Town of Berlin now leads local farmers market

By Nathan Brunet
Staff Writer

BERLIN – The Berlin Farmers Market has cut its connection with the Berlin Chamber of Commerce and is now under the guidance of the Main Street Berlin program.

The move comes as discussion continues about a long-term strategy for the market and how it might relocate elsewhere in the town's center.

"We ... are looking forward now to a new partnership with the Main Street Berlin program, while maintaining the character and high quality of our downtown Berlin Farmers Market," said Paul Wood, owner of A & W Farms and a member of the local farmers market in a press release sent Monday,

New Yacht Club site plan OK'd by county officials

Construction expected to begin in two months

OCEAN PINES – Construction for the new Ocean Pines Yacht Club is expected to begin within the next two months, now that the Worcester County Planning Commission has approved the facility's site plan.

"We were able to significantly decrease the adjustment they were seeking," county Planning Director Ed Tudor said of the commission's Nov. 1 approval.

In early October, the original site plan for the new Ocean Pines Yacht Club was rejected by the commission because it failed to provide the required number of parking spaces. A few days after that meeting, Ocean Pines Associ-

Berlin, Pines offer hurricane relief

Ocean Pines accepts donations, Berlin helps Crisfield clean up town

BERLIN/OCEAN PINES – Representatives from Berlin government and the Ocean Pines Association are providing relief in their own way to areas devastated two weeks ago by Hurricane Sandy.

According to Tony Carson, town administrator of Berlin, Public Works Director Mike Gibbons led a team to Crisfield, about an hour away from town, on Thursday and Friday.

Crisfield, on the Chesapeake side of Somerset County, was hit much harder by the storm than the Berlin area.

"The entire town was about 3 feet underwater. It was a disaster," said Rick Lord, foreman at the Public Works department of Crisfield.

Lord said Berlin, along with other municipalities, helped repair a major drainage issue. Once that was fixed, workers stayed for hours picking up debris from the streets such as boards and tree limbs.

"We didn't expect it, they just came," said Lord, who mentioned multiple institutions – including the Eastern Correctional Institution – are helping with the Crisfield rebuilding effort that is about one-third of the way complete.

Though Berlin representatives were only in Crisfield for two days, the gesture will not be forgotten by the people who live there.

"We just want them to know it's a two-way street. We're here for them if they need us," Lord said.

While Berlin is doing what it can to provide relief, the OPA has initiated a major donation effort.

As of Nov. 1, drop-off stations were set up at the Ocean Pines Community Center, Public Works building, Sports Core Pool, Administration Building and Police Department.

"Our goal is to raise enough items to provide a tractor-trailer load of organized relief from one coastal community to another," said a press release sent by Teresa Travatello, OPA director of marketing and

■ Wreaths Across America:

The Worcester County Veterans Memorial Foundation wants the community to sponsor wreaths to be placed at the gravesite of veterans this holiday season. The foundation has again selected the Eastern Shore Veterans Cemetery in Hurlock as the site to lay wreaths.

The cost to sponsor a wreath is $15. Checks, made payable to "Wreaths Across America," should be mailed to Worcester County Veterans Memorial Foundation, P.O. Box 1576, Ocean Pines, Md. 21811. Forms are available online at www.opvets.com. The deadline is Nov. 23.

This is the fourth year the Worcester County Veterans Memorial Foundation will be involved with the program. Approximately 5,800 people are buried at the cemetery.

The Wreaths Across America project was founded in 1992, by the Worcester Wreath Company in Harrington, Me. The original intent was to place wreaths at the gravesites in Arlington National Cemetery. The project grew to include veterans' cemeteries nationwide and overseas.

This year, including the effort at Arlington, Wreaths Across America will distribute nearly 500,000 wreaths nationwide, providing support for memorials in all 50 states, including special services at Bunker Hill, Charleston Naval Shipyard, and a wreath for every victim of Sept. 11 in New York City, the Pentagon and Shanksville, Pa.

National Wreaths Across America Day is Saturday, Dec. 15.

Next step for OP Yacht Club is building permit

Earliest possibility of approval process will take four to six weeks

ation representatives met with Tudor to request an adjustment that would allow them to provide fewer spaces than what the zoning code requires.

Although county code says there must be one parking space for every 125 square feet of surface in a commercial lot, part of that code allows Tudor to make significant changes to its regulations.

Depending on the scenario, the county can reduce by 20 percent the general requirement of one parking space for every 125 square feet of the lot.

Through meetings between Tudor and OPA representatives, the number of required spaces was shrunk by exactly 10.9 percent. This was after the OPA requested a reduction of more than 20 percent, according to Tudor.

Parking spaces in the county are typically 10 feet wide by 20 feet long, but by reducing the width of several parking spaces, some by an extremely small amount, they were able to add many more spaces than what was initially incorporated in the original site plan.

"We are excited about the progress we have made and are looking forward to the construction phase of the project to begin," OPA General Manager Bob Thompson said in a press release sent Friday, the day after the site plan was approved.

Up next for the OPA in its effort to build a new Yacht Club is obtaining a building permit. While no exact timeline could be given, Thompson said the earliest the OPA would be awarded the permit is within four to six weeks.

Assuming no major delays, construction could begin within the next two months.

Harkins Builders will build the new facility, which will cost $4.3 million.

Regular customers of the existing Ocean Pines Yacht Club need not to worry, as the currently operating building will not close until the final two months of construction for the new structure.

Suggested items are nonperishable foods, games, books and warm clothing. Toiletries are also needed, including toilet paper, toothbrushes, toothpaste and hand sanitizers.

Gift cards will be accepted as well, but cash or check donations are not allowed. If a gift card is being donated, organizers recommend dropping it at the Administration Building or the police department.

Travatello said a location for relief has not yet been determined, but the town or towns that will receive these donations will be se-

All donated items must be collected by Thursday, Nov. 15.

Shelby Trucking and Construction from Selbyville, Del. has volunteered to drive the tractor-trailer to its destination, and First State Packaging Inc. from Salisbury will cover costs of shipping and collection.

Market's long-term direction discussed

Official advisory board forming to manage the new farmers market

Nov. 5.

Main Street Berlin, managed by Berlin Economic & Community Development Director Michael Day, is in the middle of setting up an official advisory board for the market. This board will feature Day, Berlin Councilmember Lisa Hall, two market vendors, two representatives of the Berlin business community, two Berlin community members and a "market master" to act as the vendors' leader.

The most immediate action Main Street Berlin will take is the appointment of a market master, a position that has been vacant for many months.

Olive Mawyer, former executive director of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce, had held the title, but no one has assumed the position since Aaren Collins took Mawyer's chamber position in May.

Another town event has also been created: "Agriculture Heritage Weekend," which will be coordinated by the farmers market and Main Street Berlin.

Additionally, there will likely be an annual presentation of the Berlin Farmers Market at a mayor and council meeting.

With the changing to new leadership, the Berlin Farmers Market will also undergo an update of its rules and regulations.

As the development of a long-term strategy for the market, Day could not give an estimate as to when any newly discussed items will be officially confirmed.

However, Day was able to confirm the Berlin Farmers Market will stay in the North Main Street lot until at least next season and new locations close to the town's center will be discussed.

"I believe everyone at the meeting found that we have much to gain by working together and much to lose if we do not," Berlin Mayor Gee Williams said in the press release.

Williams is referencing the mayor and council meeting on Oct. 22, when the removal of the farmers market from its traditional downtown parking lot off North Main Street was discussed.

Berlin officials cited a need for additional parking because consumers have been complaining to the town about a lack of parking availability, especially since a great influx of new businesses have brought much traffic to the downtown area.

As the farmers market can take up as many as 25 parking spaces on the town-owned lot, Berlin officials decided the best option was to move the market from the location it has occupied for the past 19 years.

The town offered Stephen Decatur Park and Dr. William Henry Park as new market locations, and asked the chamber to make the required formal request of moving the market.

Supporters of the Berlin Farmers Market filled the council chamber in protest of the relocation and to lambaste.

Many lambasted the chamber and town for not giving farmers any notice, while others argued that moving the market's presence away from downtown would kill business.

Because of the strong protest – not one public comment was in favor of the move – the mayor and council decided to table the motion to move.

The day after the meeting, Williams sent a press release reminding the public it was originally the town's request to move the market.

As town and market representatives plan the future of the Berlin Farmers Market, its members have expressed pleasure with the new direction.

"With 20 years of history and loyal customers here, I can say we are very pleased to be staying in downtown Berlin," Wood said.

NATHAN BRUNET/BAYSIDE GAZETTE

Members and supporters of the Berlin Farmers Market pose with signs in protest of the market's proposed moving to operate away from the downtown area on Friday, Oct. 19. Although the market will stay put until next season, the situation has led to the Main Street Berlin program taking over management of the market, instead of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce, who has led the market for 19 years.

Victorian Charm to kick off annual winter coat drive

BERLIN — Victorian Charm in historic Berlin is proud to announce its 3rd annual children's coat drive. Three years ago, owner Debbie Frene's daughter-in-law, Kristin Parker, a fourth grade teacher at Berlin Intermediate School, had mentioned that some of her students were coming to school without winter coats on and could not participate in recess.

"It touched my heart and couldn't believe there were children in our community without winter coats," Frene said. "Later that week my husband and I went out and purchased dozens of coats, hats and gloves and took them to the 3 area elementary schools."

Victorian Charm has expanded its efforts by inviting customers or anyone else to bring in new coats, hats and gloves for local school children.

To further help area children, Victorian Charm will donate $5.00 for each new coat received to The Cricket Children's Advocacy Center. Any left over coats will go to Diakonia.

If anyone would like to donate, bring come by the store during normal business hours: Monday-Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Sunday 11 a.m.-5 p.m. and Friday from 10 a.m.-8 p.m.

Victorian Charm is located at 100 N. Main Street in Berlin.

The 7 p.m. Friday evening performance will be held in the theatre of the Arts & Science Center located on the Owens Campus in Georgetown, Del.

"We are so honored to again be hosting this internationally recognized arts organization as we celebrate the end of our incredible fifth season," said Patti Grimes, executive director of the Joshua M. What to know once a family member has passed away

Unfortunately, our loved ones do eventually pass away. We recently had a case where a client had an updated will that no one in the family found out about until after his death. As a result, his estate will have to go through probate.

By Chip Gordy
MBA, CRPC

Probate is the process of "proving" that a deceased person's will is valid and that it's the last will that person wrote.

Viewed in a broader scope, probate refers to the entire process of the court-supervised administration of an estate, from the initial probate of the will to the distribution of estate assets. Following are a few things you should know.

■ How long is the process of probate? Where the estate is relatively small and uncomplicated, the probate of a will at the local courthouse may take 15 or 20 minutes (and may not even require a lawyer). If the estate is large and/or there are complicating issues, the probate of a will can require a lawyer, advanced notice to heirs, court hearing(s), and perhaps months (and in extreme cases years) to complete the process.

■ What is the role of an estate's personal representative? When a person dies, property owned in the decedent's name must be assembled. Next, debts, taxes and expenses of the decedent must be paid. Whatever is left must then be distributed to the individuals or charities entitled to that property according to the decedent's will. If there's no valid will, or to the extent the will is partially invalid, the distribution of any remaining property is determined by state intestacy (without a will, descent and distribution) laws. The estate's executor or administrator is legally responsible (and legally authorized) to collect the decedent's assets, pay appropriate death taxes, debts, and expenses and distribute any assets remaining.

■ Is the executor or administrator responsible for the details of a person's funeral? No. The funeral almost always occurs before the executor or administrator has been formally appointed. Usually, funeral details and decisions

Chico's Outlet, Coach Factory Outlet, Under Armour and Body Central represent the new stores that have opened up this year at Tanger Outlets off Route 50 in West Ocean City.

New outlets for holiday shopping

Four new stores have opened in Tanger Outlets since last year

By Nathan Brunet
Staff Writer

WEST OCEAN CITY – Gearing up to the holiday season, consumers may notice a slight change in the layout of Tanger Outlets off Route 50, as the center has recently had a new facelift, and new stores have been opening throughout the year.

Four new stores have opened in the complex within a year, including Chico's Outlet, Coach Factory, Under Armour and Body Central.

Chico's Outlet, located a few doors away from Carter's in the corner of the shopping center, just opened last month and features fashionable women's clothing and accessories.

"We have plenty of items whether you're looking to dress up or dress casually," said General Manager Tiffany Snyder.

Soon, Snyder said the store will be full of holiday wear for those looking to get an early start on purchasing gifts this year.

Among the more elegant products are quality sweaters, jackets and jewelry, of which Snyder says are always popular items.

weekends are also a hot item, and several varieties of scarves will be available as well.

Directly next door to Chico's Outlet is Coach Factory, who is celebrating its first day in operation at that location today, Thursday.

are made by the decedent's immediate family. The personal representative's only legal duty with respect to the funeral is typically to pay and keep records of reasonable funeral related expenses. Sometimes, however, the decedent's will provides instructions about the funeral and/or burial and the personal representative should honor these directions to the extent practical and possible.

■ What's meant by "letters" or "letters testamentary?" When a person dies, his will is recorded in the office of the local register of wills of the county in which he/she was domiciled. The register of wills (or the appropriate court of jurisdiction) will issue to the named personal representative either "letters testamentary" (in the case of an executor) or "letters of administration" (if an administrator is serving). These "letters" are proof of the legal authority of the personal representative to collect and deal with the assets of the decedent's estate.

New Coach Factory store opens today in Tanger Outlets

As Coach has long been seen as a women's retail store, men may feel a wanting to skip over this segment, but the new West Ocean City store is actually a split between men's and women's items.

"In the last couple of years, we've been focusing more and more on men," said a Coach representative who was not able to divulge information, unless on the agreement of anonymity.

Additionally, these factory stores are stocked with discounted products not found in the larger boutique centers.

Women still have plenty of items to choose from, such as handbags, shoes, jewelry, sunglasses, fragrances and other accessories.

Now there will be a significant amount of produce for men, such as wallets, belts, shoes, briefcases and many more.

Moving back to styling women's clothing and accessories, Body Central is located in the stretch between Rue21 and Mione's Pizza & Italian Restaurant.

Similar to Chico's, Body Central features trendy women's tops such as coats, shirts, dresses and other accessories like scarves and jewelry.

Bottoms include tasteful items including dresses and skirts, along with leisurely wear like denim and sweatpants.

"In the last couple of years, we've been focusing more and more on men."

Across the parking lot from the Gap Outlet, Under Armor sells a multitude of athletic wear for both men and women.

Long sleeve and tightly, yet comfortably, fit ColdGear tops are expected to be a big seller as winter approaches, along with similarly designed pants to give athletes more protection from the elements.

There are also numerous options of footwear, depending on the situation. Options include running shoes, basketball shoes, cleats and more.

Plenty of accessories will also be stocked, such as gloves, socks and head ware.

While these are the newest stores that have opened in Tanger Outlets, there are more than 40 places to shop within the entire center, and all shops feature a wide variety of quality holiday gifts.

Other prominent clothing and accessories stores located in the shopping mall include Bass, Van Heusen and Tommy Hilfiger.

Athletes and more sporty consumers could spend hours inside both Reebok and Lids.

Regular store hours at Tanger Outlets are 9 a.m. - 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 11 a.m. - 7 p.m. on Sunday.

No Tanger Outlet representatives were able to say what new shops are coming in to vacant storefronts, but according to its website, a Crocs Outlet will be opening in the shopping center soon.

For a detailed map explaining where every Tanger Outlets store is located, and other information, visit www.tangeroutlet.com/oceancity.

Local wine website officially launched

SALISBURY, MD – Wine lovers can now review objective wine recommendations online before their next trip to the wine store. DelmarvaWine.com is a new website created by wine writer John Rankin, who says he launched the site to provide wine reviews and to educate the growing number of wine consumers.

"Despite the weak economy, the number of wine consumers continues to grow, particularly in the 25 to 40 age bracket," he said. "The recent growth of this segment can be seen in the number of new beverage stores and wine bars opening across the Shore."

A wine enthusiast for 17 years, Rankin studied wine at Anne Arundel Community College and Wine Spectator School. He writes wine stories for the Shore Life and Annapolis Lifestyle magazines and wrote the monthly wine column for Salisbury's Metropolitan magazine from 2011-2012. Recently he began conducting wine tastings at local art galleries and wine bars.

His online wine picks are nationally-available wines that can be purchased locally. The recommendations are selections that he tasted personally and considers to be good a good value for the price. Generally, the wines are in the $10 to $25 price range, but premium labels are also listed.

"Despite the weak economy, the number of wine consumers continues to grow."

JOHN RANKIN

Creator of DelmarvaWine.com

DelmarvaWine.com presents consumer tips and information about local wine retailers, wineries and wine bars. As the site evolves, Rankin plans to add restaurants that offer distinctive wine lists, and lifestyle content which will bring wine consumers together with wine-related businesses.

"The goal is to add personality to the site and engage my readers as members of a wine community that stretches from the ocean to the bay," Rankin concluded.

Charitable locals donate to 'Be a Santa to a Senior'

BERLIN – Seniors who do not have a strong financial circumstance or cannot spend the holidays with close friends and family now have the opportunity to receive gifts from charitable residents through the "Be a Santa to a Senior" program created by Home Instead Senior Care.

"It's nice to be able to help somebody else, and we do not want these seniors to think they have been forgotten," said Berlin Mayor Gee Williams Friday evening at the Berlin Chamber of Commerce during the program's kick-off ceremony.

Since Nov. 1, Christmas trees filled with paper ornaments displaying names of senior citizens have been placed in three Berlin locations, Apple Discount Drugs on Franklin Avenue, Coastal Drug Center on Old Ocean City Boulevard and the Berlin Chamber of Commerce on South Main Street. There are also two trees in the Apple Discount Drugs stores in Fruitland and Salisbury.

On each ornament is a list of gift suggestions offered by needy or lonely seniors. Anyone who wishes to purchase something for that person would take the corresponding tag off the tree and go buy it.

Once the item or items are purchased, it must be wrapped and then returned by Dec. 6 to the location where the paper ornament had been.

A Home Instead Senior Care representative will stop by each location and pick up the gifts to distribute to seniors.

These seniors are not requesting luxuries, but necessities and easy-to-purchase items such as blankets, socks and lotion.

"This is another way to say 'thank you' to the many seniors who have made such important contributions to our community throughout the years," said Claude Lewis, owner of the Home Instead Senior Care franchise that operates in Worcester, Wicomico and Somerset Counties.

"Helping a needy senior can bring fulfillment to the give, as well as the receiver. It really does make a difference."

Because Lewis opened his Berlin office in January, this is the first time the "Be a Santa to a Senior" program has been available locally.

Lewis said he is happy to bring this program to the area, especially since he has seen so many programs in support of needy children, while seniors have been ignored by some outlets.

According to the United States Census Bureau, 9 percent of seniors 65 and older are living in poverty, while 27 percent are widowed.

Lewis said the list of seniors in need was provided by the Worcester County Health Department, as all seniors in the program are being provided for by the county in some way.

In the five years of the national program's existence, hundreds of thousands of gifts have been donated to seniors.

For more information, visit www.beasantatoasenor.com or call 410-641-0901.

Veterans Appreciation

With Veterans Day approaching, it's time to thank all of those who have served our country and those who are currently serving, whether overseas or at home.

We appreciate their service and not only in times of international strife but also when other circumstances arise. Many service people enter the National Guard once their active duty is over and its members were among those protecting life and property following the storm that battered the East coast.

While most of us were thankful to sit home and worry if our power would hold out, service members were out in the storm checking on our safety, offering support to local responders and helping to rescue those who found themselves in trouble with rising waters. And they continue to assist in the massive storm relief efforts all along the East Coast.

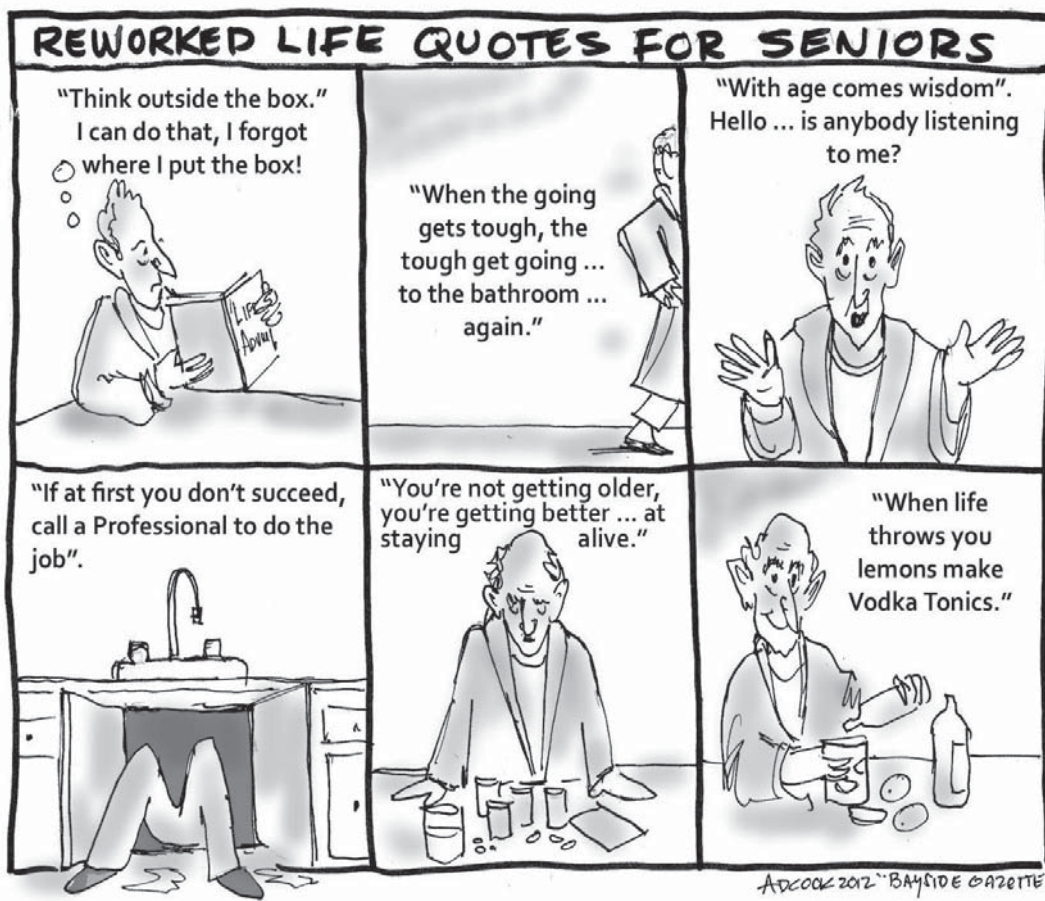

Many have served several tours in the Middle East, as the discord in that region has spanned decades. The personal sacrifices both they and their families have made to attend to the needs of our country is not something taken for granted, but is something for which we are thankful every day.

Veterans Day is one day a year when we get the opportunity to express that appreciation – so thank you to all who have served, especially to those who were wounded or lost their lives defending us. We will never forget the sacrifices you've made.

Thanking OPA staff, mgmt., volunteers

Editor,

We would like to take the time to personally thank the management, staff and volunteers of Ocean Pines Association who did an exemplary job during Hurricane Sandy. Under the coordination of Bob Thompson, all the mission essential departments in Ocean Pines were fully manned 24 hours during the emergency.

Enough kudos cannot be given to our police and fire departments, EMTs, Public Works, Recreation and Parks, Food and Beverage, Aquatics, Casper Golf, office staff and PR departments. Many of these people worked on a 24-hour schedule, with a command center being set up at the Ocean Pines Administrative Building.

Mr. Thompson and Chief [Bill] Bounds had the foresight to plan ahead for this storm. They secured a [High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle, commonly known as a] Humvee and two members of the National Guard to operate it. Six members of the Swift-Water Rescue Team arrived from South Carolina, along with a boat if they needed to make water rescues. Throughout the night, our own crews patrolled Ocean Pines removing limbs and trees from the road, putting up barricades where there was high water, and going door to door to notify the residents who lived in the area where a mandatory evacuation was ordered.

The phones to Ocean Pines and Public Works were manned throughout the event. Many calls were received from concerned residents regarding their property, rising water, trees and location of shelters. Many calls came from family members who did not live here but were concerned about parents and loved ones. All calls were addressed as quickly as possible.

Special thanks goes out to Chief Dave Massey and his entire police force: Fire/EMS Division Chief Bill Bounds and his staff of emergency responders; Teresa Travatello, who kept us informed on the Web

Please forgive us if there is anyone else we have failed to mention in this letter.

We are sure the owners and residents of the Pines did not know what was going on behind the scenes. This was a well-run emergency program and our general manager, Bob Thompson, is to be credited with an outstanding job organizing all these various responders in the face of unknown dangers from this massive storm.

Ocean Pines is truly fortunate to have such a dedicated group of staff, volunteers and employees. Many, many thanks.

Flag Ceremony Open to the Public

Editor,

Last year, a lady called the VFW to donate a flag from her husband who [had served during] Pearl Harbor. I told her the flag given to her was a Flag of Honor. Her flag was to be handed down to another family member or she could retire her flag during the annual Flag Retirement Ceremony on Nov. 5. This year, it will be held Nov. 10, at 2 p.m. at the Worcester County Veterans Memorial in Ocean Pines. Fred Lynn, Committee Chairman of Boys Scout Troop 261, and the American Legion Post 166 will sponsor this year's flag retirement event.

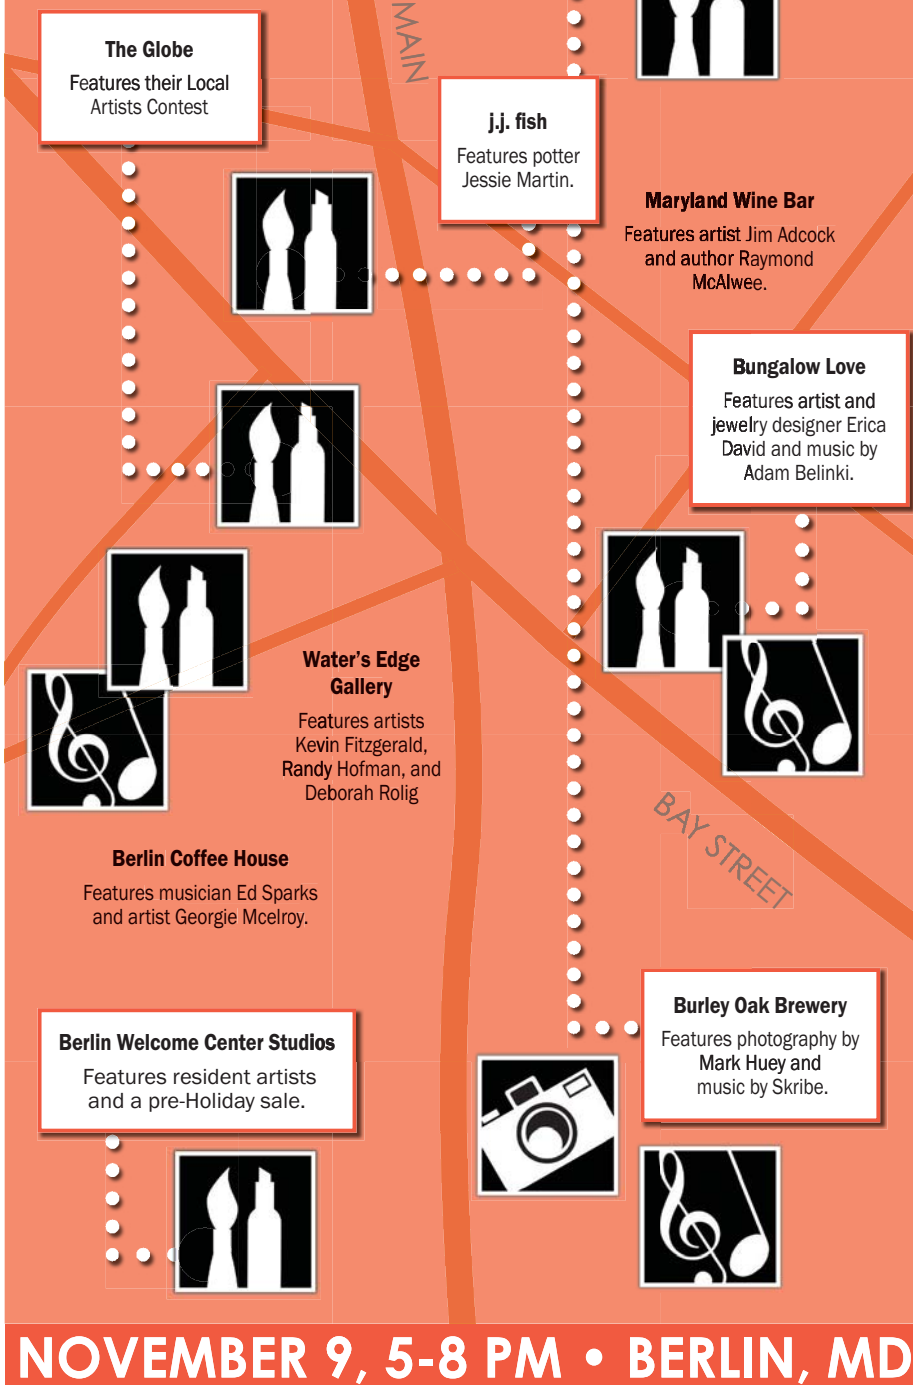

It is an official ceremony that includes speeches by American Legion Post 166 Cmdr. Bill Wolf, Worcester County Veterans Memorial President Marie Gilmore and Ladies Auxiliary President Tammy Matrey (master of ceremonies). The American Legion Riders will show their support.

All attending Boy Scouts will retire one flag and participants will be asked to retire their flags. The American Legion Color Guard will give a rifle salute and tabs. Anyone can help the Boy Scouts Troop 261 by giving a donation. Donations may be mailed to Fred Lynn, Troop Committee Chairman, 1619 Mercers Way, Ocean Pines, Md. 21811.

Mentalist Dan Cain, center, performs one of his tricks to prove to the audience that free will is a farce, and everything is as it is meant to be. Here, he attempts to guess the number the audience member wrote down and slid in the envelope. Cain will perform at the Whimsical Cottage of Berlin located in the large parking lot off North Main Street on Friday, Nov. 9 at 8 p.m.

Mentalist plays mind tricks at Whimsical Cottage

Entertainer Dan Cain will wow the audience this Friday in Berlin

By Nathan Brunet
Staff Writer

BERLIN – Mentalist Dan Cain will present his “Experiments of the Mind” show this weekend at the Whimsical Cottage of Berlin to prove to audience members that there is no such thing as a random happening.

“I know this dispels the notion of free will, but everything’s pretty much meant to be,” Cain said. “I like to show connections between people.”

These connections, according to Cain, are not connections such as discovering a long-lost relative, but rather seemingly random associations between people in unconventional ways.

As one example of what could be seen in his show on Friday, Nov. 9, Cain said he will have two random people come up on stage, one with his or her ticket to the show and another who has a $1 bill.

Cain will then have the person with the ticket scratch off a section on its backside to reveal a series of letters and numbers.

He will then compare that series of characters to a sequence on the other audience member’s $1 bill, showing the audience both are the same.

Remote viewings are another part of the show, in which Cain will draw exactly what a chosen audience member is thinking of.

Another example of a trick Cain performs to show connections between people is bringing somebody up on stage to scratch the participant’s nose. While scratching that person’s nose, another audience member in no apparent relation to the other subject will then start feeling the scratches on his or her own nose.

The mentalist insists he uses no plants in the audience and there is no one backstage directing the action without the audience’s knowledge.

“I try to make the show as random as possible,” Cain said.

At 5 years old, Cain’s grandmother taught him his first card trick, which led the way to his interest in magic tricks and eventually becoming a mentalist.

“It was enough to open that door for me and I never looked back,” he said.

Throughout his 15 years of professional experience as a mentalist, Cain has apparently grown strong with whatever gives him this power, as he reached national headlines by predicting the outcome of this year’s Super Bowl.

Making his prediction three months before the February game, Cain guessed the contest’s winner, the exact score of the game and even a specific highlight of the game that there would be a crucial interception by the New England Patriots.

Cain is back to his predicting ways, as he will reveal who he picked as the Major League Baseball World Series champion on Nov. 19 in New York City.

Although the San Francisco Giants already won the series last month, his prediction was burned onto a CD in March and put into an envelope sealed with wax to make it known the item had not been opened.

Celebrities Cory Epstein, Briella Marie and hip-hop artist Jay Magics will be among the attendees during the red carpet affair.

Tickets to Cain’s show are $20 per seat and there are 60 seats available.

His show begins at 8 p.m. inside the Whimsical Cottage of Berlin, located in the large parking lot off North Main Street.

For more information, visit www.thewhimsicalcottageofberlin or call 443-543-4768.

The family ritual calls for an elaborate dinner every Sunday evening, with the father (a highly trained chef) spending countless hours in the kitchen beforehand.

When dinner is served, a much more elaborate spread than I have ever given my family short of our Thanksgiving annual assault, the three daughters merely wince "politely" and critique the meal, sharing their feelings freely on what could have been done to better the meal.

Now, my kids may not be as critical of my work as the three heroines, but I do laugh every time that I see the movie, as it reminds me that children are fickle beasts, and some things shall forever remain a mystery.

It is a common trick of ours to tell the kids that Mom made the chicken teriyaki when, in fact, I was the artisan in charge of the task; then the kids will think it is fantastic. But when they see me in the act of making it, something to the effect of, "Aww, can't Mom cook the chicken teriyaki?" is usually heard unabashedly announced in the background, with seemingly little effort employed to hide their disappointment.

But that's enough of that for the moment, because I fell upon something that not only satiated the family's hunger issue but was lauded with rave reviews. It should come as no surprise or mystery to those of you who have been on this ride for the last eight years that sometimes I fall shy of ideas.

On any given Sunday, I am auctioning off ideas and taking hints and pointers from people. Sometimes it sticks and sometimes it doesn't. I can't explain the process, just as my wife can't explain me, and she's a therapist.

At the mention of Chicken Cheesesteak Calzones, I immediately considered the possibilities, since a good chicken cheesesteak (the Reel Inn still has the best in town) can outgun any other sandwich on the menu.

I love a plateful of onions, peppers and mushrooms ready to pile on top of the chicken, all just waiting for the Provolone cheese. I don't want to hear all of the nonsense about American cheese being better, because it is not.

When I visit Philadelphia, a city that I find rather amazing, I always go to Geno's Subs for its famous and eponymous specialty. As a good lemming, I regularly order it in my best South Philly accent, which makes it come out something like a forced and accentuated, "Cheesesteak, wit wiz."

In the case of a good Philly cheesesteak, I won't mess with it. But south of Wilmington, I'd rather take the Provolone, especially in this case as we're going to pair it with pizza sauce and stuff it in a calzone.

As the night progresses, the house fills with the wafting warmth of rising and baking bread, wine reduced over sautéed vegetables and the piquant aroma of the tomato sauce used not only in the calzone, but also as a dipping sauce.

The children are placated. They have soundly congratulated me on a successful meal. And I for one am glad to have won this battle. It may not make a dent in the war effort, but I won this battle and I can add this to our repertoire of rotating menus.

And now all I have to figure out is what to make for dinner tomorrow night.

Whatever it is, I will make sure that the kids see me. That always makes it more interesting.

Chicken Cheesesteak Calzone

makes 4 calzones

4-5 oz. raw pizza or bread dough balls
16 oz. shaved chicken breast
4 oz. sliced Provolone cheese
8 oz. Mozzarella cheese
4 oz. marinara or pizza sauce, plus more to serve on the side
2 cup each: red pepper julienne, white onion julienne and Crimini mushrooms
3 fresh garlic cloves, crushed
1 cup Chianti
olive oil, as needed
flour for dusting, as needed

Step 1: Have the dough balls ready to go, keeping them covered if they are in the proof stage or if you have a lot to do. You don't want them to get a skin

Step 2: In a sauté pan, heat the olive oil and cook the garlic until it is golden. Do not let it burn or it will be bitter and unusable

Step 3: Add the shaved chicken breast and cook halfway

Step 4: Add the onions, peppers and mushrooms and sauté until the water has released and the vegetables are half-cooked

Step 5: Add the wine and cook until there is minimal liquid. Set aside

Step 6: To make the calzone, roll out a dough ball until it is approximately 8 inches in diameter. Fill on one half of the calzone, starting with the cheese, then sauce and finally the chicken filling

Step 7: Fold the dough over and pinch the calzone closed

Step 8: Bake in a 450-degree oven until golden brown all the way around. In my oven, that meant 13 minutes. All ovens are different so keep your eye on it

Step 9: Remove and let sit for 5 minutes and serve with marinara or pizza sauce on the side
