Monday last day to vote in Pines election

Property owners presented with quiet race, full ballot

By Morgan Pilz
Staff Writer

(Aug 1, 2019) Ocean Pines property owners who have yet to vote have until 5 p.m. on Monday to cast ballots in the 2019 Board of Directors election.

Ballots were mailed in July and can be returned either by mail or dropped off at the ballot box inside the Ocean Pines Police Station on 239 Ocean Parkway.

"We encourage people to vote," Elections Committee Chairman Steve Habeger said. "We have received several trays of envelopes [so far]. Please don't wait."

Last year, 7,614 ballots were mailed and 3,119 were counted, a return rate of about 41 percent. Eighty ballots were rejected, with the major-

(Aug. 1, 2019) Ocean Pines continues to see a positive financial results this fiscal year, as the association is $253,874 ahead of budget for the first two months of the year, with revenues $67,234 higher than budgeted and expenses $15,632 over budget, according to General Manager John Viola.

In the monthly treasurer's report released earlier last week, Viola said the association had beaten the budget by $51,602 during the second month of the fiscal year. For the year-to-date fund variances, revenues exceeded budget by $242,575 and total expenses were under by $11,299.

"Reviewing numbers of this nature after two months does give me confidence that we are moving in the right direction for the year," Viola said. "In everything we do, we do track to budget. Based upon the estimates and forecasting of spending for the reserves and for the individual budgets of my department heads in our review, I believe we are also moving in the right direction for the rest of the year."

Several amenities and departments performed better than budgeted numbers by $51,602.

These departments include the Recreation and Parks Department at $20,211, Yacht Club at $34,381, Beach Club at $7,440, Beach parking at $2,940, Marinas at $12,948, the General Manager's Office at $3,354, Public Works at $8,643 and Finance at $2,448

Berlin parking study stalls for lack of cash

First phase complete, next round must wait

(Aug. 1, 2019) The second phase of a study looking into Berlin's parking has apparently been moved to the back burner for the time being as town officials cite financial concerns.

"We don't have money in the budget to complete the second phase of the study, and there's not funding in the budget to pursue a parking solution that involves any kind of investment or any kind of expense," Berlin's

Brian Lavery

Town Administrator Laura Allen said last month.

Berlin's Town Council in October 2018 approved a roughly $24,480 budget for the consulting firm, Sabra and Associates, of Columbia, Maryland, to conduct the parking study.

"So there was a lot of discussion, or I guess debate, around the need for additional parking," Allen said. "It was some people saying that

The members of the Ocean Pines Environment and Natural Assets Advisory Committee prepare to discuss a variety of topics during its monthly meeting on Wednesday, July 24.

Committee discusses several topics

By Morgan Pilz
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) With topics ranging from adding crosswalks to busy intersections to counting the number of geese this year, the Ocean Pines Environment and Natural Assets Committee had several topics to cover during its monthly meeting last Wednesday.

Committee Chairman Tom Janasek discussed several projects for the future, including plans for Bay Day in September, following the original event's cancellation in May because of poor weather.

"We're having meetings with Maryland Coastal Bays to [begin] outsourcing projects for us to do," Janasek said.

The committee also has been working with Maryland Coastal Bays Program to secure a Department of Natural Resources grant. The committee is waiting for the program to hire a hydro engineer to perform corrective actions for draining projects in the future while collaborating with association President Doug Parks and Operations Manager Colby Phillips.

Janasek also suggested painting utility boxes in the community, similar to what has been done in Ocean City courtesy of the Art League.

"In Ocean City, you see utility boxes all over Coastal Highway with paintings all over them," Janasek said. "They have a couple groups of people that go around and paint the utility boxes, beach scenes and different murals.

"I don't know how we can start this program, but I'd like to look for volunteers in Ocean Pines," he continued. "We have a ton of artistic people in the Pines."

There are at least three utility boxes in each section of Ocean Pines, with 40 sections total. The committee would need the approval of the board and the companies that own the utility boxes before beginning this project.

The committee also discussed the number of geese in the community. Numbers have gone down to 100, as many hatchlings have matured, and adult geese are no longer molting and have begun to fly. Currently, there are around 50-60 geese in the north gate area. There were also reports of 100 geese in the south gate area.

On June 19, surveyors estimated there were around 200 geese combined. Now, there might be as few as 50 throughout the area as most prepare to migrate. This number was deemed manageable by the committee.

"It's very clean and there's a lot of kids fishing," Janasek said.

The committee also wants to make sure residents know not to feed the geese, not only because it will make them reluctant to leave, but it could even cause malnutrition.

Lack of nutrition can cause a deformity called angel wings, which makes it impossible for the bird to fly and causes permanent disfigurement.

"Bread is not nutritional," board member Sharon Santacrose said. "They need nutrition such as whole grains and corn and grass. Geese are vegetarians."

Janasek also plans to meet with Police Chief David Massey to discuss the possibility of installing crosswalks and signs near Manklin Park and the Food Lion shopping center.

The committee is also speaking with Phillips about spraying for phragmites, an invasive plant species, which affects breeding ground and inhibits natural growth. Alternatively, the phragmites also prevent shoreline from eroding.

"There's got to be a balance in there somewhere," committee member Paul Rogers said. "So what we need to do is earmark those areas where there is reproduction of any species. That's what we need to attack."

Finally, the environment committee discussed replacing and repairing run-down mailboxes. Phillips had requested money from the budget to be allocated for next year to fix all the mailbox stands and refresh the concrete and add a roof over the mailboxes with lights.

OP second annual National Night Out, Aug. 6

By Morgan Pilz
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) The Ocean Pines Police Department will focus on crime prevention and community partnerships during its second annual National Night Out event next Tuesday, Aug. 6, from 5-7 p.m. at White Horse Park on 235 Ocean Parkway.

An estimated 30 groups plan to attend the free block party to greet the public, hand out information, offer giveaways, and provide games and activities for children.

The Ocean Pines Police Department will conduct a drone demonstration, give away children's bicycles through a raffle, and offer a dunking tank that will include as its victims Police Chief David Massey and Maryland Delegate Wayne Hartman. Additionally, the Ocean Pines Fire Department will bring a fire truck and a command vehicle.

"Anybody who has a gripe against the police can [try and] hit me," Massey said.

The event is designed increase public awareness of preventing crime and drug abuse, generate support for local anti-crime efforts, and strengthen neighborhood spirit and police-community partnerships.

"We're one of the safest communities in Maryland per capita and it's important that we keep our citizens involved with the police department to keep the crime rate down," Massey said.

Ocean Pines Police, with state and county law enforcement, celebrate the first National Night Out event in Ocean Pines, last year.

Massey determined Ocean Pines' level of safety as compared to other communities based on results from a security company that calculates the number of criminal incidents versus an area's population.

This being said, Massey believes it is important to stay involved with the community to keep those crime rates down.

"Sometimes when you do such a good job as far as keeping crime rates down, people get disinterested," Massey said. "The citizens are our best resources for catching criminals. They see things and report things and we have a very interactive community that will call us, so it's important we keep interest in the community."

Low crime rates can also lead to better housing values.

"Keeping the crime rate down is really good for Realtors and property values too," Massey said. "We have a lot of people who relocate from the large cities ... trying to escape crime. If they see a low crime rate in Ocean Pines, then they're more apt to buy here and move here, which keeps the property values up."

Children's activities planned for the event include a Skee-Ball game from Berlin First Baptist Church, crafts stations courtesy of the Girl Scouts and Worcester Youth and Family Counseling Services, glitter braids by the United Way, a kids' art activity station from the Worcester County Arts Council, and a pop-up bicycle park hosted by the Eastern Shore chapter of the International Mountain Biking Association.

Berlin Police Department to host National Night Out, Tues.

By Rachel Ravina
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) Community members of all ages can anticipate an evening of food, games and music with the Berlin Police Department during National Night Out next Tuesday.

"This is not a kids' event, and it's far from it, it's a family-fun event," said Chief Arnold Downing.

Members of the Berlin Police Department will join hundreds of officers nationwide who using the occasion to focus on fostering the relationships between law enforcement and the public.

Berlin's National Night Out will take place from 4-7 p.m. on Tuesday at Dr. William Henry Park on Flower Street in Berlin.

Ofc. Claude Holland, of the Berlin Police Department, said the event took roughly six months to organize. He's been leading the charge for the past 15 years, and said "it gets bigger and better each" time.

"We're really there to let them know that we care about everyone," Holland said.

He also stressed the importance of putting a face to the uniform so residents "realize that we're not the bad guys." We're people just like them."

Nationally, the event has sponsors such as Pepsi, Herr's and The Home Depot, Holland said. Locally, several area churches, the Berlin Park Commission and Worcester Youth and Family Counseling Services will have stations during the event.

Mary Bohlen, Berlin's administrative services director, said the town's parks commission will offer participants a craft activity that will allow them to make a butterfly or a crab. There will also be a purple tablecloth present to show support for Worcester Goes Purple, a county-wide movement, to prevent substance abuse.

Additionally, Tiffany Scott, youth programs coordinator, said Worcester Youth and Family Counseling Services would offer relay race-type games that will involve residents as well as members of the police department.

Downing said the police department is giving away four bicycles.

Downing added upwards of 3,000 people reportedly attended the event in the past, but the average crowd is about 1,000.

“They’ll come, eat, go ahead and work with The Home Depot booth, and make a bird house, and go ahead and leave,” Downing said.

Berlin has participated in National Night Out for nearly 20 years. It stems from a government initiative promoted by former Maryland Lt. Gov. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, who served from 1995-2003. Townsend provided grant funding to agencies to hold these events. However, Downing said once she was replaced as lieutenant governor, the police department stopped receiving funding for the event.

However, Downing realized that it didn’t take much to bring the community together. The department was able to work with other groups to help bring in food and entertainment.

“After that, without any money, we actually started having better programs,” Downing said.

With or without money, however, the results have been positive and the community has embraced the effort, Downing said.

“I remember times where it wasn’t like that, and again we didn’t have cooperation of the people, we had to go ahead and work a lot harder at our jobs because we weren’t getting cooperation,” he said.

But now, the connection is solid, Downing said. “I’ve been here 28 years, so I think we’re at an apex. I think we’re at a high point.”

Dunking booth and activities for children during gathering will also operate several game stations, and White Horse Park features an all-new playground with a zipline, jungle gym, and multiple merry-go-rounds and swing sets.

For adults and children, the Kiwanis will hand out free hotdogs and drinks, Mister Softee will provide free ice cream, and the Pinesteppers will present a square-dancing demonstration. Many other local nonprofits and organizations plan to distribute information and offer raffle and door prizes such as back-to-school supplies and Jolly Roger Amusement Park passes.

There will also be information for seniors and veterans from the Ocean Pines Chamber of Commerce, Choptank Electric Cooperative, Republic Services, Diakonia, Worcester County Health Department, Atlantic General Hospital, Worcester Goes Purple, Hope4Recov-ery, Cricket Center, Worcester County Warriors Against Opiate Addiction, Faith Baptist Church, Women’s Club of Ocean Pines, Ocean Pines Neighborhood Watch and the Worcester County States Attorney’s Office.

National Night Out is sponsored by the National Association of Town Watch and this year will take place in more than 16,790 communities in the United States and Canada, as well as at military bases throughout the world. In total, more than 38.6 million people are expected to participate in “America’s Night Out Against Crime.”

This year will mark the second time Ocean Pines has had a National Night Out.

“Last year’s event was outstanding,” Massey said. “You don’t know when you first start an event what kind of reception you will get, but we had a lot of people. I think we’ll have even more this year.”

Just peachy: Fruit star of show during Berlin festival

By Rachel Ravina
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) Berlin's days of the peach and prosperity will be celebrated Saturday, when the town stages its 11th annual Peach Festival from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the lawn of the Calvin B. Taylor House Museum.

The event recalls the glory years of the Harrison peach orchards, which for a time were a global force in the market and put Berlin on the map.

"It's like a little small town fair almost and they very rarely have them anymore that are this successful," said Peach Committee member Jan Quick. "For whatever reason, this one flies."

While the Berlin Peach Festival has been around for more than a decade, the inspiration behind the day goes back much further.

"The peach festival started to honor the heritage of the Harrison's peach orchards that were so popular at the turn of the century," Quick said.

However, Melissa Reid, president of the museum's Board of Directors, added the J.G. Harrison & Son Nursery spanned much further than just the town limits of Berlin.

She also said that the festival helps to pay homage to the local family and their contributions of fruits, ornamental trees and orchards.

"When we were thinking about outreach in our community, we realized there was a great opportunity to pull in this area is so rich in its agricultural history, and to have that ... specific connection with the largest mail order nursery in the world," Reid said.

Several organizations will provide food and beverages that incorporate peaches including tea, salsa and pie, although Quick said the fresh peaches are a fan favorite.

"We have fresh peaches, ... which is our first commodity, and mostly what a lot of people come for," Quick said.

Peach dumplings, ice cream and slushes also will be available, Reid said.

"We try as best we can to have to have the food have some type of connection to peaches," she said.

Additionally, crab cakes and items from the Street Kitchen food truck in Berlin would also be on the premises.

Reid also said festival visitors will be able to buy items from 45 vendors that produce only handmade goods.

Children and adults can compete in pie-eating contests, and culinary masters can participate in a pie-baking contests.

Museum Curator Susan Taylor said the baking contest would be capped at 12 contestants, who have until Friday, Aug. 2 to register and can call the museum at 410-641-1019 to do so.

Reid said contestants should drop of their pies by 10 a.m. and bring a copy of the recipe.

Laura Stearns, of the Atlantic Hotel, Dana Gottloebe, of On What Grounds and Ruth Koontz, of Main Street Deli, will judge the competition. Prizes will be awarded to the first, second and third place pies.

"It's a good opportunity to showcase your baking abilities," Taylor said.

‘Runaway Bride’ 20th anniv. brings celebration to Berlin

By Rachel Ravina
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) It's the 20th anniversary of the romantic comedy, "Runaway Bride," and Berlin has planned a month-long celebration for it.

It's the first time festivities have been planned to recognize the 1999 movie that was filmed in town, said Ivy Wells, Berlin's economic and community development director.

In the film, Richard Gere plays a journalist who tracks down a bride, Julia Roberts, who became notorious for leaving her grooms at the altar. The film is set in the town of "Hale," a reference to the Hale Harrison Brilliant Peach grown by the Harrison Brothers orchards and nurseries from the turn of the century to the 1960s.

Wells said filming in town "put us in the national spotlight," and people often come to see the place where Roberts, Gere and Joan Cusack walked the same streets.

"It's your quintessential small town family atmosphere," she said.

While Wells said there is a self-guided walking tour, visitors were the inspiration to go a bit bigger for the anniversary.

"It's actually a response to what the people who visit the town want," she said.

Wells also tested the waters to gauge public interest about the month-long idea with a post on the Town of Berlin's Facebook page on July 18. It received 478 reactions, 69 comments and 136 shares as of Tuesday morning.

Wells added there are multiple ways people can celebrate the film.

Residents and visitors can get their photo with cardboard cutouts of Roberts and Gere at a photo station at the Berlin Visitors Center on 14 S. Main St. from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Wells also said the shops featured in the movie would have posters, and the lamp posts will be decorated with "wedding bows to make it look like you're walking down the aisle when you drive into town."

Additionally, she said there's a free guided walking tour at 4 p.m. on Mondays, as well as a 25-question movie trivia game where guests with 10 correct answers would be eligible for a free one-night stay at the Atlantic Hotel on Main Street in downtown Berlin. Completed trivia papers should be submitted to a collection box in the welcome center's vestibule.

The event will culminate with the showing of Runaway Bride at 8:30 p.m. at the intersection of Jefferson and Main streets. Berlin's Arts and Entertainment Committee is hosting the event.

Wells said Jefferson Street would be closed for the movie.

Robin Tomaselli, vice president of Berlin's Arts and Entertainment Committee, which is hosting the event, said guests could participate in a wedding-themed costume contest with prizes awarded to the best-dressed man, woman and child. A parade on Jefferson Street is also planned.

"It's a good way to celebrate the movie, to celebrate the history of Berlin ... and it should be a fun free event for people of all ages," Tomaselli said.

Tomaselli also said moviegoers will sit in style with cafe table and chairs. The cost will be $40, and will include light fare, a beverage and a piece of wedding cake., with profits going to the Berlin Arts and Entertainment Committee.

Wells added the Atlantic Hotel would also have a dinner special with a luau theme.

With the month-long shindig the town is throwing, Wells said she hopes people appreciate how the movie's location affected the town.

Berlin Little League teams pursue reg. titles

By Morgan Pilz
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) Two Berlin Little League All-Star teams remain in contention for regional titles as they begin tournament play this weekend.

8-10 League:

The 8-10 All-Star team hopes to continue its winning streak as the group prepares to play New Jersey on Sunday at 4 p.m. in Cranston, Rhode Island, in the opening round of the regional tournament.

“They are anxious and ready to play baseball,” Coach Ron Calloway said of his undefeated, 9-0, squad. “They are really looking forward to it and I think they will do well.”

During the regional tournament, each team will be guaranteed four games before vying for the Mid-Atlantic championship.

“It’s going to be a lot of fun,” Calloway said. “They’re really excited to go. This is a unique experience ... a lot of them haven’t been through this before. As they go from districts to state and now regionals, I think they know they’re representing Maryland and that a lot of people are behind them. They’re up to the task.”

After Sunday’s game, the Berlin team will play a squad from Pennsylvania on Monday at 11 a.m.

The boys will have a short break on Tuesday, then face a team from New York on Wednesday at 11 a.m.

The last guaranteed game for regionals will take place on Thursday, when Berlin will battle a team from Delaware at 5 p.m.

The 8-10 district and state championship team has a GoFundMe page to help raise funds needed for travel, hotel and food expenses during the tournament.

“We’re very close to our goal, but we could always use more donations,” Calloway said. “I also want to mention the dedication and sacrifice of the parents ... they have to call out of work and travel. They have been so dedicated to the team.”

Juniors League:

The undefeated 12-14 Junior League team (9-0) will play its first game of the regional tournament in Freehold, New Jersey, on Thursday, against a squad from Rhode Island at 10 a.m.

“These boys are ready to go and represent Maryland and Berlin,” Coach Kris Mandley said of his district and state championship squad. “We want to thank all for the love and support everyone had shown these boys and all the teams that represented Berlin.”

If the Berlin team wins on Thursday, the next game will be against a squad representing New York at 4 p.m., Friday.

If the boys lose, their next game will be against the winner of the Delaware vs. Pennsylvania game, at 1 p.m., Friday.

The Berlin squad will play again Saturday and Sunday if it wins at least one of the first two games.

"I think they are capable of winning it all," Mandley said.

If the Berlin team wins four games in a row, the boys will earn a break on Monday. If not, the Berlin All Stars must play Monday. The championship game will take place on Tuesday.

Intermediate:

The Berlin Intermediate team, comprised of boys ages 11-13, played a squad from New Jersey twice on Wednesday, July 24, during the regional tournament in Dix Hills, New York.

Berlin won the first match, 4-1, but lost the second, which was for the regional title, 13-3.

"It was a great season and the boys did very well," Coach Barb Kohut said. "They just ran out of gas, unfortunately."

They kicked off the tournament Friday, July 19, with a 14-6 victory over New Hampshire. The next day, the Berlin group topped a team from Pennsylvania, 11-8.

The Berlin squad suffered its first loss on Sunday, July 21, falling New Jersey, 6-3. However, the boys bounced back with a victory on Monday, trouncing their New York opponent, 24-6, to advance to Wednesday's competition.

"It was a great season and a lot of memories were made," Kohut said. "The team worked their hearts out all season and that showed.

"It takes a lot of dedication, talent and commitment to win a district and state title," Kohut added. "The fact that they are second in the eastern region is something to applaud, not put their heads down. I was just happy to be along for the ride. It was one I'll never forget."

Book signings for Cathell's 'Pete the Greek'

By Elizabeth Bonin
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) From selling Christmas trees, to buying and selling successful restaurants and night clubs, to creating Florida's first "medical mall" to founding the White Marlin Open, Pete Boinis has accomplished enough for several lifetimes.

His friend and attorney and former judge, Dale Cathell, a local author who has published four other books on local notables and history, was so impressed that he decided to write about Boinis' life story in "Pete the Greek."

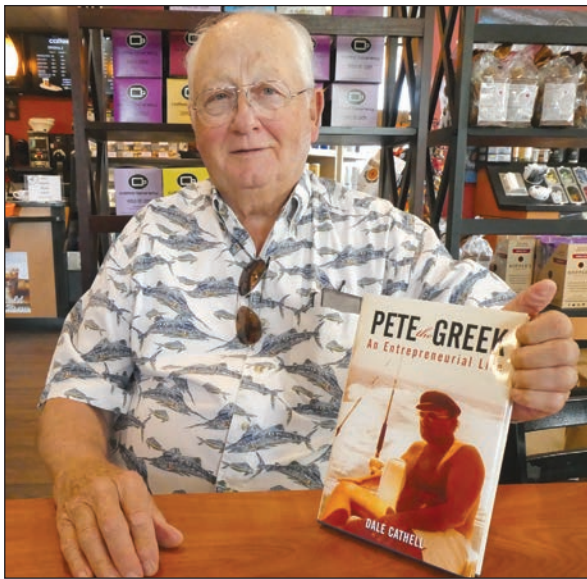

Cathell will hold a book signing on Wednesday, Aug. 7 at the White Marlin Club at 5:30 p.m. He will hold another on Thursday, Aug. 8 at the Full Moon Saloon at 5 p.m. Boinis plans to attend both events.

The 208-page book will be for sale at both events at a discount price for $30. Normally $34.95, books will also be available at the Hallmark store at the Marlin Mall, the Greyhound bookstore in Berlin, Amazon and, in the future, Barnes & Noble. It can also be purchased on Kindle.

"His biggest fame was as a fisherman," Cathell said. "But I wanted to tell his life story, and there was a lot more to his life story than fishing."

Boinis' father, John, came through Ellis Island from Greece. He almost didn't make it over – John's father forgot to meet him at Ellis Island and John was almost sent back to Greece. After a three days, Boinis' grandfather picked up John, and he eventually met Boinis' mother, Evelyn. The couple had four children.

Boinis played football for the University of Maryland and says he would have played professionally if he hadn't suffered an injury at the start of his senior year. After graduation, he sold Christmas trees on the street corners of Washington, D.C. Then a fellow Maryland alum connected Boinis with the Xerox corporation.

"Out of 60 applicants, it wasn't because I was the best, it was because I knew somebody that was very powerful," Boinis said. "They got me this job and I sold the first five machines in history to the Xerox corporation. I made a big commission, bought a Cadillac car and put a Xerox on my license tag."

In the middle of the book, Cathell details all the successful restaurants, bars and nightclubs Boinis opened. Some include The Ship's Café, the first Carousel night club, the Galley and Hunka Munka, all in Ocean City. He also opened businesses in D.C. and south Florida.

Cathell said that when Boinis wanted to open Bastille, a night club in Baltimore, he didn't have the money to fund the project. To get the money, Boinis asked two friends, Ulysses G. Auger, known as "Blackie," and Nick Antonelli to contribute half a million dollars. They agreed.

"He had guts," Cathell said. "He was willing to go the extra step."

In addition to his night life ventures, Boinis opened a medical center in Florida.

"I got the idea for a medical mall – get all the doctors in one place rather than go all over town," Boinis said.

Instead of getting referred to one medical office to another, Boinis is happy that the medical center can be as simple as one stop. The center has everything from cancer treatment, imaging centers, internal medicine doctors and OBGYNs.

According to Cathell, Boinis created at least 1,390 jobs and contributed $200 million to the U.S. economy. His business ventures brought in great wealth and Cathell praises Boinis for his generosity with that wealth. Boinis joined Dave Thomas, the founder of Wendy's, to help the Children's Home Society, an orphanage in Florida.

According to Cathell, Boinis asked the orphanage to have the children write Christmas wish list letters to Boinis.

Health dept. offers free camp for pre-teen girls

By Rachel Ravina
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) Girls entering sixth and seventh grade looking to learn about life skills and build self-confidence are eligible to participate in a free camp next month at the Worcester County Health Department.

The Just for Girls program will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the facility on 6040 Public Landing Road in Snow Hill.

Travis Brown

The program aims to teach participants ways to learn self-esteem and decision-making. Abstinence education is also part of the program.

"I mean sixth and seventh grade for anyone can be really tough," said Travis Brown, public information officer for the Worcester County Health Department.

Dawn Richardson, Just for Girls organizer, said 15 to 20 people typically attend the summer program.

Lynn Suarezapecheche, alcohol and other drugs prevention supervisor for Worcester County Health Department, said she hopes the camp has a positive effect on the girls' lives.

"The Just for Girls summer program will help girls build up the resources in themselves to feel confident entering the new school year," she said. "The program will support the girls in developing a strong and healthy self-image which has a positive effect on how they act and feel."

Brown agreed. "It's really a wide umbrella," he said. "It's about just good life choices in general and positive influences and again building self-confidence."

While the girls are learning, Brown emphasized they will still have fun.

"It's a really great time," Brown said. "It's a good chance for the girls to meet some of their peers and network and connect and everything."

Makya Purnell, 25, of Salisbury, a former Just For Girls participant, still holds a piece of the program close to her heart.

D. Richardson

She recalled counting the days until she was able to attend the camp. It was something she said she looked forward to.

"I think for a lot of us growing up we anticipated being of age to be able to participate in Just for Girls because we had seen all the upper classmen in it," Purnell said.

Purnell, a Snow Hill native, attended the Just for Girls programs during the summers of 2005-07. She said she appreciated the opportunity to have someone like Richardson to confide in.

"That is a huge deal for a little girl that is going through so many changes," she said.

Additionally, being taught abstinence education helped her stay true to Purnell's values in high school.

"In the back of my mind, I was still very much a product of Just for Girls," she said.

Purnell said self-worth was the most important skill she learned while at Just for Girls.

"In terms of self-worth, I had that going into high school, so it was very hard for anybody to really get over on me because of that upbringing or those lessons learned there," Purnell said.

Those lessons followed her as she matured. Purnell also stressed the importance of "knowing your worth" in professional and friendship situations, and it didn't just apply in romantic relationships.

Purnell graduated in 2016 with honors from Towson University. She's since worked for a nonprofit, the state's department of housing and is now moving into a new role at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore to help stop violence against women. She added she hopes to pay it forward by continuing to help women.

She also started Oshun's Garden, a community service organization in 2018 that "celebrates black women," which also awarded a college scholarship to a Snow Hill teen.

Summer Windmyer, a public affairs specialist for the Worcester County Health Department, hopes these girls pursue their loftiest goals.

"They focus ... on their goals and their dreams and their aspirations," Windmyer said. That will help, she said, when girls are thrown into circumstances such as being bullied or pressured.

For more information or to register for the camp, call the Worcester County Health Department at 410-632-1100.

it's critical and other folks saying that we've got adequate parking."
Brian Laverty, project manager and senior transportation manager, was charged with assessing the availability of parking.

Laverty conducted field observations and gathered data on Nov. 23, Nov. 24 and Dec. 13. He added there are roughly 408 parking spots in 11 different lots and about 146 street parking spaces in downtown Berlin.
Some lots are private but made available to the public, like the large lot off of Main Street, while other lots are strictly public.

Additionally, he spoke with several community members, as well as council members and business owners.
Laverty was directed to assess the parking situation in Berlin by taking "a snapshot as it is right now."

Allen expressed the concern of area business owners or employees parking in "high trafficked areas" for long periods of time.

"I think we have a parking management problem," Allen said.
When asked if Berlin had a parking problem, Laverty responded, "Oh, there definitely is. There definitely is a parking crunch at certain times."

However, Laverty also called the current environment in Berlin "pretty unique" because of the role weather plays when it comes to the traffic in the area.

"There are probably other places like that around the country," Laverty said.

"Small towns with some quaint appeal to them ... that have a pleasant interesting downtown with good shopping and restaurants that are relatively near to a beach community that probably have that same pattern, but it still makes it pretty unique compared to almost any other place that I've done a parking study," he added.

Moreover, Laverty said the volume in the off-season surprised him.

"The unusual pattern of things and the fact that the town has one high season in the summer, and they have a secondary high season into the late fall into December just because the atmosphere in the downtown and the shopping are such that they draw people in, even when it's not beach season at all," Laverty said.

He also outlined several parking recommendations for Berlin, including curbside management, pricing and enforcement and shared use agreements.

However, because these are recommendations only, Laverty stressed town officials are not obligated to implement them.

Among his suggestions were having a central location for Uber and Lyft pick-up and drop-offs.

He also proposed defining areas for loading zones and having the town look into enforcing the two-hour spots, which are currently free.

Town officials previously discussed the possibility of including a parking garage. Laverty asked others during his interviewing process and received mixed opinions.

"Every stakeholder [had] varying opinions on a parking garage," Laverty said.

He was also unclear of the specifics surrounding any future plans for the garage.

While funds weren't available for the fiscal year 2020, Allen said the mayor and council would discuss the possibility of progressing with the second phase of the study if funding was available.

Diakonia's new leader hopes to help people

By Rachel Ravina
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) Belinda “Bee” Miller, the new executive director of Diakonia Inc., found herself back in familiar territory.

Miller, 52, first had the leadership job from 1995-2003. After some time out of state, she returned to Worcester County in mid-June to work for the nonprofit.

Miller was born in Washington, D.C. and raised in a farmhouse in Calvert County, Maryland. She then attended Salisbury University, and graduated in 1989 with a degree in social work.

However, the inspiration to enter the field came from her mother, Naomi Catety, who is deaf.

“She always helped people whether they could talk to her or not,” Miller said. “So I wanted to do that too. I wanted to be able to help people.”

While in college, she worked as a head counselor at Deaf Independent Living Associates in Salisbury, where she taught a sign language class and helped interpret. She also volunteered at Diakonia during her time at Salisbury University.

Miller attended Ocean City Mennonite Church, which used to be on Route 50, because it had a deaf ministry.

“I’d never heard of Mennonites before. I didn’t even know what they were, but what I found from the Mennonite people or whatever, they like to serve people, they like to take care of people,” Miller said.

That eventually led her to meet her husband, Bob, at the church. They got married, had two children in the area before moving to Ohio.

However, it was a notice of a sign language interpreting job in the Worcester County Public Schools system that piqued her interest of returning home.

“This is where our love story started and it’s where we started our home with our kids, so we always wanted to come back,” Miller said.

Diakonia’s former Executive Director Claudia Nagle, resigned in early 2019. The reason for her departure is unclear.

However, Miller learned about the vacant role at the nonprofit and felt encouraged to apply.

“I just sent my cover letter, and my resume in, and did a lot of praying over it,”

Belinda Miller

Miller said.

Since transitioning back into her leadership role, Miller said she hit the ground running.

“I definitely feel like a merry-go-round that’s going and I jumped on,” said

Miller, who added that the transition has been smooth nevertheless.

“Diakonia had a little bit of a foundation there, so it got built up with the things that I did, and then the director after me definitely grew it even more, so there’s definitely a lot more programs,” Miller said. During her time at the organization in West Ocean City, there were 10 people on staff. It has since grown with 25 staff members, and nearly 100 volunteers.

“It’s a very good team here with the staff, and I want them to be proud of what they’re doing,” Miller said.

She added that staff members and volunteers helped 700 people last year through the many programs Diakonia provides, including a shelter, food pantry and veterans program.

“It basically started as a ministry and has become a social service agency ... that can cover the multiple needs that our community has,” she said.

However, she said it’s all about helping those in need.

“That’s our biggest thing: treating people with dignity and respect,” Miller said.

Miller also stressed that the organization needs volunteers, and people interested in helping can contact the facility at 410-213-0923.

“Everybody has something to give, I feel like,” Miller said. “There’s either time or talent and we need them both.”

The difference between the third-place finisher, who was elected, and the fourth-place finisher, who was not, was 23 votes.

“I ask all voters to read and follow the voting instruction on the back page of the mailer that accompanied the ballot,” he said. “Voting requires two actions to be accomplished: First, mark the ballot so that the machine can read it properly. Second, get the ballot in on time, either by mail or in the drop box.”

Voters should also request a replacement ballot early in case their original ballot was misplaced, damaged, aged, or incorrectly marked, especially if they do not live in Ocean Pines year-round.

“People can request a ballot by calling the phone line or sending an email to elections@ocean-pines.org,” Habeger said. “Locals can pick up replacement ballots at the admin building [fairly] late into the process. The day before the deadline, there’s always somebody from Pennsylvania or Baltimore who will call for a replacement ballot and it’s impossible to get them one in time. If you’re remote, plan ahead.”

Habeger reaffirmed that the 5 p.m. voting deadline next Monday is absolute.

Ballots need to either be in the box in the admin building or received in the Berlin, not Ocean Pines, post office by 5 p.m. Habeger said.

Voters this year may choose up to seven candidates.

Running this year are Environment Committee Chairman Tom Janasek, Budget and Finance Com-

Votes will be publicly counted and vote totals announced Friday, Aug. 9. Counting is scheduled to start at 9 a.m. in the East Room of the Ocean Pines Community Center on 235 Ocean Parkway.

strong performance of Rec and Parks, and the Yacht Club and Beach Club,” Viola said. “Overall, at this point, obviously we’re tracking favorable to budget and we are addressing many initiatives.”

Other departments missed the budget by $55,310. The Aquatics Department expenses exceeded the budget by $20,330, Public Relations by $16,864, Police by $3,449, General Manager’s Office by $1,195 and golf operations were over by $13,472.

The reserve forecast for the end of the 2019 fiscal year was $8.8 million, including $5.2 million in replacement reserves, $2.5 million in bulkheads and $1.1 million in roads. At the end of June, the total was forecasted for $11.1 million, including $6.7 million in replacement reserves, $3 million for bulkhead replacement and $1.4 million in roads. As of June 30, the association had about $16.1 million in cash overall, Viola said.

Fiscal year 2019, which closed on April 30, finished roughly $120,000 ahead of budgeted numbers, despite the early signs of being unfavorable.

Final audited figures will be released during the Ocean Pines Annual Meeting, Saturday, Aug. 10.

Northern Worcester County farmer's markets

By Morgan Pilz
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) Northern Worcester County farmer's markets offer a wide variety of locally-grown fruits and vegetables, as well as other home-made goods multiple times a week.

Berlin:
The Berlin Farmer's Market runs Sundays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Pitts Street, next to Burley Inn Tavern.

"We're a producers-only market," said Ivy Wells, director of economic and community development for the Town of Berlin. "Our tagline is 'real farmers, real farmers' market.' You get to meet the actual farmers who are there. They are the ones who work at the farm and grow the food."

Several local restaurants, including the Shark on the Harbor in West Ocean City and Blacksmith in Berlin, uses fresh produce from the farms that sell at the market for its ingredients, Wells said.

In addition to vendors, a band plays music while guests shop. Pets are also welcome to the market.

The Berlin market will be open weekly until the last Sunday in September.

"We have a really good community here," said Berlin resident Ryan Ellis, who sells scones every Sunday. "There's music and things for kids to do."

"I really like the location and assortment of vendors," Pittsville resident and produce vendor Stephanie Barfield said. "You can get pretty much anything right here on this block and I really like all the customers. We really love this market for its music, assortment of vendors ... it's just a great place to be."

Although the market is restricted to the size of the street, there are roughly 20 vendors on site at any given time, however, new vendors are still welcome.

"It's a quality market ... our market is based on the quality of the products, not on the number of vendors available," Wells said.

Some of the vendors in the Berlin market also participate in the Ocean Pines market on Saturdays.

For more information on how to become a vendor, contact Wells at IWells@berlinmd.gov.

Ocean Pines:
The largest farmer's market in the northern Worcester area is located in Ocean Pines. It had been held on Saturdays only year-round since 2012 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. until last year, when the market also began taking place on Wednesdays from 4-7 p.m.

Now, the Wednesday market will take place from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. as well.

"There's something special happening all the time," Ocean Pines Market Manager David Bean said. "There's great food, great produce [and] vendors. We have fantastic artisans who come from all over the region to participate in this market."

Held in the tree-shrouded White Horse Park, the market includes dozens of vendors who provide items ranging from locally-grown produce to deli meats, seafood, clothing, jewelry, homemade soaps and lotions, woodwork, carpets and kitchen appliances.

There is even a small petting zoo featuring alpacas.

On Saturdays, shoppers can also enjoy live music from local performers. Shoppers are even encouraged to bring their pets for walks throughout the market.

When the market began over eight years ago, there were only six vendors huddled inside the Memorial Pavilion. Now, during the busy summer season, the market could see anywhere up to 85 vendors.

"We're a community-minded market, we have a Kiddie's Corner and we invite other organizations to participate in the market," Bean said. "We're dog-friendly and you can come out and see the animals. There's a lot going on."

The Wednesday morning market is new to Ocean Pines this year and has received praise from local residents.

"The Wednesday market has grown this year," Bean said. "We've seen an increase in foot traffic, vendor participation and we're happy with where it's at for its second year."

Some new activities were also introduced at the Saturday Ocean Pines market, including a mascot named Buzzy the Honey Bee, who wanders around handing out candy to children, teaching them about the importance of bees and showing off dance moves.

There is also a "Kiddie's Corner," which allows children to participate in arts and crafts.

"My farm is family owned and without the farmer's market I could not keep this farm going," said Assistant Market Manager Lenore Brady from Stag Run Farm in Georgetown, Delaware. "The farmer's market is the only way I could be here and I am the newest apple orchard and the third-largest asparagus producer in the

According to Brady, Ocean Pines has some of her most loyal customers. “They come out no matter what the weather is. They come every week and I just love them,” Brady said. “Ocean Pines is a very, very loyal community to us farmers.”

Ocean City:
The Ocean City Farmer’s Market is held on 142nd Street, bayside, in the former Phillips parking lot, on Sundays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Despite being the smallest market in the Northern Worcester County area, the Ocean City gathering has been around the longest. It began 25 years ago and is the only USDA-sanctioned market in Ocean City.

“It was one of the first ones in Worcester County,” Market Manager Paul Wood said. “The market was organized by the Department of Agriculture with Phillips Seafood Company.”
As the market takes place on “days starting with Ts and Ss,” Wood said it has a very loyal customer base, with many coming from the neighborhoods nearby.
“Everything grown here is sold by the vendors themselves and grown on the Eastern Shore,” Wood said. “Nothing is bought, at all. This is truly a producer-only market. We’re all just local farmers from this area, all of us have been here for quite awhile.”

kets, there are several selections of fruits and vegetables to choose from, as well as wine, pottery, flowers and bread. Many of the vendors hail from Maryland, though a few do travel from Delaware.

“This was the first market that we ever did when we started farming and we’ve been [farming] for 26 years,” said Ryan Richards from East View Farm in Roxanna, Delaware. “There’s always business and it’s been good to me for the past 25 years. It’s pretty popular on a normal summer day ... we get a lot of traffic.”
Despite its size, the market can see hundreds of people over the weekend.
The Ocean City market is open on Sundays from May to October, Saturdays from Memorial Day weekend to October and Tuesdays and Thursdays during July and August.

First book signing next Wednesday

“Whatever the kid wanted, from PlayStation to bicycles, they got it,” Cathell said.
Boinis held a Christmas party for more than 200 of those children. He raised money for the orphanage through a celebrity golf tournament. Boinis is also paying for several college students’ tuition. These students have worked for Boinis’ restaurants and could not afford college tuition otherwise.
Boinis attributes his generosity to his mother.
“She never bought a thing for herself, only for her children,” Boinis said.
Cathell said the last fourth of his book is about Boinis’ deep sea fishing success. In 1981, he was named the fourth best big game fisherman in the world by the International Game Fish Association.
The Big Rock Blue Marlin Tournament in Morehead City, North Carolina, gave Pete the idea for starting his own tournament. He wanted to have his own cash prize tournament at his 70-boat marina. Boinis created the White Marlin Open in Ocean City, which he credits as being the largest fishing tournament in the world and one of his most important accomplishments. There are no qualifications to compete, aside from the entry fee.
“That’s what made the tournament successful – everybody could compete in it.”
He enjoys that the tournament is more about luck than skill. The winner catches the biggest marlin, rather than the most.
To Boinis, the book about his life is not personally important.
“It’s about an immigrant that came here and the things you can achieve if you’re a hard-working person,” Boinis said.

nis said.
He finds it important to have honesty and integrity – and to practice them. Boinis is now looking forward to enjoying his retirement at his home in North Carolina.
Cathell hopes to have two more book signings in the fall – one at the Hallmark store at the Marlin Mall and at the Greyhound book store in Berlin. Times and dates are not yet confirmed.

For more information about the book signing, call the Marlin Club at 410-213-1613 and the Full Moon Saloon at 443-664-5317.

Vote to keep board doing what it’s doing

As the final day of balloting in the Ocean Pines election approaches, property owners who have yet to vote might be selecting three members of the board of directors on Monday, but they face only one real decision — how to keep the board on its current course.

Essentially, considering yet another positive monthly financial report, nothing with the way the board has been proceeding needs fixing, and it would be a shame to upset what has turned out to be a well-balanced apple cart.

After years of fighting, controversy, personality clashes and miserable fiscal circumstances, this Ocean Pines Board of Directors seems to have established a path that works.

Obviously, getting to this point wasn’t without its controversies — board resignations and the dismissal of a general manager among them — but the outcome seems to be positive.

That assumes, of course, that a calm, steady and fiscally responsible approach to managing the association is what most people want.

There will always be people who prefer to see things stirred up a bit, or who have a particular gripe they feel has been ignored or mishandled. We’re also not suggesting that the current board is batting 1.000 and has committed no errors in the field.

But the directors’ ability to address issues in a reasonable fashion, even when they disagree, is far superior to the unproductive everyone’s-got-it-wrong-but-me line of thinking that bedeviled the administration of the community’s affairs in the past.

The low-key tone of this year’s contest suggests that Ocean Pines politics are less divisive than they once were, and, even though we aren’t endorsing any candidates in this election, we believe the community will be better off if it stays that way.

Annual flounder tournament this Sat.

(Aug. 1, 2019) The Ocean Pines Chamber of Commerce will host its 12th annual Flounder Fishing Tournament on Saturday, Aug. 3.

Cash prizes will be awarded for the largest flounders caught. The first-place winner will receive $500. The angler that reels in the second-largest flounder will take home $300 and the third-place fish will earn the person who hooks it $100.

There will also be an optional calcutta contest. The cost is $10 to enter.

Ocean Pines staff and bd. members email scam target

(Aug. 1, 2019) Ocean Pines staff members were among the recipients of phony emails claiming to come from General Manager John Viola and Association President Doug Parks, the association reported this week.

One email to a staffer, according to the association, appeared to have come from Viola and said, "I need you to run a quick task, are you free?" Upon replying, the staffer was asked to go to a Target, CVS or Walmart to buy eBay gift cards for a client. The matter was referred to Ocean Pines Police and administration.

Several board members reported receiving similar emails that appeared to have come from Parks.

"In today's world, anybody on the internet can create a fake or false name and claim to be somebody else," Ocean Pines Police Chief David Massey said.

"A quick way to check for scammers is to examine the actual email address of the sender. If it looks strange, it is strange. The next step would be to verify with the real individual that the email sender was a scammer. Never wire money or send money without actual verification of the real person, See REPORT Page 27

Officers recall good Samaritan's help

Mother, baby seen standing on median of Route 50, brought to Berlin barrack

By Rachel Ravina
Staff Writer

(Aug. 1, 2019) A sweltering July day was just the backdrop to a much bigger issue when a stranded mother and her child were brought to the Maryland State Police Berlin Barrack by a good Samaritan.

Brenda Kelly, police communications supervisor for the Berlin barrack, said a woman told police she had seen the mother and a 2-month-old baby girl standing in the median of Route 50 in front of the Walmart on July 21, when temperatures reached a high of 98 degrees.

Kelly said the woman recognized their plight, picked them up and brought them to the station.

"I think she just saw this young girl with a small child," Kelly said. "She didn't know where else to go and this seemed to be the safest place."

Kelly recalled the young mother and child (their identities are being withheld) entering the station visibly upset.

"She had no food for the baby, no diapers, no clothes, nothing," Kelly said.

Brenda Kelly

Sgt. Bob McQueeney

Kelly said apparently there was a disagreement between her and her boyfriend while visiting the area. Kelly added the woman then exited the vehicle, but "he did not come back for her."

She said the Department of Social Services was called because of the nature of the issue, and the boyfriend later came to the station with baby's things.

"She came in here with nothing," Kelly said. "We were getting ready to leave to go get formula and all for the baby when the father agreed to come up here and at least bring that stuff."

Kelly said she tried to help the best she could by swaddling the baby in a blanket she had in her office.

Kelly added the boyfriend had been cited with unrelated charges. She also said the victim's friends and family later came for her and the baby at the barrack.

the barrack.

A brief synopsis of the encounter was posted to Facebook.

State Police Sgt. Bob McQueeney said he was glad he was able to assist the family.

"It was an unfortunate circumstance that brought the baby and her mother to the barracks but ... we're happy we were able to help," McQueeney said.

As for the specifics of the investigation, McQueeney said he couldn't elaborate.

"I'm not able to comment further on it," he said. "It was a sensitive situation."

Residents with water, sewer issues should call Worcester

(Aug. 1, 2019) Ocean Pines residents and homeowners experiencing water and sewer issues were reminded by the community association’s public works department this week that the Worcester County public works department is the agency to contact.

“For anything related to water or sewage, they need to call the county, and they have an emergency number as well,” Public Works Operations Manager Nobie Violante said. Violante said public works receives several calls each week on the subject. “Ocean Pines public works doesn’t handle any water or wastewater – we just take care of our own buildings if we have a problem.”

Karen Hammer, from Worcester County government, said water or sewer operational issues should be directed to the Worcester County Department of Public Works – Water/Wastewater Division on 1000 Shore Lane in Ocean Pines. To contact the department, call 410-641-5251.

“It’ll usually go to someone who will respond in a half hour to an hour after they call the emergency line,” Violante said.

For water and wastewater billing questions, consumers should call the Worcester County Treasurer’s office at 410-632-0686 and select option See OP Page 29 which you have initiated and personally verified,” Massey said.

Viola also recommends never opening suspicious emails without taking precautions.

“I would never ask my staff to make any type of payments in an email like that,” Viola said in a statement. “If anyone receives a suspicious email, we would encourage them to first check the sender’s address, and second to reach out to that person offline to confirm it was them. If there’s any suspicious activity, report it to police immediately.”

Anyone who receives a suspicious email is asked to report it to Ocean Pines Police at 410-641-7747 or to DMassey@oceanpines.org.

Wor. GOLD calls for school supplies

(Aug. 1, 2019) Worcester County GOLD (Giving Other Lives Dignity), a volunteer-based 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, is gearing up for its 20th annual School Supplies for Students Campaign.

In 2018, with the help of sponsors and donors from the local community, GOLD provided backpacks filled with school supplies, along with coupons for free haircuts from the Hair Cuttery, for 498 Worcester County students who live in poverty and low-income circumstances.

The families of all students provided school supplies are referred to GOLD by its community partners: Worcester County Department of Social Services, Worcester County Health Department and Worcester County Board of Education's Student Services Office.

This referral process ensures that all recipients of donated school supplies have been fully vetted for financial need.

GOLD's database offers the ability to ensure that each referred child receives the specific school supplies needed for his/her grade level, which heightens the ability for student's academic success. The database also provides the ability to track data to ensure that duplicate services are not provided to same families served by GOLD.

Despite Worcester County being considered one of the top resort destinations along the East Coast, the Maryland Interagency Council on Homelessness reported in the 2018 annual report that the homeless population in Maryland is still on the rise.

Coinciding with this report, the State Department of Education released that over 40 percent of Worcester County students qualified for free and reduced-price meals. This data becomes more apparent in conjunction with the increased number of referrals submitted by social workers requesting emergency on a daily basis.

State and county data, in addition to the increased number of students being referred to the nonprofit, emboldened Worcester County GOLD's Executive Director, Sandy Sipes.

"We are working to make the 2019 School Supplies for Students Campaign the most successful year that GOLD has ever seen," Sipes said.

Assistance from individuals, organizations, businesses and volunteers is vital to the nonprofit's continued success in its endeavor to provide the necessary tools required for disadvantaged Worcester County students to have the opportunity to be academically successful and blend in with their peers.

Sign up to sponsor children through GOLD's website, or check out the list of school supply donations needed to fill backpacks, at WorcesterGOLD.org or through GOLD's Facebook page at www.Facebook.com/WorcesterGOLD.

Donations can be made to Worcester County GOLD, 299 Commerce Street, Snow Hill, Maryland 21863 or through the website to purchase school supplies. For questions or to volunteer, call 410-677-6830.

Violante said Ocean Pines public works recently changed its nighttime answering machine greeting, directing people with water and sewer problems to call the county. He said Ocean Pines Police also receives several calls each week on the subject.

"People call us and get upset and think we just don't want to address those problems, but it's really something they have to call the county about," Violante said. "They can call Ocean Pines public works if they're having any issues with drainage ditches or potholes. We pretty much deal with anything and everything – other than water and wastewater."

Cuisine

Rockfish served over cauliflower puree

One of the great joys of summer at the beach is sunset over the Assawoman Bay. Granted, it is nothing like a sunset over the Pacific, but there is something alluring about it, nonetheless.

By Paul Suplee,
MBA, CEC, PC-3

Whether it is the bright orange colors striated throughout the clouds, or that occasional purple hue that floods the skies, it always leaves me calm, even on the busiest of evenings. Even in Pittsville at the restaurant, we get our share of beautiful sunsets, but they pale in comparison to anything that happens over water; it's just the dolphin in me.

Last weekend, we catered a private event on the bay at a stunning residence, and as busy as we were, it was nice to place a course on the table, step outside and enjoy the sunset. Even if it was just for a few minutes, and knowing that we had a mountain of dishes to wash by hand (certainly not a favorite task of mine), the sunset was a reset. It always has been for me.

I guess sunset and sunrise have always had special places in my soul. Since I was a kid watching them over the Chesapeake Bay or Shenandoah Mountains, they have always meant a sort of reboot, if you will. Sunrises mean a whole new day is here, and sunsets mean that a good day has past... or that a bad day is close to being over if it isn't already, and tomorrow's a new day.

There is a lot to be said for looking forward to a new day while basking in the present. That is something that most of us can't do all of the time. However, when we can, it's a wonderful feeling.

As a chef, one of the best feelings is when I cook a dish that is in actuality very simple, but knowing that it will please the guest. It's satisfying when I cook something that I'm sure about, as most of us cooks kind of hope that some things work.

This dish is a tried and true classic. It is simple, delicious and uses our ubiquitous resources down here, and that is a wonderful thing, all in itself. Pairing this with a Sancerre and a gorgeous sunset is about as glorious a thing as one can imagine.

Seared Rockfish

serves 4
4 pieces fresh rockfish, skin on
Blend of melted butter and olive oil, as needed

Trimix, as needed
1 pint blistered tomatoes (recipe follows)
1 quart cauliflower puree (recipe follows)
1# Roasted asparagus (recipe follows)

1. Pat the filets dry with a paper towel and season with the trimix on skin and flesh.
2. Heat a saute pan with the oil and butter until very hot but not smoking and carefully add the rockfish filets flesh side down. Sear the presentation side first. I have learned over the years that many people prefer either no skin or skin side down, so you can make the call.
3. Cook for about 3 minutes and turn with a spatula to finish the second side. Unless you have an absolute monster rockfish, it should be done at this point. If not, you can throw it in the oven to finish, so as to not scorch the outside.
4. Remove and let rest for a few minutes while you assemble the plates.
5. Place the puree on the bottom, add the roasted asparagus and then add the tomatoes and rockfish.
6. You can drizzle any butter/oil from the pan over the fish as well, finishing it off with a grilled lemon as a garnish.

Blistered Tomatoes

makes 1 pint

- 1 pint heirloom grape tomatoes
1 Tbsp. EV Olive oil
1 Tbsp. Whole, unsalted butter
Trimix, as needed
1. Heat a saute pan with the butter and oil until very hot but barely not smoking.
 2. Carefully dump the tomatoes in, spreading evenly and season.
 3. Allow to blister for about 45 seconds and then move them around one time.
 4. Cook for another 45 seconds and remove to a bowl or plate until ready to use
 5. You can store these in the refrigerator and heat them up as you need them.

Cauliflower Puree

- makes about 1 1/2 quart*
1/1 head cauliflower, core removed
1 1/2 c. chicken stock
1 1/2 c. heavy cream
Trimix, as needed
1. Cut the cauliflower into small pieces, and place in a lidded sauce pan with the chicken stock and cream.
 2. Bring to a boil, turn down and simmer, covered, for about 30 minutes, or until the cauliflower is completely tender.
 3. Run a stick blender through the pan, or blend the mixture in a Vitamix

- until smooth.
4. Season to taste and set aside until ready to serve.

Roasted Asparagus

- serves 4 people*
1# Fresh asparagus
2 Tbsp. EV Olive oil
Trimix, as needed
1. If the asparagus is thicker than one of those large, grade-school pencils, carefully peel the outside to get rid of some of the fibrous skin.
 2. Toss in the olive oil, season and roast in a 400F oven for about 5-8 minutes, depending on the oven, turning every couple minutes.
 3. Remove once the asparagus is softened but still has a bite to it.

*Trimix

- 2 parts kosher salt
1 part ground black pepper
1 part granulated garlic
1. Combine all ingredients in a bowl until as uniform as possible. Be ready to sneeze.
