the study concluded.

However, recreational use of the lagoon was not recommended as, “Concentrations of E. coli and enterococci reported at the northernmost edge of the lagoons indicate an exposure concern.”

Both phases cost the town a total of $20,995.93 or approximately $25 per page.

The Berlin council approved $34,500 for a feasibility study last week, the last step before the town explores financing options for the property in a $2.75 million sale with Berlin Properties North.

Commissioners retain architect for Berlin library

By Brian Gilliland
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) Though the completed facility isn't expected until November 2017, and construction isn't set to begin for another year, the proposed new Worcester County library branch in Berlin now has an architect.

The Worcester County Commissioners on Tuesday voted to retain architect Jeff Schoellkopf for the next phase of development, which entails design services through the production of construction documents. Schoellkopf did similar work in Ocean City for its new branch about a decade ago.

In addition, Schoellkopf said his fee for the same services had not changed since the former project was completed in 2008. The project is expected to cost $326,000 plus expenses.

According to the Worcester County Library Foundation, $246,000 has been raised to cover these expenses already and its leadership has signaled its intention to keep raising funds for construction administration fees in 2017.

Though reluctant to do so, the commissioners waived the competitive bid process to retain Schoellkopf's services.

Acting Director of the Worcester County Library Jennifer Ranck said she saw Schoellkopf's retention as a cost savings, as he had already been working on the project for one year, and would be able to pick up where the previous phase of the project had left off, rather than waiting for a new person to come up to speed.

County Engineer Bill Bradshaw agreed.

"We benefit from the continuance of work," he said.

Commissioner Joe Mitrecic, who works in the construction business said he is neither a huge fan nor a knife-sharpening nemesis of Schoellkopf's, but found him to be a "hands-on architect" who could reliably be reached during the course of a job. Mitrecic said that quality is sometimes an oddity.

Berlin library design offers ‘extreme’ energy efficiency

Though reluctant to waive the formal bidding process, Assistant County Administrator Kelly Shannahan said this request falls under “professional services,” which do not require competitive bids before awarding a contract.

“Professional services are exempt from the competitive bid requirement for these very reasons. It’s more important to get the right person rather than the lowest bidder,” Shannahan said.

“Look at the total fee,” County Attorney Sonny Bloxom said. “It’s right in line with other projects. You can be comfortable in the sole source.”

The commissioners voted unanimously to accept Ranck’s recommendation.

With this step complete, the library will, according to Ranck, proceed with numerous bids for different construction services, such as a construction manager and HVAC contractor.

According to Ranck, trustees, staff and county representatives have requested the new 11,000-square-foot facility be built to “Passivhaus” (German for passive house) standards, which are techniques developed in Germany intended to offer extreme energy efficiency.

“The general idea of a passivhaus approach is to provide an extremely well insulated and airtight envelope, and reduce the size and complexity of mechanical systems,” the progress report provided to the commissioners said. “This would reduce annual energy costs by 50-70 percent and even these may be offset by on-site photovoltaic production.”

Costs to include these features were not included in the progress report.

The new building will be located just behind the existing facility along Main Street, and will be accessed via Harrison Avenue.

New Arby's, Royal Farms stores move forward in Berlin

Planning Comm. also green lights Seahawk Rd. complex

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) The Berlin Planning Commission approved final site plans for new Arby's and Royal Farms stores during a meeting last Wednesday at Town Hall.

Approval included the layout and the look of the buildings, along with landscaping, parking and traffic flow, according to Planning Director Dave Engelhart.

Both stores, owned by Steve Black, would be located at the corner of Friendship Road and Route 50.

Engelhart said he's spoken with the contractor and guessed construction would begin soon, with fire marshal inspection and necessary additional permitting possibly adding a few weeks to the start date.

"I know the architectural and building plans are done, but I haven't received them yet," he said. "I have not received a permit application as of yet, but I assume I will in the next couple of days."

The commission also approved site plans for the Ocean's East apartment complex on Seahawk Road, subject to an amendment to the town zoning code. Currently, the code only allows 12 units per building.

"They have ones drawn with 24 and 36 [units]," Engelhart said. "They're broken into 12, but they're connected with breezeways and stairwells. Technically that's one big building if it's connected."

Engelhart has advertised the public hearing during the next planning commission meeting, Sept. 9. If the amendment passes, the Town Council would also need to hold a public hearing and vote on the matter.

He did not anticipate any problems.

"Basically that text amendment still keeps the 12 in the 12-unit wide restriction in place except where general convenience, welfare, safety or proper planning application warrants it," he said. "They can make that change if it's a better way of doing it."

The commission also touched on the grant application filed by the town to install public restrooms at William Henry and Stephen Decatur parks.

"There's nowhere in the ordinance that says, 'you'll approve site plans in the parks,'" Engelhart said. "It's only in the commercial areas and these are not commercial areas. So, we kind of agreed it's not a big deal."

"They're in favor of going through the process with them and approving the site plan – where it's going to go in the park – and it's just transparent for everyone that someone did look at it instead of the town unilaterally putting it wherever they want," Engelhart added.

OP Comp. Planning Committee seeking increased participation

Group will ‘slow things down,’ attempt to regroup before meeting in Sept.

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer
(Aug. 20, 2015) Ocean Pines’ Comprehensive Planning Committee is looking for a few thousand good men and women to take part in a series of focus groups that could help determine the future look and feel of the community.

In March, the board of directors approved two phases of a comprehensive study, allocating $16,500 to Salisbury University group BEACON and to Dr. Memo Diriker. The plan was for Diriker to conduct a large-scale phone survey through BEACON as part of phase one, and then hold smaller focus groups with the committee.

An obstacle arose when the committee could not get a list of names, phone numbers and email addresses of Ocean Pines property owners from the administration, and instead compiled a list of staffers, board members and friends and acquaintances it had easier access to.

The committee had hoped to start holding focus groups this week, but the decision to slow things down and try to create more involvement from Ocean Pines stakeholders was made during a meeting on Friday.

That decision apparently stemmed from a conference committee member Thomas Butler had with General Manager Bob Thompson last Wednesday. Butler wanted help from the OPA administration in developing “a mechanism for the survey to go to the entire community.”

As a result of the roughly 90-minute meeting, Butler said Thompson agreed to help, posting information from the committee on the community’s website and in its quarterly newsletter, as well as sending email blasts to the 5,000-plus subscribers.

Butler hoped the committee would use these new resources to expand its reach in the survey and the diversity of its makeup. He also wanted to pull back from previously established deadlines and, possibly, the Oct. 31 target to present phase-one findings to the board.

“Specific dates tend to give the wrong message,” he said. “It’s alright to have specific dates for a contract, but it’s not alright when we’re talking about ... planning. I’ve never put a plan [together] that didn’t have a range of dates when you’re getting something done.

“As a result of that meeting ... I would like at some point to have a discussion about dates and try and slow things down for us,” Butler said. “We already got killed once because we did things too friggin’ fast.”

Staff liaison Jerry Aveta, who was also present during the meeting with Thompson, said the general manager “immediately embraced what the committee is trying to do.”

According to Aveta, Thompson believed there was much confusion surrounding what the committee was doing and suggested the newsletter and web correspondence as a solution.

“Not only are you ping-pong the community, you’re bringing [it] to a place of common truthful information,” Aveta said.

Committee member Frank Daly agreed.

“I think it’s a great offer, and I think it’s a wise thing to do,” he said.

Daly also expressed concern that board support for the committee was

Committee pans preliminary report

“I think if we presented [the board] with any expenditure right now that there would be a big discussion, and I bet you it wouldn’t be positive,” he said. “I think that it is very important that before we talk about doing anything with phase two that we put a stake in the ground and say, ‘Here’s how we’re going to use phase one, here’s what’s going to come out of phase two, and here’s the deliverable that we intend to give you as the board.’”

The committee received a preliminary summary from Diriker last Thursday based on the responses of roughly 30 people called during the first round of the survey. Many of the committee members were seeing the data for the first time during the meeting.

“It was clear to me that not everybody fully understood what they were being asked,” Butler said. “I think we have an opportunity now, because of the situation the community is in with the new board, to take a timeout and prepare the community for the focus groups, rather than rushing into it.”

Aveta admitted several Ocean Pines employees complained about their inclusion in the survey during a recent staff meeting.

“You should have heard the push-back from the staff,” he said. “Why are we being bothered? What do I say? [There was] a lot of reluctance.”

Committee Chair Steve Cohen asked if Thompson might intimidate some of the employees included in the survey, the names of which have been made public record.

“I know they will,” Aveta said. “There will be a pre-discussion.”

Aveta also expressed his frustration with the first batch of data provided by Diriker.

“I’ve got a real problem with this first focus group,” he said. “It’s not going to work, guys. Trust me.”

“I think it should be more general public. Why do you need operational people’s input? That is of value, but it’s not objective,” Aveta continued. “As an employee, I’ve got a certain vested interest and I’ve got a certain perspective. And I’m not sure that’s helpful. I think more helped are the people who live here and use the facilities.”

Cohen suggested the committee regroup during the two weeks before its next meeting, when Diriker was set to attend.

“I suggest all the committee members review all this data ... and we sit down and grill Dr. Diriker,” he said. “He works for us and we have to fully understand where everything is going.”

At the conclusion of the meeting the committee agreed that Butler would work on marketing material for the newsletter, likely including a brief update from Diriker, while Aveta and Daly work on presentation for the board of directors.

The committee also decided to delay the start of focus groups by a month and try to attract more interest from the community.

“The process was flawed in the initial creation of the list because we were limited on access to people,” Aveta said. “The most numbers and contacts we had were staff. If we go back and generate interest with the marketing and we can pull people from the community, we can put them in the focus group.”

Daly and Butler concurred.

“The most important thing that people understand is that this is not an exclusionary or special process,” he said. “We would love nothing more than 11,700 (people) to come and say they want to participate.”

“If we start getting interest now, the results of the survey will be of much more magnitude of importance, and we would get a much better survey,” Butler said.

To take part in an upcoming focus group, contact Cohen at 301-667-3099 or stevencohenjd@gmail.com.

Grand jury indicts alleged OP bank robber Jeff V. Hare

(Aug. 20, 2015) Alleged bank robber Jeff V. Hare, 53, of Ocean Pines, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Baltimore this week on charges stemming from the March 13 hold-up of the BB&T branch on Racetrack road.

Hare, who was tracked to his home by police in a matter of hours after the incident, stands accused of bank robbery, car-jacking and displaying a firearm during a crime of violence.

According to indictment announced by U.S. Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein, Hare entered the bank wearing a ski mask and told the bank tellers in lobby that he had a gun. He also said he was robbing the bank and demanded that the tellers give him only $50 and $100 dollar bills and no dye packs.

The indictment alleges that Hare moved through the lobby from employee to employee, pointing the handgun at each and demanding money. Hare also ordered the tellers to give him their car keys and purses, but each teller told Hare they did not have them available, according to the indictment. Hare stole approximately $2,850 in cash from the bank.

Reverse 911 call leads to capture of Hare

The indictment said that after robbing the tellers, Hare found a bank employee who had locked herself in a back room. He reportedly forced open the door, pointed his handgun at the employee and demanded her car keys and her purse.

The employee turned over her purse, which contained cash and personal effects, and the keys to her car, a 2007 Kia Spectra that was in the bank's parking lot. Hare allegedly left the bank and fled in the car, which he abandoned at a nearby business.

State Police Sgt. Adam Howard said back in March that numerous 911 calls came into the State Police Berlin Barrack at 1:13 p.m., including an alarm company call about a robbery in progress. Howard said state police troopers responded, along with Worcester County Sheriff's Office, Ocean Pines Police Department and Natural Resources Police Department.

At approximately 6:30 p.m. police conducted a reverse 911 call to all residents within a five-square-mile radius of the BB&T, Howard said. That led to an anonymous tip. Members of the FBI, Worcester County Bureau of Investigations, the Worcester Criminal Enforcement Team, state police, and the Worcester County Sheriff's Office visited two homes in Ocean Pines, leading to Hare's arrest at his residence.

"Law enforcement is never stronger than when it cooperates on all levels," Worcester County State's Attorney Beau Oglesby said. "The employees of the BB&T branch woke up that morning and wanted nothing more than to do their jobs when Mr. Hare entered their bank thinking a mask and gun could shield him from responsibility.

Now, our brothers and sisters from the U.S. Attorney's Office will do their jobs, and we look forward to seeing Mr. Hare held federally accountable for his dangerous, reprehensible and cowardly actions. "

Hare faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison for armed bank robbery; a maximum of 15 years in prison for carjacking; and a mandatory minimum of seven years and up to life in prison for brandishing a firearm during a crime of violence.

An initial appearance has yet to be scheduled for U.S. District Court in Baltimore.

DePalma Dental celebrates decade in Berlin

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) Ten years ago DePalma Dental opened in Berlin with a staff of four, and just two chairs in a small office building.

Today, Drs. Michael and Erin DePalma operate a large general dentistry practice with facilities and a staff that can see three times as many patients.

The husband-and-wife team both attended University of Maryland School of Dentistry before beginning the search to find what would become the long-term home for both their business and their young family.

"We were living in Pennsylvania at the time and knew we wanted to be in Maryland. We were looking at the D.C. metropolitan area, and it just wasn't appealing to us," Erin said. "I had vacationed here with my family, growing up in the suburbs of D.C., and we would come every year, but I was not familiar with the Berlin area at all."

Michael performed a little reconnaissance in the region, according to Erin, and almost immediately fell in love with Berlin. The small town feel and the much-lauded school system were appealing to the couple, along with the proximity to a certain ocean.

"I come from a small town and this is a small town with a beach, so you can't go wrong," Michael said.

While Berlin itself has changed significantly during the last decade, DePalma Dental has undergone a similar transformation.

"We started with two dental chairs, Mike, me, one assistant and his sister working at the front desk," Erin said. "We recruited her from Pennsylvania and she moved out and was our one-and-only up front for a while."

"Now we have two front desks (soon to be three), two assistants (soon to be three) and two hygienists, so things have definitely changed," Michael said. "We have six chairs and we've almost doubled the space that we had, and we've increased the technology that we have quite a bit in those 10 years."

State-of-the-art technology was the

Drs. Erin and Michael DePalma use state-of-the-art technology, including this CEREC machine that makes custom crowns and mini-implants all in one visit, to treat their patients at DePalma Dental in Berlin.

Technology at forefront of DePalma Dental in Berlin goal of the office from the beginning, both agreed, but the evolution of the profession itself during the last decade has allowed some startling improvements as well. Digital x-rays, for instance, offer 80 percent less radiation for patients.

The office also now uses a digital microscope in order to gauge the exact amount of bacteria patients have underneath their gums.

"That helps us treat our patients better," Michael said. "If somebody has bad bacteria, we treat them one way. If somebody doesn't, we treat them another way. It's a very helpful tool for gum disease."

"It allows us to really target the disease-causing bacteria in an individualized treatment for that patient in a nonsurgical way," Erin added.

The office also uses a CEREC dental crown machine to scan patients and create custom crowns, as well as mini-implants for dentures, all in one visit.

"Not that many people on the Eastern Shore have that kind of machine," Michael said. "We're very proud of the technology that we have and what were able to bring. A lot of patients unfortunately think they still have to drive back to Baltimore and D.C. to get the newest technology, but that's not the case."

The DePalmas also frequently travel across the country, from Arizona to Utah to upstate New York, in order to keep up with the latest tech and procedures.

"One thing about dentistry, which is really exciting or fun in the field, is that it's always changing," Erin said. "There's always something new to learn that makes treatment easier for patients, and more effective, and it's always something we strived for in our office – to learn about the new technology, and bring it here in Berlin."

"Things are changing so fast," Michael said. "What was considered correct treatment 10, 20 years ago, they now realize that's not the way it was supposed to be done. It lets them know they're getting the highest quality care available today, and as things change we will be too."

Michael sees the office leading the way in implant technology during the next 10 years

"It's such a great process and it has so many great benefits for the patients in terms of chewing and smiling and functioning on a day-to-day basis. The microscope technology that helps us treat periodontal disease also helps prevent them from needing expensive surgeries."

Erin, meanwhile, has been taking "tons of courses" on cosmetic enhancements to anterior teeth.

"I enjoy improving smiles that way," she said. "When we started this office 10 years ago we took the latest and greatest technology, brought it in here, and then we've just kept updating it."

DePalma Dental is located at 500 Franklin Avenue in Berlin.

Non-meeting no big deal

The supposedly secret organizational meeting that didn't happen in Ocean Pines last week before the full OPA board of directors met on Monday isn't as big a deal as the subsequent mini uproar would suggest.

It might, at first blush, sound surreptitious on the part of directors Tom Terry and Pat Renaud, who tried and failed to arrange the gathering, but it is hardly the ethical or legal breach it's being made out to be.

The meeting, which ostensibly was to coordinate a vote for the board's officers in this new term, failed to materialize after new directors Cheryl Jacobs and Tom Herrick declined to attend.

Had the meeting taken place, however, it would have been no different than any other routine political caucus held to establish a possible new majority and its pecking order. Regardless of what anyone thinks about it, it's a common practice that occurs at all political levels.

What these private sessions do engender, however, is interesting political gossip about ostensible new collaborations and new leadership.

Jacobs and Herrick were right to stay out of that mess, but not because the meeting was necessarily improper. More simply, their demurral allowed them to avoid the appearance of having signed onto a political alliance.

Whether they were actual members of the board upon their election or not until after they were sworn in is one of those arguments that should just go away. It makes no difference, because regardless of the answer – and the latter circumstance makes the most legal sense because taking the oath of office would be pointless otherwise – there is nothing anyone can do about it.

It is notable, however, that Terry and Renaud sought the opinion of OPA attorney Joe Moore before attempting to arrange the meeting and were advised that caucusing in that matter was acceptable.

That some people disagree with Moore's interpretation of the situation is their prerogative, but it's a hair-splitting exercise to which the board should say, "objection noted," and move on to real business."

Cleary brings ‘neighborly’ approach to legal practice

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) You may have seen her picture around town in Berlin, or on rolling billboards on the backs of city buses, cruising down Coastal Highway in Ocean City.

The Law Offices of Patricia Cleary is attempting to boost its local profile in a major way this year, after Cleary moved to the area full-time in January.

Cleary, a native of Prince George’s County, has practiced law in the state for 17 years, originally setting up a practice in Bowie out of law school.

“I bought a home here almost 10 years ago and originally thought it would be a good vacation home and on long weekends, and hoped that I could gradually spend more time out here,” she said. “It ended up being that I was so busy I could never get away from the office.”

Today, her main office is in Worcester County. A general practice attorney, Cleary said her passion lies in wills and trusts, estate planning and small business counsel.

Her close relationship with clients, however, often drives Cleary to broaden her boundaries.

“Usually a client retains me for a particular legal issue, and as life goes on and their family needs an attorney for another matter, they naturally call me” she said. “‘Patty, can you do help us with this different legal issue?’ That’s kind of the niche that I like to be in – the neighbor who’s the attorney you can come to when there’s a crisis, and I can try to guide you through it.”

Cleary said her advertisements around town have helped her practice grow, leading to a successful first year practicing law full-time in the county.

“It’s been a very welcoming community, and people that only come down here to vacation don’t always realize it,” she said. “The warmth and small town feeling of this area for year-round residents resonates with me and the type of practice I strive to build.”

“It’s a different way of life, naturally, but living on the shore allows me to focus more on my craft,” Cleary continued. “Back when I had my practice on the other side of the bridge, I was adding two-to-three hours every day in traffic. You love what you do and it’s the same type of work down here, but you can get rid of some of those external stressors.”

That change of pace has also helped Cleary’s practice evolve and she hopes that will lead to a less stress overall, no matter what the case at hand might be.

“A lot of people get intimidated when they come to a lawyer,” she said. “When people come to me they realize, ‘Oh yeah, you are like my neighbor,’ which is why I became a lawyer in the first place.”

“When a lawyer forms a relationship with a client, it’s usually around one of the worst experiences of their lives,” Cleary continued. “It’s important for the attorney to realize you’ve got to be a person in addition to the legal counsel. You’ve got the professional connection between attorney and client, but you need to have that other connection that says, ‘I know what you’re going through and I can help you through this.’ That’s what makes practicing law rewarding.”

Artist deadline for 2015 Paint Berlin, Aug. 31

By Josh Davis
Staff Writer

(Aug. 20, 2015) The deadline to register for Paint Berlin, sponsored by the Worcester County Arts Council, is almost here. Artists must sign up by Aug. 31 to participate in the sixth annual event, which will run Sept. 17-19.

WCAC Executive Director Anna Mullis said 35 people took part in last year's event.

"We're really, really excited," she said. "Last year, the event was very successful. The attendance really increased, and it was such a beautiful weekend to paint. We're hoping for the same thing this year."

Painters from Pennsylvania, Virginia and the western shore of Maryland took part in last year's event. Mullis expects a similarly diverse group in 2015.

"We have around 27 or 28 so far, but there's still plenty of time to sign up," she said.

During the event, artists set up easels anywhere within a three-mile radius of the Arts Council gallery on 6 Jefferson Street. The event also draws plenty of spectators to watch the artists work "en plein air," or, loosely translated, outdoors.

"For artists to be there on the sidewalk or in front of a business, just off the street painting life, it's fascinating to see right in front of your eyes," Mullis said. "We feel that this was really needed in the town of Berlin, and it's an amazing experience not only for the artists, but it's very interesting for visitors and for the community."

"I think it's very important to bring art out there in front of people's eyes, and the community has been very supportive," Mullis added.

Participants receive a welcome packet with a map of suggested painting sights, which range from popular historical sights such as the Atlantic Hotel and Globe Theater, to more rural settings outside the downtown area.

Registration is $40 and is limited to 50 artists. Participants must be 18 or older.

On Saturday, Sept. 19 the gallery will hold a "Wet Paint Sale" from 1-4 p.m. of work by participating artists.

Nancy Tankersley, one of the primary organizers of the Easton Plein Air Competition and Arts Festival, will judge the show. First place will receive $500, second place $250, third place $100 and honorable mention $100. Guests can also vote for the People's Choice award.

Work will remain on display until Oct. 31.

"It's a wonderful experience seeing art made right in front of your eyes," Mullis said. "It's something that some people have never seen before. I always take pictures of all the artists and it's amazing to see what they can create in just a couple days."

"It's also a competition and we have really good prizes, which artists are really excited about," Mullis continued. "Lots of people came last year to our Wet Paint exhibition, and we were so pleased to see that the community was so interested in what the artists came up with."

Sponsors of 2015 Paint Berlin include the Town of Berlin, South Moon Under, Taylor Bank, Beachwood Inc. and the Burbage Funeral Home.

Overcooking fresh fish akin to crime

Suffering from a bit of jet lag this week, I am trying to get back in the groove. Understanding that I am on east coast time and that I'm back at work, there is no excuse for not getting up on time. But, there have been a couple days where the kids and I have slept until noon, a strange occurrence in our house.

By Paul Suplee,

Getting ready for the school year is always an interesting task; adding new projects and tweaking existing ones all add up to keep a person on their toes. And the time goes by way too quickly. Mix in a little time zone discrepancy and it becomes easy to see how one's schedule could get a little messed up.

Wanting to not let go of our Hawaiian experience, I made a big batch of chicken barbecue and Kalua pork, the latter being a shredded pork with (don't judge me) liquid smoke. Now, I smoke a great deal of pork product throughout the year, but every time that I have eaten Kalua pork in the Islands, it has been made with liquid smoke, so I try to keep it true to form.

But here I am watching TV until three in the morning, hoping for a little sleep so that I can get back in the rhythm of things. At the very least, dinner was delicious as I was able to sup on some fresh flounder from Captain Monty, always a welcome gift in my house, especially this week.

You see, I ate fresh fish in the islands as much as time would allow, and it was quite hit-and-miss. Islands lend themselves to seafood for obvious reasons, and it still amazes me how preparing seafood is either something that chefs are very good at or, on the contrary, is something at which they need a great deal of practice. But how can this be? These guys live in the islands. How can they screw up fresh fish, shrimp and scallops?

During one of our dinners, at what most people consider the best restaurant on the North Shore, two of the guests at our table had shrimp and scallops, respectively. Unfortunately, they were unoriginally boiled in butter, or by the menu description baked in it (The menu description made this sound good, somehow). The dishes resembled the scampi that we cooked in Annapolis in the early 80s. It was confusing. I had the sushi, which was delicious and well-articulated, but the fish debacle to my left and right in front of me meant that there were two chefs running the restaurant and the sushi bar. Few things frustrate me more than ruining fresh seafood.

So, coming home to a bag full of fresh flounder was a happy surprise, and after cleaning it and preparing a minimum of ingredients, I was able to remind myself that fish doesn't have to be overcooked and boring. With that being said, you might very well think that this fish is boring, but a quick flash in the pan and a lemon-caper sauce will bring a bag of flounder to life.

And while I eat my plate of lemon-flounder, I revel in its freshness and reminisce the many fish that we saw on the reef including the large barracuda that swam by us completely disinterested. The beach patrol captain told me the boys were going to fish the barracuda out once it was big enough and grill it up. And I bet they'll get it right. Just a few ingredients and heat. That's all it takes. I just wish that I could be there for that barbecue.

Lemon Flounder

Serves 4

4 6-8 ounce pieces of fresh flounder
3 Tbsp. flour
3 Tbsp. Cornstarch
Salt & Pepper to taste
Olive oil, as needed
1/2 c. Fish or chicken stock
Juice of 1 lemon
3 Tbsp. Large capers
1/4 c. Italian parsley, chiffonade
1/4 c. Cold butter

1. Pat the flounder dry with paper towels

2. On a separate plate, combine flour, cornstarch, salt and pepper

3. Heat the olive oil until under-smoking. I know, you're not supposed to cook with olive oil; I've read the reports. But, I still like this. If you don't, just use vegetable oil with a higher flashpoint

4. Dredge the flounder in the flour mixture (meaning just lightly dust it) and place carefully in the hot oil

5. Allow to cook until the fish has a little color. Unlike heartier fish, you don't really need a thick crust on this fish. It can stay rather delicate

6. Turn the fish over and then remove to a glass ovenproof pan

7. In the fry pan, drain the oil but leave the fond (the goo at the bottom of the pan) for deglazing

8. Deglaze with the stock and quickly add the lemon and capers

9. Reduce by two-thirds, and then add the parsley and pull off heat

10. Let it cool just a touch and add the cool butter, swirling it in to turn your sauce into a lemony, caper-punching beurre blanc

11. Adjust seasoning

12. This is one of the few dishes like Chicken Picatta and Veal Marsala where I'll tell you to slather the sauce all over the protein. I usually like to see that which I'm paying good money for, but this sauce is the money only when it's all over the flounder.

W.C.H.S. offers lower adoption fee during ‘Cat Days’ promotion

Discounted rate of $75 includes cats and kittens, available at Berlin Walmart

(Aug. 20, 2015) “The Cat Days of Summer” are winding down at the Worcester County Humane Society but there is still time to take advantage of the discounted adoption fee of $75 for cats and kittens. The discounted adoption fee will continue until Labor Day and includes spay/neuter, immunizations, microchip and fecal exam.

“There is no better time than now to adopt from the shelter as it is currently filled to capacity with cats and kittens” said Ashley Brown, WCHS adoption coordinator. “During the month of July there were over 50 kittens brought into the shelter bringing the total number of cats and kittens living here to over 150.”

Throughout the summer the shelter has been holding adoption events, “The Cat Days of Summer,” at Walmart in Berlin. There will be one more summer adoption event on Saturday, Aug. 22 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. There will also be some additional Saturdays in the fall–Sept. 12, 19 and Oct. 10.

There will be cats available for adoption at every event along with baked goods for purchase and raffle tickets with the chance to win three cash prizes.

If interested in adopting a cat or kitten come on out to the “Cat Days of Summer” event. Cats from the shelter are also at Petco and OC Pet Spa both in West Ocean City, and visitors are welcome at the shelter during regular business hours. Adoptions are based on application approval. The shelter also has a senior-to-senior program where any person over the age of 65 adopting a cat over the age of 8 will have their adoption fee waived.

The Worcester County Humane Society is a private, non-profit, no kill animal shelter located on Eagle’s Nest Road just off Stephen Decatur Highway. The shelter is open 11a.m. to 5 p.m. every day except Wednesdays and Sundays.

For more information on available pets or questions about adoption, visit the shelter website, www.worcestercountyhumanesociety.org, or call 410-213-0146. Follow the shelter on Facebook and Instagram for event updates and available pets.

Williamsburg Salsa Orchestra to perform at Freeman Stage

Aug. 21 showcase of indie rock songs includes salsa lessons and history lecture

(Aug. 20, 2015) The spirit and rhythm of salsa will fill the summer air on Friday, Aug. 21 at 7 p.m., with a performance by Williamsburg Salsa Orchestra at The Freeman Stage at Bayside. Beginner salsa lessons and a lecture on the history of salsa and mambo will be given before the performance starts at 6:45 p.m.

The Williamsburg Salsa Orchestra is a stunning 11-piece Latin band which plays dynamic, astonishing arrangements of indie rock tunes, taking the art of salsa to new places while remaining within the classic, deeply funky tradition. Songs by Arcade Fire, The Yeah Yeah Yeahs, TV on the Radio, Santigold, Animal Collective, and many more are transformed into astonishing salsa anthems for a new generation.

The WSO released its debut album in 2011 and has garnered international praise and recognition, making many “Best of The Year” lists and establishing the band as a groundbreaking global voice by infusing the typical salsa form with a completely modern identity.

The WSO is led by percussionist Gianni Mano of Latin-funk legends Radio Mundial, and fronted by Argentinian superstar Solange Prat. Based in Brooklyn N.Y., the 11-piece WSO features some of the finest local musicians. Influenced by the New York greats like Tito Puente, Ray Barretto, Eddie Palmieri and the 70s Fania/Salsa Dura scene as well as the beautiful variety of music from Cuba and the Afro-Caribbean countries, fans also love the creativity and innovation of modern independent music.

This engagement of the Williamsburg Salsa Orchestra is made possible in part through funding by the Mid Atlantic Arts Foundation. Tickets, which can be purchased at www.freemanstage.org or by calling 302-436-3015, are $10 for adults. Youth 18 and under get in free. The Freeman Stage at Bayside, located in the Bayside community at the intersections of Routes 54 and 20 in Selbyville, Del., is a program of the Joshua M. Freeman Foundation.

This program is made possible, in part, by a grant from the Delaware Division of the Arts, a state agency dedicated to nurturing and supporting the arts in Delaware, in partnership with the National Endowment for the Arts. The Freeman Stage at Bayside also receives grant support for its programs from the Mid Atlantic Arts Foundation, the PNC Foundation, the Carl M. Freeman Foundation, the Sussex County Council, and Delaware.
